DEFENCE PLANS APPROVED

Emperor's Offer to Sell

Addis Ababa, Aug. 23 (AP)—In a last desperate effort to save Ethiopia from war, Emperor Haile Selassie was reported today to have offered to sell to Italy the Province of Ausa in Northeastern Ethiopia, adjoining Eritrea.

The proceeds of the sale, the report added, would be used to banish slavery and to build schools, roads and hospitals in the primitive kingdom. Details of the reported offer were lacking.

Officials close to the Emperor were not sanguine that this move would deter Mussolini from carrying his proposed "Roman conquest" as soon as rifle rainy season is over.

The possession of Ausa which embraces approximately 10,000 square miles would enable Italy to bring closer together its colonies of Eritrea and Italian Somaliland and would reduce the possibility of a border incident between Italian Somali tribes and Ethiopians. Italy's seizure of Ausa would obliterate the Franco-Ethiopian frontier at its most dangerous point.

Remembered Fixed Movement

Rome, Aug. 23 (AP)—Reports of a British fleet movement in the Mediterranean were discussed in informed circles today.

A government spokesman, however, said the situation "had not changed"—officially. He explained Italy had received no official word as to yesterday's decision of the Cabinet in London and: it was learned the British Embassy in Rome made no move.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford, by P. E. Will, branch manager.

Noranda Mines Limited

The Company reported net income for the first six months of 1935 equal to $1.14 a share. In addition to an increase in the amount of ground of being worked during the period as compared with previous half-year periods, the Company also paid extra non-recurring taxes of over $300,000 representing the bullion tax, not previously paid for the 1st, 1935. This is equal to 14 cents per share on the outstanding capital.

During the first three weeks of the second half year, copper averaged less than during the first six months of 1935, but the average price for July and August is higher than in the first half of January, June and current prices are about three quarters of a cent higher.

Unless the price of copper is to drop from now until the end of the year sending it to the second half-year should be substantially higher than the $1.14 per share reported for the first six months. Owing to the current rate of production and an average price for copper of 8 7-8 cents, Noranda could earn more than $1.40 a share in the last six months of 1935.

An increase of 1 cent a pound in the price of copper would mean about an increase of about 35 cents per share of Noranda stock outstanding.

Weakness in Gold Stocks

Nearly all senior gold stocks sold down to new lows for the year yesterday with Lake Shore dropping more than two points. Bar gold in London was quoted at 140 shillings, two pence above the previous day's quotation, which was touched on Wednesday. The rise in gold in the London price of gold is the consequence of the strength in sterling. The price of gold in Canadian funds has been practically unchanged, of late, although the price of gold will not advance above $35. The consistent effort of the New York gold market has brought a considerable flow of capital from golds into other classes of securities.

The present market structure has been built upon a sound foundation. Prices of many individual stocks seem high in comparison with their earnings, but contingution of the upward earnings trend is indicated, with seasonal interruptions, for several years to come and average prices now being witnessed will probably appear cheap when compared with the prices of several years hence. As a nearer term consideration, sight cannot be lost of the fact that, stock prices, as a whole, have been moving in a ceiling for a number of months with only a check worthy of serious consideration.

Regardless of the fundamental soundness of the market structure, the investor can well be prepared for temporary reversals in the price movement. Such interruptions can occur at any time and should occasion no alarm in the long term investor holding soundly situated issues. Under present conditions no protracted decline would thereby be indicated and the completion of a correction of that sort would afford the opportunity for further acquisitions at advantageous levels.

Or chief interest to the British Columbia mining industry during the past week was a further advance in the bullion price of lead to a new high for the present movement. Lead is now quoted at the highest price since the early part of March and the near-term outlook. This ex-tends the closing in the shares of Consolidated Smelters this week.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 23.—Profits realized almost stationary on the industrial board with trading volume small enough to be nearly dull on today's session. Imperial Oil, Distillers-Seagrams and C.P.R. registered mild gains and Brazilian was off the minimum fraction to 7 1-8 while the other leaders held steady.

Action in the metal shares following the sharp advance of metal prices early in the week was slow today with nickel holding steady at 39 and Consolidated Smelters down 1-2 to 172. Heavy industrials, foods and utilities moved in the same dull manner, boarding no price adjustments of importance by early afternoon.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 23.—(CP)—The market tone for the gold stocks was much improved today after a few losses and reversals yesterday in the early trading. Senior as well as secondary issues were finishing higher this afternoon, including Lake Shore, McIntyre, Dome, Teck-Hughes and Hollinger. Hargraves, Lake Shore Company announced that the current dividend will be paid September 3 instead of Sept. 16 as at first announced and to share holders of record Aug. 31.

Base metal stocks were slow and barely firm while the silver group was up narrowly on the stimulus of a higher world price for silver metal. Chadbourn was the best rise, advancing 6 cents to 91.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—A sharp decline in the Utilities was resisted by other stock market issues today. Gains of 1 to 3 or more points were shown by the rails and industrials after early hesitancy.

The fall of the power division followed action of the house on the Utility holding company bill. A drop of 52 to more than 54 a bale in cotton was similar for a time. Many of the Utilities later halved their losses.

Among the gainers were N.Y. Central, Santa Fe, Delaware & Hudson, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Case, Consolidated Oil, Standard Brands, Atlas Power, U.S. Smelting, Amer. Can, Pont. John-Manville, Boeing, Atlas Power, U.S. Smelting, Amer. Can, Pont. John-Manville, Boeing, Motor and Douglas. The day's volume was irregular. Transfers approximated 1,600,000 shares.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Aug. 23.—(AP)—A break in Utility shares gave the stock market a nervous attack today, but the spasm was brief as the market support appeared for the Rails and Industrials.

Among Dealings: stocks McIntyre and Canadian Pacific improved fractionally while Dome and International Nickel moved on an even keel. On the Curb Hiram Walker moved but Lake Shore was a little higher. Canadian Government Bonds were steady. Montreal Funds yielded 1 cent to cent at 99 3-4.

Gainers of fractions to around two points included Case, Delaware and Hudson, New York Central, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Anaconda, Phelps, Dodge, Boeing United Aircraft, Case, Johns-Manville, Douglas Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, Chrysler, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors and General Electric.

Declines up to a point were shown by American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, North American, Consolidated Gas and Standard Gas, and American Power and Light and Electric Power and Light.

Chicago Cubs Reduce Lead of Giants Winning First Game Of "Crucial Series" by 4-3

All Runs But One Scored By Home Run Route

CARDS RAINED OUT

Tigers And Yankees Both Defeated in Slugfests

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

One game up on the New York Giants in their important series, and, only two and one-half league-leading in the standing, the time seems to be at hand for Chicago's Cubs to prove whether they are real contenders for the 1935 National League flag or just another contending club.

The Cubs put up a great exhibition yesterday to turn back the Giants 4-3 in an exciting 11-inning battle. All they have to do now is win two or three more of the series, so to get up close to the League, to put through comparatively soft visits to Boston and Pittsburgh, and go home for an attempt to duplicate their last great stand. If they can do that they'll need a great deal of beating by either the Giants or the Cardinals.

Cubs Had Edge

From start to finish of yesterday's battle of home runs Chicago had the edge and only Mel Ott's daubing prevented a decision in the regular time. Mel's blast two home runs, his 26th and 27th of the season to offset homers by Stanley Hack, Billy Herman and Gabby Hartnett. The second tide in a score with two on and two out. Gus Mancuso's homer brought the other run in the regulation time. In the 10th just before rain halted the game briefly, Gabby Cuts landed on Carl Hubbell's relief Pitcher Allyn Stout and just missed the winning run. They got to third on the frame, when a walk, a hit by pitcher put Frank De-Phillips on second and a pinch hit by Woody English off Fitzsimmons filled the bases, brought him Lloyd Ginger, brought him home.

As the second-place Cardinals were rained out at Brooklyn, the defeat reduced New York's lead to 2 1-2 games.

The only other National League contest was Cincinnati's trounce the Phillies 9-1 behind Al Hollingsworth's three-hit slinging as Babe Herman, Ethe Cayler and Alex Kampouris hit for the circuit. Pittsburgh and Boston had an off day.

American League

The big doings in the American League saw the Red Sox leap from fifth place to third as the four clubs which held first division places to start the afternoon all were defeated. The Red Sox outslugged the League-leading Tigers 12-6, scoring six runs in the eighth to offset an earlier five-run burst by Detroit. Hank Greenberg's 32nd home run of the year, struck with one on in the first, was the big moment until those two wild innings whipped up.

The Boston victory put the Sox ahead of Chicago's White Sox who took it 7-4 drubbing from Washington as the Senators belted out 15 hits, the second Indians, who came out on the short end of a 5-3 struggle with the Athletics. Bill Dietrich pitched six-hit ball to beat Thornton Lee in that clash, and the Tribe went to fifth place, one point behind Chicago.

The Browns took advantage of New York errors to build up a lead that withstood Lefty Vito Alta's unexpected detonation in the eighth inning and defeated the Yanks 13-9, leaving the Yanks seven games behind Detroit.

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

by McElberan & Watkis.

Twenty-four bowlers, 16 men and 8 ladies, will go to stirring tonight to take part in a Jitney at that town.

Four games in the married couples' games were played on Tuesday night, McBride winning from Hyde, Watkin winning from McIntosh, Wymancott winning from Hoskin, Walkin winning from Black.

Only about twelve teams have paired for Labor Day, we need at least twenty-five. Players get busy only one more week.

Belleville Fair commences next week and we would ask all bowlers to use the front door of the club house on the 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th and come out the same way through our gates to the grounds. The club house has been put entirely at disposal of the Fair Board. We ask all bowlers to comply with this request.

Mr. Richards is joining our club this week and we are glad to have him. He might get a bar of chocolate once in a while.

It has been suggested that we hold a jitney on Thursday, Aug. 29th during the fair. We have given Kingston an invitation for that date, further notice will be in the bowling notes on Monday.

We received an invitation to go to Picton on that night but we'll make this visit at a later date.

Stirring hold their annual mixed picnic next Wednesday, we should send a rink or two.

The winners in Wednesday night's jitney were: Mrs. Pleber, John Shaw, H. Holland and J. Hegerty.

In the married couples game on Wednesday afternoon McBride won from Wymancott.

Stars do fall. On Wednesday evening Bob Wray fell victim to H. Richard 13 0. Watch your step Bob, he will come back some day.

In a game of doubles on Wednesday afternoon Fred Harper and Joe Black won from Walter Belair and Geo. Woodley by 2 shots.

In a game of doubles Thursday afternoon Joe Black and W. Adams won from Geo. Watkin and D. McBride by 4 shots.

The winners in the ladies game on Thursday evening were Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Walsh, and Mrs. Duff. Mrs. Tanner drew the lucky number and received a prize.

In the married couples games on Thursday night McElheran won from F. Houston.

Hobo King Willing To Act as Premier

Toronto, Aug. 23—Charles Pierce, who calls himself the "Hobo King" is in a singing mood these days. All he desires is a pretty wife with $10,000 and the opportunity to serve his country as premier.

He dropped into Toronto yesterday, to tell reporters in his "election campaign." So far the expenses have totalled $2.50, the price of a few cheese worm cut in trampings.

The "Hobo King" is looking for the $10,000 with which he was in Toronto 10 years ago, and he still likes honey. He says she must be about 30 and pretty—although he is not so fussy about the pretty part if she has the $10,000. He almost met "the girl" in Winnipeg, but the price was shy $1,000 of the stipulated amount—so the "Hobo King" turned her down.

BATTLE FOR CONTROL OF GARDENS

JAMES J. JOHNSTON

COLONEL HAMMOND

Following a blast by Col. John S. Hammond BRIGHT, chairman of the board of Madison Square Garden, directed at failures and alleged graft in the garden department presided over by James J. Johnston, LEFT. Johnston replied that Hammond himself would be lucky to have a job after the directors' meeting on Sept. 24. He said Hammond was trying to get John Kingsley Reed (president) and the booted out so he can be chief brass hat himself.".

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

'Tis many a year since the C.O. B.L. race has been as close as it is at the present, today's final game of the schedule deciding which team shall finish in the coveted first hole. With a patched team the Kingston Ponies journeyed to Peterboro on Wednesday and toppled over the then mighty men of Lee to move into a tie for first place. With one remaining postponed game left, tonight those same two clubs will line up in the million dollar tilt at Kingston this afternoon. Doubtless by today will see Rusty Lee pin his last hopes on Willie Callaghe as his pitching choice, while Joe Daly will naturally send his imported Philadelphia hurler, Bud Chaney, to the mound. With the final league leadership at stake today's Peterboro at Kingston game will see the players on both clubs right on edge and ready for battle. If Max Swanson, as president, can continue to have his league produce such stellar combinations, as has been the case in the C.O.B.L. for the past two years, we say, elect Max Swanson league president until he is hobbling around on crutches, and then have the league purchase him a wheel chair.

Tomorrow the local Kiwanis Juniors are scheduled to play back in Oshawa and should rumors matters on the Motor City aggregation the Kiwanis kids lost their initial league game on Tuesday at that city through sheer fright, the game being their first league game of the season. Once the Kiwanis kids lost their nervousness, they settled away to out-play Oshawa in every department and now they know their own strength and have put over that "first night fright", well watch 'em go. If one can believe the box score, the Motor City crew used a woefully weak hitters, as they failed to connect for a single safe blow, after the Kiwanis had given away one walk to form. Coach Meagher has Johnston, Sanders, Hall and Gordon in store Tuesday, Joe Kelleher, who did not allow a single safe hit for the full inning and "Jeffy" Neal, who was slightly injured on Tuesday, will ready for Singing duty. Each and every member of the local outfit is quite confident that they take the Motor City crew, "We won't make the same mistake twice," was the comment heard at last night's junior practice.

In order to get in some much needed practice the Stewart-Warners are negotiating with the Gibbard Athletics for an exhibition game in Napanee tomorrow afternoon. If Kingston finishes the season in the first hole, naturally the Petes will want to continue the Central League season and perhaps again next Tuesday or Wednesday would not come amiss. Local baseball fans have seen their last ball game in Belleville until possibly Labor Day, when the second game of the semi-final playoffs is likely to be played here. In the meantime the local intermediates are definitely taking their Bay of Quinte home play-off seriously and the latter may can at least get out of debt, they assure us.

We understand there are to be no more weekly punt sailing races off Victoria Park until the municipal aquatic meet of Labor Day. Incidentally we also have been informed that the S.R.A.C. is no longer, that organization recently adopting a new moniker. Today the club is known as the Belleville Athletic and Yachting Association. On Labor Day they are planning a monster land and water competition with races, special attractions, a swimming meet, including power boat races, diving events all to be terminated with a gala dance in their new club house that night.

Local baseball fans have repeatedly asked us to mention one of the knotty problems that appears in Kenelly Lee's Peterboro progress to relinquish to a team batting six hits in one inning and not scoring a run. While at times we've witnessed this happen, it's possible for a team to get six hits in an inning and not score a run. First two men up could triple and be thrown out at the plate trying to steal in it. Next three could fill the bases on singles and the next guy could hit one of the base-runners with a line drive, retiring the side but getting credit for a hit—making two triples and four singles with no runs in the one inning. And Kenny Lee maintains there can be a walk, a hit batsman, two singles, a double and two triples in one inning and no runs scored! Could be by any chance mean two ball-innings?

Joe Calder says there is no truth in the statement that golf begins with a "F."

Tommy Pedder, Belleville's ace entry in the C.N.E. five-mile swim at Toronto on Labor Day, left yesterday for the Queen City. Tommy tapered off with local training and pulled up stakes yesterday in order to get more acclimatized to the more chilly waters of Lake Ontario. Pedder has trained faithfully for this grind and is quite confident he can make a better showing than heretofore, when two years ago in the 10 mile splash he was in the thick of the battle. That was the year he got the "bends" coming on account of the excess cold continuous heat should materially assist in raising the temperature of the water for the C.N.E. swim, however.

So successful was the reception of night baseball in Belleville recently that a sectional game will again be promoted before the grandstand at the Fair Grounds for this time it is something new, something different, as a matter of fact it is something that has never been staged in this part of the country. Up to date there is nothing definite about the spectacle, but today we heard on the street that revolutionary had it opened to stage a game of "donkey baseball" under floodlights at the Fair Grounds. To those, who have been fortunate enough to witness a "donkey game" the mere suggestion is enough, even without the added attraction of a baseball game. Whether the promoters will carry through their plans locally or not remains to be seen, but if they do it will be a knock-out for those who appreciate sport mingled with comedy.

Simpson's made it two in a row last night in the Mercantile softball finals, if they down the Recreations tonight they will not only win the league title, but will step down to the Mills on Mercantile softball for the season.

ROYALS DEFEAT TORONTO LEAFS

Increase Lead in the Loop Race to Three Full Games

(By the Associated Press)

The three team race for the pennant in the International League bears a resemblance to the League leading trio in the National circuit.

Montreal Royals, who lead the pack nine with, compare with New York Giants in that both are setting the pace in their respective leagues and usually are consistent in form. The Royals have never dropped more than four straight games, while six consecutive losses has been the low water mark for the Giants.

The second pace Buffalo Bisons and St. Louis Cardinals duplicate another comparison. The Cards play par-ball for weeks at a time, bowling over all opposition, and then suddenly drop into an almost interminable slump. The Bisons have been up and down the standing several times, and, like the Cards, are pressing for the International championship.

The third place teams, Syracuse and Chicago, have their ups and downarity because both have surprisingly been staying up close to the front so long.

Royals Beat Leafs

The Royals and the Bisons followed the formula right to the letter yesterday as the Royals defeated Toronto 6-2, while Buffalo came to the end of their seven game winning streak by dropping a night doubleheader 5-0 and 7-4 to the seventh place Rochester Red Wings. Montreal thus stretched its lead to three games, while Appleton received credit for the Royals victory and became the first pitcher in the League to score 20 wins this season but he was relieved in the seventh inning after Toronto had scored three runs and had two men on base.

Al-ight pitching by Fisher and Harrell doomed Buffalo Bisons. Rather almost every hit Bills as Rochester registered a shutout in the first game and Harrell allowed only six blows in the second.

Baltimore crept within 1 1-2 games of Syracuse and a half a game behind Syracuse as they walloped the Chiefs 9-3, while Al Benton turned in fine pitching and with the aid of Wood Cheraberlain's three-for-three at bat.

Newark reached the .500 mark again with a 8-3 win over the last-place Albany Senators. Kenny Lee allowed the Senators only five hits.

YANKEE STADIUM SCENE OF FIGHT

Louis-Baer Heavyweight Joust Set For September 24

New York, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The 15-round heavyweight match between Joe Louis, mahogiocal Detroit negro, and Max Baer, former world champion, was set definitely for Tuesday, Sept. 24, at the Yankee Stadium New York in an announcement today by Mike Jacobs, promoter.

The decision to hold the bout under the auspices of the 20th Century Sporting Club, in co-operation with the Mills Fund, confirmed expectations.

SIMPSONS WIN SECOND STRAIGHT

Defeat Recreations 8-1 to Practically Clinch Title

Hurling five hit ball Ed Bateman pitched the Simpson nine to a second straight victory in the local Mercantile Softball League finals play-offs last night, when they downed the Recreations by the score of 8 to 1. Bateman was in rare form and never in trouble after his teammates gave him a four run advantage in the third inning.

B. Carson pitched for the Recreations and was touched for nine bingles that resulted in five runs. Six bad errors materially entered into the scoring to mitigate any chance that Carson may have had in winning. The Recreations made a final bid in the ninth, when they filled the bases with Mike Jacobs, pinch-hitter.

The decision to hold the bout under the auspices of the 20th Century Sporting Club, in co-operation with the Mills Fund, confirmed expectations.

The line-ups —Simpsons—Ams, Howbotham, Moon, O'Neil, Clarke, Bateman, Cooper, Quackenbush and Reynolds. Recreations—Tapp, Cornell, B. Morgan, Hurley, Pulmer, R. Morgan, Mansfield, B. Morgan, Balyz and Carson.

TOLL GATE BEST IN FREE-FOR-ALL

Wins Free-For-All Over Heavy Track in Straight Heats

Charlottetown, Aug. 23—(CP)—Toll Gate, one-time 'plow' horse and now one of the greatest harness track performers in the Maritimes, romped home for three flasts in the free-for-all here Thursday over entries from all the seaside provinces. Toll Gate came to the Maritimes from Kingston.

Driven on the heavy track by his owner, H. M. Sweeney of Bridgewater, N.S., Toll Gate took the three heats of the free-for-all event with little trouble. In the first heat he trailed quick-starting Dermat, owned by Charles Ballard of Sydney Mines, N.S., until the last quarter, then with a brilliant burst of speed he drew up to the Cape Breton horse on the turn and raced ahead on the stretch.

Toll Gate got away fast in the next two heats and led all the way to the finish line, beating Dermat again in the second, and The Great Grip, owned by A. M. Lavender of Saint John, N.B., in the third.

LEARN TO SWIM!

Floating and Treading Water

So much time is spent with the various strokes, that very little time is given to floating and treading water. Even novices and advanced swimmers should master these important phases of swimming. Many lives are lost due to people finding themselves in new and awkward positions in water. Ability to float and tread water would avoid many drownings.

Floating

To float, fill lungs with air and lie back in the water, hips well up, back arched, arms overhead in line with body. Let the feet float upwards and hold chest fairly high and allow the head to fall back far enough for water to cover the ears—see position Figure 18. Keep the body perfectly relaxed at all times. When you let air out through the nose, notice how quickly you start sinking. After a little practice you will be able to inhale and exhale in this position (of course inhale through mouth and exhale through nose.) Some people float only in an upward position, almost a standing position in the water. So long as the body is motionless you are floating.

LESSON II

Treading Water

Treading water is a restful method in which to keep afloat. It is a real asset and marks you as being at home in the water. Try it first in water up to the neck. See Figure 19. Lift the feet from the bottom and using the hands with an inward and outward fluttery motion per Figure 20 and 21, but with hands submerged of course, almost even with the waist. The legs to work in a modified bicycle peddling motion. The scissors or frog kick may be employed here. Keep the body well relaxed and see just how easy it comes. The arms can also be held out of the water, which of course gives the legs plenty of work. See Figure 22. This is helpful for life saving methods.

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"No sir! It's not. It's the view that ninety-nine men out of a hundred would take and should take of it, Bryson.

"I'm fully satisfied of course that Cooke's body was robbed. I'm not in the least satisfied that the man who looted him did the killing." Howe paused. "Do you think, Barber was the killer?"

Brian put his elbows on the table.

"First tell me this, Howe. Putting together Sam's letter, his' flight, Cooke's evidence, and the recovery of the fake diamond. If Sam were arrested tonight, isn't the evidence strong enough to hang him? Why, blackmailer, and potential murderer! Come now! Is it strong enough to hang him, eh?"

"I should say so. As it stands at present it would hang him."

Brian looked Howe in the eyes. "Very well, then take my own case. If I hadn't been able to prove I was part of it, I'd have been in rather a tight place—wouldn't I?"

"I should say so," said Howe, quietly.

"Listen then, Howe. I'm going to assume no man of murder, whatever his character and no matter if the evidence should him looks black, as night. That's your job.

Sergeant Howe nodded.

"I wasn't asking you to accuse Sam. One was working out the truth of this case together. Barber is a blackmailer, thief, and if not a murderer the accessory to a murder. But there's something vital missin'.

"There's some one else in this case. I don't mean Selby. There's a fourth person at the Stannary Mine last night."

The two officers' eyes were silent; Brian stared at the sergeant with solid surprise.

"That so? You've never mentioned that, Howe . . . There must be no secrets between us—who on earth was it?"

"The most difficult thing in the whole case—to prove that," said Howe. "I must wait."

"Damn me, How did he get away with it?"

Howe's eyes narrowed.

"It's wait. But we'll have it at that. We'll hold it up sir, till I've got just a little more complete. And then—"

"Then," said Brian, "you'll lay your cards on the table."

"All of them, sir—and face upwards." Howe rose. "I'm very much obliged to you both for the help you've given me."

"Must you leave us?"

"Yes."

"I'm going to King's Mim House in the morning," said Brian. "Come over, Howe, I'll have to invite you for Bannister's keys. You have them, I think?"

He expected a refusal. But Howe, after a moment's thought, handed them over.

"Good night, sir," he said. "Good night, Miss Neil."

Brian stood up, his face white and drawn.

"Do you think Howe suspects?" Sonia paused, and looked closely at him before she spoke.

"No!" she said slowly. "I don't think—he does."

"Bit of a strain, wasn't it—standing up to Howe. It mustn't make a slip. Did I do well, Sonia?"

"You did all right," said Sonia, as she said, and put an arm round his shoulder. He leaned suddenly, and his eyes half closed.

"Sorry dear. I'm all in. Forty-eight hours of it . . . Yes."

"You go to bed!" she said. "Not another word of you—you must take over. Howe 'll have trouble morning."

She saw him to his room. Out in the night she heard cries of wire were humming with the search for Sam Barber. Sonia prayed they might find him.

"A red-hot case!" said Inspector Fyrth of Northcaster. "It was a huge, obese man with heavy yet youthful eyes, sat at the table in Sergeant Howe's office before a sheaf of papers and documents. He said about before him, his hat met hung on the back of the chair. Both policemen rose themselves to their feet as the door opened and the Chief Constable of the county entered. Captain Despard was a well set up officer with a short-clipped fair mustache and a pleasant expression. His wore weather-beaten check-form, his gun case and Labrador retriever were in the car outside; he glanced at his watch as he entered.

"Sit down," he said impatiently, and drew up a chair. "What's new since last night? Is there a case?"

"I have a complaint to make, sir, against Sergeant Howe."

"Ah!" said the chief constable.

"NOW I FEEL FULL of Pep!"

THAT'S what hundreds of happy women say after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. M. Carter, Fairview, writes: "I was all run down and rundown. I took two bottles of your medicine. Now I sleep better and I eat more. My color is good and my nerves are better."

Why don't you try it? Its nonaction may be what YOU need.

Lydia E. Pinkham's VEGETABLE COMPOUND

"What?"

The chief inspector's face spilt in a quiet grin.

"He's made such a clean sweep of this case, captain, that there won't be much left for me to do. Take a look at those papers and the wires, sir."

The chief constable went through the reports: Inspector Fyrth said very little. Howe answered all questions briefly. At the finish, he only nodded to him.

"Good work!" he said." "Very good work, Howe."

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Despard pulled his mustache, and frowned.

"Bannister, Cooke was a wrong un. We have proved that, we'd nothing against him on the records. Now we find it's gold. Howe's the man who killed him? Of course, there's this other crook, Barber, slips away . . . still a clear case against him. Reaches a sea-port—Hull. Hull nominated, eh?—not there now."

"No sir," said Fyrth. "And I think all that sea-port stuff is just plain bunk. Barber didn't leave the country. It isn't even certain that he reached the coast, that night, and I'm a sudden, which I'm wrong on now, that he may not be so far off as that."

Captain Despard stared at him.

"You don't suppose he wouldn't have got out if he could?"

"I'm suggesting, sir, that you hold it up till Howe and I have another fact or two to put in your hands. I've had a dozen plain-clothes men working locally. Of course," added Fyrth, "it's mad'ning. If, as everybody's assuming, Barber, is out of our district he has guided the country. It's up to the police organisation, to find him and deliver him."

"I want to put this to you both," said the chief constable, "it seems pretty sure he is out of our radius. Suppose they never get him—will this case be solved?"

"No sir!" said Howe, "It won't." And now Selby—You've arrested for some time that he was an accomplice."

"I know that he left the house ahead of Cooke, and from this moment he has vanished completely, there is not a trace of a clue of him. And that's very puzzling."

"You evidently don't think Barber killed him out . . . as well as Cooke?"

"I think its unlikely sir," said Howe. "There isn't a man more capable or looking after himself; a dangerous man! Both unarmed—as far all round. Enough, he was Cooke's chosen bodyguard. Barber was armed on the night of the murder. Still I own I've no fresh facts about Selby at the moment—not a thing to go upon."

Despard made a note on the margin of the report.

"Barber," Barber got away with the goods. We've witnesses to him; Barber's our man. But its a black business Fyrth, we've got to look at every side of it."

"Bannister Coote's death is remarkably convenient for young Chalmers, he's a rich man now, I've met him, and liked him. But in the circumstances, he certain lucky for him—and for the girl Sonia Neil—she's able to show a clean slate—eh?"

"Very, sir," said Howe.

"He was mixed up with Barber on the voyage, and the two Selby men have damaging evidence against him. If you believe them."

Despard tipped the ash from his fingers. "Are you sure Howe, that he had no hand, direct or indirect in the killing?"

"I'm sure of nothing yet, sir."

"If he did have any hand in it, it's his finish. What's the next step?"

"The next official step is the Inquest. As you know, they're pushing that on."

"You want it postponed?"

"No sir! But I hope that Inquest can be conducted—in a way that will help the police."

The Chief Constable lifted his eyebrows. Inspector Fyrth leaned forward.

"I've been talking this over with Sergeant Howe, sir. He's right. We want certain witnesses called, who are vital to the case. But we want a part of the evidence held up, until we're ready. Inquest can baulk the police, in a murder case—or if, can help us to get our man."

Captain Despard reflected a moment, studying the papers, and nodded.

"I'll see the Coroner tonight what you require. I'll arrange it with the Coroner. Anything more?"

"Yes sir," Captain said as Sergeant Howe has handled this case very well, got all the threads in his hands and knows the people concerned, it would be advisable during any one else but in even though Howe is rather junior in rank."

Despard hesitated, but not for long.

"Very well. Carry on Fyrth," he said, and rose. "I'll be back in a clear enough case against the man Barber." He turned to Howe, "What is this girl like—Sonia Neil?"

"A very charming young lady, sir," said Howe. Despard smiled.

"Indeed! I've met the first American woman I've dealt with; she's certainly quick at the uptake," said Howe quietly. "Saves time."

Before Despard could reply there was a light, step outside, a tap at the door, and Sonia herself appeared. She was looking vividly beautiful, and wore her rough tweed walking costume with the distinction of a princess. Despard looked forty-eight hours travelling right off. Do you want him?"

There was an interruption. A tall gaunt man of fifty, in uniform, with a lantern jaw and a grim expression, walked into the room. It was Superintendent Guthrie of Horncleiter, Fyrths chief. He halted in the doorway, and stood listening. The Chief Constable's eyes twinkled.

"I don't want him. But what can we do for you, Miss Neil?"

"I just came to ask Sergeant Howe if I can go up the railway to the Stannary Mine. He under police guard, I believe."

Despard seemed a little taken aback; he turned to Inspector Fyrth, who glanced at Howe, and nodded.

"There's no objection to that Miss," said Fyrth. "Howe will be along shortly; we have some men in charge up there."

"I'm going that way myself; my car's outside, and if I can give you a lift Miss Neil—" said the Chief Constable. Sonia smiled at him.

"That will be charming of you," she said. Despard got his hat and held the door open for her without a word. They went out together like a pair of old friends. Superintendent Guthrie followed them with a sour eye.

"Is that the Neil girl?" he grunted, looking at Fyrth.

"Yes sir," said Fyrth, "Fetching, isn't she."

"She'll make a fool of the C. C.," said Guthrie, snapping his lantern jaws together "and that's not funny. These damned Army popinjays, shoved in to thousand-a-year billets over the heads of the Force!

I don't care who knows my views on that; my record stands for itself, and I want no amateurs running my police." These the papers? He sat down at the table ignoring Howe.

"You've seen the report copies sir," said Fyrth," What's new since last night I'm sure."

The Superintendent scanned the papers in silence. He had a quick grasp of a case, and was a man of long experience.

"Now listen!" he said, tapping the papers with his knuckles. "You'll get Barber, but he isn't the man. The case is only two days old but you've got it all wrong-end first. You've got Barber, and you've got Young Chalmers. Which means she's accessory in a murder; she isn't going to get away with that. Now, to his dismay, he saw that the girl too, was faltering. "It is no use," she said, finally, "I can go no further. These the papers? I do not dead nor is the Lieutenant nor myself. Until I see him I should plan only upon continuing to live. We rest here awhile. When you are stronger we will push on."

It was then that Tarzan suddenly motioned the others to silence, and listened. For a minute he stood motionless, his keen ears acutely receptive to sounds so faintly distant that neither man nor girl detected the slightest break in the utter and death-like silence. Those minutes seemed like eternity to the girl, wondering what was coming.

SMOKY SMITH WILL GET TRIAL WITH THE LEAFS

Dr. McGeorge Will Leave For Post Graduate Study

Tweed, Aug. 23 (Special)—Mrs. Tom Wilkie of Fergus spent a few days at the home of Dr. and Mrs. M. G. Delaney. Mrs. Wilkie is a collateral lady and has travelled a great deal, she has contributed a number of interesting articles to various leading papers and magazines. Mrs. Wilkie usually spends several months at Beach point, Hamilton, Ontario, and was well-acquainted with the late Will Rogers, whom she met on his coast in an aeroplane accident in Alaska.

It is reported that Deverdo (Smoky) Smith, ace scotkeeper of the Collingwood Shipbuilders and formerly of Tweed, will be given a tryout with Toronto Maple Leafs and will be taken south for training in the spring. Smith has established a record of 170 strikeouts in 24 innings (10 full games and 4 batting-outs), just slightly fewer than two strikeouts per inning.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE REGENT

"Baby Face Harrington"

Rating: Good Comedy.

There have been more pretentious ones, but there has never been a better comedy filmed than "Baby Face Harrington," that introduces the team of Charles Butterworth and Una Merkel now at the Capitol Theatre.

Smith, sensible and extremely funny, the new picture reflects its most prize on the producers' genius and most of all on the cast.

Charles Butterworth plays Willie Harrington, a small-town clerk, the invalid in his socially ambitious wife. Trying to be the head of the works him, Willie gets involved with a band of the toughest gangsters ever to man a machine gun. He lands jail and the hospital in quick succession, only to hold him a captive in their hideout. Meanwhile a blood-curdling man hunt is on for his arrest.

With such ingenious comedy situations the new picture is replete, Moving swiftly, it ends with surprise as abrupt as the clash of cymbals.

The supporting cast, including Wal Pendleton, Ruth Selwyn, Harvey Stephens, Eugene Pallette and Donald Meek was selected with an eye to keen characterization of the backgrounds. Scenes that stand out for their authenticity include the school Spandards' Inn, where Baby Face Virgie, the hat girl, and man made his headquarters; replica of the old Newsple prison, and delightful old world shops and streets.

Turpin was a strange character who came to be good and in the eighteenth century. Victor McLaglen portrays him perfectly, the cigar-chewing romantic outlaw, pal-ant as a lover, cruel and unforgiveable as an enemy.

McLaglen has full opportunity to reveal his excellent horsemanship in the exciting episode of the ride on his mare, Black Bess, to York where he has gone to save his sweetheart; and his thrilling fight with the Bow Street runners.

McLaglen is supported by a group of players who are perfectly cast for the many and various roles to be found in the story. Among the more prominent are Jane Carr, Frank Vosper, Jimmie Finlayson and Edmund Breon.

Some excellent news shorts are shown in the weekly newsreel among them being the ability of war time to resurrect and rejuvenate old motor cars. The segregment of this program concludes tomorrow night.

AT THE BELLE

"Sanders of The River"

Edgar Wallace's Masterpiece

"Sanders of the River" the stirring story of one white man's cool courage ruling the primitive savage tribes of the Congo is brought to you tomorrow and Monday at the Belle Theatre. It is being justly hailed as the master thrill creation of this generation's most popular author, Edgar Wallace.

It depicts the clear-headed bravery of a lone white man against the superstitious savagery of Africa's warring blacks. Supervised by Alexander Korda, famous for his colorful screen pictures, it gives an authentic and thrilling picture of the Congo on the screen. The cast chosen to man and officer the outpost of the Belle Theatre, is of the jungle, crowds, mobs, and photographed 30,000 natives to obtain scenes never before seen on the screen. The battle-ax ed regiments of fighting men, wild dances, thrilling Kaffir scenes, the ochre drums thundering their messages across the forest, the great cross fighting of the tribes are merely as a background to a breathless drama of love, Paul Robeson, distinguished American actor and singer as Bosambo, the African chief, Leslie Banks, as Lieut. Tibbetts, the soldier of civilization who kept the savage millions in check.

The story of the jungle peace, as told by Edgar Wallace, begins with the misdoner and of how it is broken by the wild Kaffir tribes. Sanders sends Bosambo, Congo chief, to capture the king's contraband slaves. Bosambo does and takes the prettiest slave for his wife. With peace re-established, Sanders starts on an overdue holiday. As soon as he is out of the territory, the jungle drums spread the rumour that he is dead. The hill tribe rises in revolt, killing Sanders' schitlete by torture.

Bosambo, hearing of the terror that is ruling everywhere, returns just as Bosambo learns that his wife has been kidnapped by the old king. Bosambo starts for the hills alone, unarmed and followed by a few to avenge the death of Bosambo and his wife, to kill the recalcitrant savage ruler and free Vermilion Alberet, daughter of the Congo territory.

"Friendly Relations" a funny Star personality comedy introducing a host of popular favourites, and the Lates; Revs of the World, are announced for exhibition on the same program. Performances will be daily at 2.30, 7.15 and 9.15. "Sanders of the River" starts daily at 3.00, 7.45 and 9.50 p.m.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon from the home of her son, Will. Friends and relatives from distant points gathered in attendance. The services were conducted by Rev. Thompson of Queen Street United Church and Rev. Dr. Ryckman of Bamton United Church, who referred to Mrs. McCallum's kindly and sterling character. Interment was made in Cataraqui Cemetery. ### Lawyer and Child Rescued on Lake Sarnia, Aug. 23—Word of the rescue from drowning in Lake Huron at Charles Welt, well-known Sarnia lawyer, and his 7-year-old daughter, Catherine, has reached here.

Weir and his daughter clung for thirty minutes to their overturned canoe, 200 yards off the shore near the Blackwell side road. Bob Adams and John Martin, two 14-year-old summer residents here, finally rescued them.

Weir's sail-rigged canoe was caught in a sudden wind and upset. They were afraid they would not be able to reach shore in the cold water. They shouted for help but swung to an offshore wind their shouts were not heard. Adams and Martin saw them from a rowboat and went to their assistance.

STORY IS DENIED BY PRES. DE VALERA

Dublin, Aug. 23—(CP Cable)—President De Valera denied that his High Commissioner in London had assured the British Government the Irish Free State would support Britain in any action she might take in the Ethiopian crisis. The Free State, however, supports any move to prevent war, he said.

De Valera said the decision of the Free State Government will be taken independently, and its attitude will be determined solely by its desire to see the League of Nations function as an effective guarantee of peace.

DOG BEATEN TO DEATH

Toronto, Aug. 23 (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Jackson's Trixie, five-year-old terrier, was clubbed to death last night by housebreakers who stole $27 and several articles of jewelry.

"She must have died fighting for me, she was a good watchdog," said Loyd Jackson, son of the owner.

McCARDELL STORY EXONERATES BOTH MEISNER, MURRAY

States Neither Man Had Any Part in Labatt Kidnapping

TWO STILL AT LARGE

Claims Nicholson Drove Labatt to Toronto For Release

London, Ont., Aug. 24 (CP).—Albert Pearson, Detroit, and Norbert Murray, awaiting trial for the abduction, were innocent of the whole affair, McCardell is reported to have said.

McCardell, arrested in Indiana, has admitted his guilt and will be sentenced Monday.

For the first time, the Free Press today published the story of the year-old abduction can be told. The police quotes McCardell as saying the plan to kidnap Frank Labatt, son of the wealthy brewer was plotted by a London man and the ground-work was laid four years ago.

Identity of the man involved by McCardell whose signed confession of the whole crime is in the hands of police, was withheld today by his own statement, because he could not be an innocent man. McCardell sentenced to the penitentiary for 15 years, 10 for Pearson.

Meisner Refused Ransom

Meisner who resided in Donington, Ky., home city also of Murray, Pearson, offered a chance to take part in the crime but refused, the paper says. Murray's case was one of mistaken identity. He is said to have resembled Gerald Nicholson, Windsor man, held in connection with the kidnapping.

Nicholson, while holidaying in Muskoka at the time of the kidnapping, Knowles was arrested but released later. His whereabouts are unknown.

The crime, as reconstructed by by the newspaper from the reports of McCardell, Murray and others, is as follows:

The brewer was held up and captured on the London-Sarnia road, Knowles and Meisner joined in the London-Detroit. McCardell and Pegram took Labatt to Muskoka cottage where he was held for three days.

Ransom Was Refused

Knowles and Pegram went to Toronto to make contact. McCardell and Meisner kept Labatt. Pegram "found out" on them because he feared the law was "on to him" and returned back to Muskoka. Knowles and McCardell became friends with Nicholson to use his car.

Pegram said "My God, you have got John Labatt here." Knowles said "I'm not ordered" and drive to Toronto. They returned to Muskoka.

Then McCardell and Knowles secured a car. They have not seen each other since.

Pegram went to Meisner's home two days after the kidnap and McCardell was arrested recently in Indiana. Murray, by an unlucky coincidence, was arrested on his arrest. Labatt and his Indiana but failed to identify him.

With him (McCardell) the "Big" was not. He knew an innocent man had been wrongly convicted, but was afraid to come forward rather than see these two men (Meisner and Murray) suffer for a crime in which they had not part to hold to the whole story with all its astounding details, he said.

Since his return McCardell has been faced with fresh evidence action that passed at the time of the abduction and that brewer is "now convinced McCardell is the man who was big guard in the cottage at Muskoka."

LIFE STORY of WILL ROGERS

By Scott Cunningham

EDITOR'S NOTE: The material for Scott Cunningham's "OUR WILL" was collected from personal contact with the man, from interviews with his relatives and friends, and from reading practically every line ever written by him or about him. Cunningham devoted two years almost exclusively to this task, and interviewed at least a hundred other Rogers' friends and childhood associates.

First Installment;
THE GREAT EVENT

Will Rogers was born Tuesday night, November 4, 1879, in a log house in a valley four miles east of Oologah, Indian Territory. He was nine thirty-seconds (or a little more than one-fourth) Cherokee Indian, and that, as Will Rogers

Will Rogers' great grandfather, Robert Rogers, was born in Ireland. He came to western Virginia and left it to trade with the Indians, and married a white daughter of an Indian trader, Thomas Rogers Cordery, whose wife was a full-blood Cherokee. Their fourth child, Robert Jr., married Mary Schrimsher, who had moved to the Indian Territory in 1839 when the future father of Will Rogers was born, according to Emmet Starr, author of the History of the Cherokee Indians, published by the Warden Company of Oklahoma City in 1921.

Will Rogers' first and biggest hero was his father, "Clem" Rogers had a hard youth, in the rough country of the Cherokee nation, and was "on his own" running a creek-side trading post, at 17. He had only two negro slaves to help him handle his Osage customers when they grew cheerycorned. At 20 he married Mary Schrimsher, the future mother of Will Rogers, a quarter Cherokee herself, and came back to his lonely post.

Then suddenly he was swept up in the Civil War. At 23, a captain in the Confederate army, he led a company, on foot, in the battle of Cabin Creek, Indian Territory. He had to start from scratch and "lick the South's surrender," and hailed with iron-freight for five years to make the money with which he went to ranching.

He bought time-make tough men. Clem Rogers was serious, and sometimes crabby. He was mighty plain-spoken, too, but he was never regarded as a "bad man"; never wore a gun. He was considered by the poor family got a present of a hog, or some flour, it probably came from Clem.

In 1870 Clem Rogers moved to the Verdigris River in Indian Territory where Will was later to be born. He built a cabin on the river bank and with his wife and children began to work.

A. J. Lane, country doctor, brought Will Rogers into the world (Continued on Page 2)

SHOULD SPECIFY WHAT IS EXPECTED

More Rapid Filling of Vacancies Will be Required

"If farmers, when asking for help at the employment office, would state the probable amount of work they expect to pay the farm hands they want, it would help the office and themselves, in being able to more quickly," was stated at the local Employment Service of Canada office this morning.

At the present time applications for help are being received daily by residents of the more remote districts of the city.

One farmer at Tamworth asked for two young and strong men who who really likes the farm." Wages will be arranged after a personal interview.

At Meyersburg, near Campbellford, one man, "with experience," is needed. Two men are required at Madoc, but the office must specify a worker who is young at wages of $12 a month until fall, and then a man who will work for cheaper wages. The second man at Madoc is to be under 25 and not to 30, with or without experience. Two boys, aged 17 years, are also sought for Brighton district. Applications are all on file at the local office.

FOUND IN SHALLOW GRAVE

Biddeford, Me., Aug. 24.—Alexander Cooper, young sawmill worker, collapsed in his cell last night as police questioned him about the body of 17-year-old Florence Brewster, whose broken body was found in a shallow grave a few hours earlier.

He was taken under heavy guard to York County jail at Alfred. His clothing was removed to forestall a possible suicide attempt.

A coroner's report showed that the girl was clubbed to death, apparently while resisting a criminal attack.

PARKED CAR KILLS 10 YEAR OLD CHILD

Runs Down Steep Slope And Crashes Fence in Toronto

Toronto, Aug. 24—A driverless automobile, parked on the steep slope of Rosedale Avenue early yesterday afternoon, started to move, ran down the road for 100 feet, tore through a fence and struck and killed John Kenilworth Crescent, where it picked up a 10-year-old boy and crushed him to death against a stone verandah.

The victim was Harry Dunbar, 1066A Queen Street east.

Douglas Labatt, aged 36, of 158 Bingham Avenue, parked the auto opposite 193 Kenilworth to get on to his a friend's house. Someone decided "your car is gone," backed into her car and ran down the street; to see it crash through the fence.

The auto under its own momentum went down the hill about 100 feet and then went through the fence and fence which divides Kenilworth Avenue. Striking directly, it fell 30 feet down the slope to Kenilworth Avenue and struck a waiting came from all sides.

Sam Barkley, 90 Bayview Road an employe of the, parks department, was the cutting grass on the crescent and the boy's mother saw him if he could have some of the cut grass. "What do you want it for?" grass for, son?" he asked, "I want to give it to my rabbit."

The boy began gathering up the grass in his arms when suddenly there was a sound of splintering wood. "Run, son—get out of this," Barkley yelled. But the boy was not out of danger. The boy, instead of going north to the street, went straight across the road and was caught by the plunging auto as it rolled down the hill.

The coroner stated an inquest into the death will be held soon and odd features of the accident which required further investigation. Mc-Nairn, who, was driving his mother's auto, had not put on the brakes before parking the car. He was not held by the police.

APPROVE REDUCTIONS

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 24 (CP)—Reductions in street lighting and power rates authorized by the Hydro Electric Power Commission have been approved today by the Public Utilities Commission, together with another three months' rebate of April, year's payments for electricity. This will save consumers here approximately $23,000. Power rates have been reduced from $34 to $22 per horsepower. Street lighting charges have been reduced 31 per lamp saving the Municipal Corporation $600 per year.

ABERHART SOUNDS OUT STEVENS ON JOINING FORCES

Negotiations to This End Will Begin At Once

PARTY CAUCUS CALLED

Elected Members Hold Thanksgiving Service Friday

Calgary, Aug. 24 (CP)—William Aberhart, leader of the Social Credit Party who led his forces to an overwhelming triumph in the Alberta election held by him today declared negotiations would be opened with Hon. H. H. Stevens, Reconstruction Party leader, with a view to joining forces in the Dominion election.

Negotiations with the Reconstruction leader will begin immediately, a decision made regarding the Dominion fight, Mr. Aberhart stated. He requested no nominating convention be held by his party, but Alberta Federal constituencies pending the outcome of negotiations.

Premier Aberhart declared, he added, lines up with Mr. Stevens and his party. It would not be decided whether candidates would be run under the banners of Social Credit or the Joint banners of both parties.

The leader of Social Credit candidates elected mounted to 44, Liberal leader Lucas 11, Conservatives elected ... 1 Conservatives elected ... 1 Social Credit leading ... 13 Liberals leading ... 2 Conservatives leading ... 1 U.F.A. leading ... 2

Leader Mr. Anne and Hamilton Mr. Aberhart, the Bible Society's founder and chieftain, was busy in his office at the Prophetic Bible Institute here, meeting party stalwarts and arranging details for the party caucus to be held here at an early date. Naming of a premier will be decided upon at the party caucus and it was certain today Mr. Aberhart himself would be named. A by-election would be necessary for Mr. Aberhart to function as he was not a candidate in the election.

Little Political Experience

Three Social Credit candidates were among the four leaders in Edmonton while the new party candidates in Calgary, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat.

Social Credit candidates have been elected or conceded elections in the following constituencies:

Alexander; Athabasca; Beaver River; Bow Valley; Calgary (four seats); Camrose; Clover Bar; Cochrane; Coronation; Edmonton (four seats); Empress; Gleichen; Hand Hills; Lacombe; Lacombe; Ledic; Lethbridge; Little Bow; Macleod; Medicine Hat; Nanton-Claresholme; Okotoks-High River; Olds; Pincher Creek; Ponoka; Red Deer; Rocky Mountain House; Stettler; Wetaskiwin; Edmonton (one).

The Liberals returned were W. R. Howson, Provincial party leader in Edmonton, and John H. Bowlen in Calgary.

Premier Bracken, Calgary, was the lone Conservative in the new house.

The followers of Aberhart in Calgary held a thanksgiving service at the Bible Institute last night and Premier Aberhart made a plea for a spirit of co-operation.

Not one elected Social Credit candidate has had political party experience. They come from all walks of life, with farmers and housewives in the majority. There are also lawyers, doctors, preachers and teachers.

BENNETT CAMPAIGN TO OPEN SHORTLY

Toronto Aug. 24—The federal Conservative campaign will be officially inaugurated by Premier R. B. Bennett on September 6, it was announced yesterday. The address will start at 10 o'clock E.D.S.T. Two other addresses will be delivered on the same hour on September 9 and 11.

Three Guns Used In Labatt Kidnap Found in North

London, Ont., Aug. 24 (CP)—Muskoka gulf course a few days ago yielded three guns, said to have been used by the kidnappers of John Labatt, the Free Press said today.

They were reported to have been hidden the day after the London brewer was turned loose at a secret spot in Muskoka a year ago last month. The weapons carry "fall-tale" fingerprints, it was reported.

The paper learned from the same source McCardell whose reported confession frees Clarke Meisner, serving 15 years, and Kingston "Pistol Pete" Murray, awaiting trial, bought the chain used to tie Labatt to a bed in the Muskoka cottage where he was held prisoner.

The chain, it "was reported, was purchased at a local hardware store. At Meisner's trial several detectives were questioned whether Meisner and McCardell bought the chain in Port Carling.

The paper also reported McCardell did not implicate Murray in the abduction. Murray, a friend of Labatt's summer home at Bright's Grove a few days before the kidnap. A smashing, snapping duo pursued him. He thought it a big day and giving it to Labatt after he had been captured.

"I'll be a big watch dog I had," Labatt is said to have exclaimed when he heard this.

FORMER MAYOR OF BROCKVILLE DIES

Addis Ababa, Aug. 24.—(AP) Emperor Haile Selassie today ordered the civil population to evacuate the capital within a week. He acted on the belief one of Italy's first aims will be to bomb Addis Ababa from the air.

The Ethiopian Emperor also ordered all valuable property hidden in subterranean ayerna.

His order affects the capital's 130,000 residents but foreigners remained calm as some hastened to the League of Nations might yet save the situation.

Greeks Accuse Italians

Athens, Greece, Aug. 24.—(AP)—A Reuters News Agency dispatch said today inhabitants of Peserinos, island of the Dodecanese group, had been evacuated by Italian authorities.

The evacuation, the report said, was effected preparatory to converting the island into a military hospital base. The inhabitants were sent to a nearby island. The Press stated the Italians also were evacuating the islands as hospital, troop and munitions bases. The Greek people, expedition but Dodecanesian officials were reported to be actively attempting to conscript inhabitants and commandeering Greek homes and ships.

May Judge Ethiopia

Paris, Aug. 24.—(AP)— Ethiopia may find the League of Nations judging her hinge of war if the Italo-Ethiopian dispute is brought before the Geneva Council tackles the problem of peace or war, September 4, it was learned today from reliable sources.

Both Premier Laval and Anthony Eden of Great Britain, told Baron Pompeo Aloisi Italy at Geneva that interference last Sunday they had certain "sympathy" with Italy's claims for expansion.

Since then, the observers said, Premier Laval has no inclination to limit to send Aloisi to the League Council session instead of defying it from Rome.

WARLIKE PLANS PUSHED FORWARD BY 2 COUNTRIES

France Foresees Italy Charging Ethiopia as Uncivilized

MALTA PUBLIC SHELTERS

British Admiralty Denies Mediterranean Fleet Strengthened

Italy and Ethiopia hurried forward in warlike preparations today and other Italians took steps apparently dictated by the belief that the impending conflict might not be localized.

The British admiralty denied the Mediterranean fleet would be strengthened but nevertheless announced the "routine cruise" program which actually will see British warships concentrated at strategic points by Sept. 1.

Italy concentrated 8,000 troops at Naples and Bari today, the biggest single shipment whose she started pouring troops and planes and warships by thousands into her East African colonies. Two sons of Mussolini and his son-in-law are in the Italian bombing division.

To make sure she was not weakening her home forces, she sent 150,000 men to the Austrian frontier, prior to the 180,000 others in a summary manoeuvres beginning Sunday under personal direction of Il Duce.

Protection of Malta

In Paris, it was predicted the crucial session of the League of Nations Council opening Sept. 4 would see Italy strongly defended by Premier Laval who has as an unofficial opinion that Ethiopia is uncivilized.

Laval's dominant purpose is to maintain France's friendship with Italy and to keep Mussolini ordered construction of public air raid shelters in every district of Malta.

Leaflets instructing the public in precautions to be taken in case of Italian air attacks from the air were distributed by police. This is in line with the air "preparation" campaign inaugurated in British some weeks ago.

EXPECT EARLY TREK BREAKUP

Ranks Thinned by Desertion And Internal Dissension

Bedeil, Ont., Aug. 24. (CP)—Remnant of the "On-to-Ottawa" trek of Ontario unemployed and disgruntled marchers sat around the railway station here today waiting to board a freight train to Prescott, At the same time it was learned the train would carry a squad of Royal Canadian Mounted Police ordered to keep with Ontario Provincial and railway police already on hand in preventing any possible trouble.

As the trekkers ranks have been thinned by desertion and internal dissension early break-up is expected by the police. Officers on duty had to quell a number of disturbances when marchers threatened during the night and this morning.

A group of twenty-five marched to Kemptville and demanded food from Mayor Gallagher. After all first the crews refused but later the mayor produced a load of bread, 13 pounds of cheese and some tea and cigarettes.

Trusses Up Accused, Hands Him to Police

Toronto, Aug. 24 (CP)—His ankles shackled and hands bound with ropes, Charles Jenkinson, alias Miller, was handed over to police today by Sydney Downyard and charged with automobile theft.

Downyard claims he saw the accused drive away his car. He followed for several miles in another vehicle and forced Jenkinson to stop, Jenkinson is alleged to have jumped out of the car and ran away but was covered by Downyard who tied him up with rope.

TRENTON REPORTS TWO ROBBERIES

Money Was Not Object in Either Case, Police State

Two robberies were committed in Trenton last night, when burglars broke open a filing cabinet and stole three unmailed letters while the second robbery saw the office of the Trenton Canning Company entered and one Iver Johnson .32 calibre revolver and 50 cartridges stolen. In neither case did money seem the object of the thieves.

In the private dwelling house three letters that had been written last night but not mailed, were taken and articles valuable in themselves being made to rifle the contents of other letters in the house. The letters were addressed properly, but had no stamps affixed. The burglars apparently gained entrance, police believe, through a rear door.

At the Canning Company's office, however, the robbers entered by means of forcing a side window and after ransacking desks and cartridges, no attempts were made to open the safe, overlooking the fact that safe making both robberies of a total of $2.50 in cash. The three mailers were reported by the Trenton police to the Provincial Police for further investigation.

Today the O.P.P. revealed, that Constable Ernest Hinton at the R.C.A.F. camp near Trenton some days ago, the same calibre and make of gun as the one of Jenkinson, that were taken along with the Iver Johnson, revolver at Trenton last night.

Retired Farmer Yearns for Old Days, Modern Men Getting Soft

"Roughing-It" in Old Times Described by Jacob Smith

Jacob Smith, all his life a hard ground farmer, left now retired after a lifetime of hard work in this district, particularly in the Township of Tyendinaga, mourns the passing of the real old fashioned farm hand to whom the four o'clock rising and the milking of the cows before breakfast were all part of the long day's work.

"People are getting soft, and modern machinery and radios and such are the ruination of the farms anymore. But the automobile has done more to bring unrest to the average back country farm than all the rest of the temptations put together," he ruminates.

"Time was when real good workers could be had, workers who wouldn't dream all day and then send another man home, and be able to get up next morning. Sure men can get farm hands now days, but the majority of them won't work unless they have regular union hours, a radio in the bunkhouse, and in the garage to go some place, every night, and then they'll come and tell me that on one farm up north somewhere the farmer has put in a radio on one of his tractors before he could get a regular man to run it.

Jacob Smith when he started farming used to toss before breakfast. He milked his share of the cows and prepared the milk for delivery for the factories and dairies. He ate breakfast by lamplight and called all part and parcel of every shadow breed "a regular nourishing farm." A bowl potatoes as much as it got light enough to see and often harnessed the horses in dairy dark. By noon he'd be a good day's work in, but was back in the fields 'roughin' stone' on a stone boat as late as to dynamite. When the crickets were chirping in the full dusklness of twilight he was still going strong and looking for more to do, according to his own statements and the other day as he sat and enjoyed an after dinner pipe.

"It was root hog or die on the farm forty and even thirty years ago," he says, "but I mind the summer other things nowadays and also the fancy wages being paid for farm help. Remember with an emphatic wave of the hand. "You didn't get any thrills, but I can say I begged the potatoes and roots and hoed them and dug them. If you had any git to you, you didn't go hungry in the winter because there was food for all. We used to pickle a barrel or so of salted herring for the winter, but I don't know what the people doing any of that sort of thing these days. I mind the time when I total grain on my own back to the mill to have it ground; and I mind the time when I used to get up and feed hens and eggs for breakfast before they go to work."

"Work, huh! There ain't no such thing as work nowadays. It's just diddle diddle around. A little bit this here and a little of that there, and then they call themselves busy and all of it. Young folks won't go or stay on the farm anymore. They want to hike off to the town and cities where they can wear soft hands and take up jobs with ease. They leave their pappy and mammy here alone and the poor old climbin' over the 'pot of the barn blocking the driveway."

"I'm ready to quit and let the rest of them carry on now. Maybe after the winter I'll sell out and quit. The fellow that comes out to look the farm I wanted to tell would get to know if there were any stones on it. Tch, tch, tch, sir," I told him as I cleared them off forty years ago in my spare time. That was 'back in the old days'".

DOG SAVES OWNER IN HOUSE FIRE

An alert mongrel dog, part setter and part spaniel, purchased by him as a pup a few months ago, saved the life of Mr. Frank Leggett of this city, when fire almost completely destroyed the front part of his home and furnishings at 192 West Bridge street early this afternoon four o'clock this morning.

Awakened by the frantic yelps of his pet, which raced from downstairs to his bedroom and jumped on top of the bed, Mr. Leggett, aware of fire, Mr. Leggett, who found the stairway in flames, fled to safety from the front of the residence, and choking with smoke, he carried the dog into his bedroom, barely managed to clothe himself sufficiently to leave the house by the verandah before suffocation overcame him. He was accompanied in his hurried exit from the blazing home by the loyal canine companion, who refused to be saved to the ground. Mr. Leggett, whose wife is away on this week was alone in the house.

Firemen who were detayed, it was stated through a wrong address given, arrived in time to find the front of the residence a mass of flames with the fire rapidly gaining ground. Through the heroic efforts of which they were able to confine the fire to the front portion of the house. The damage to the house and furnishings will be extensive, Part of the loss is covered by insurance.

"If it hadn't been for "Brownie" I might have slept right through it and been overcome by the smoke or burned to death," commented Mr. Leggett, who regards the dog as a pet was probably one of the best moves I have ever made."

Clinic is Held On Crossed Eyes

Neglect of crossed eyes or squint in early childhood may lead to blindness or almost complete loss of vision in the squinting eye.

This is the local eye physician had the opportunity of examining a number of little children at the clinic and found in all cases examined an amblyopia or dimness of vision in the squinting eye. This might have been different had these children's eyes been examined and treated earlier and proper glasses supplied and worn.

Children four years of age are not too young to be fitted with glasses which, aligned with normal eyes and early attention may mean fair or good vision instead of blindness or almost no vision.

Children so treated are given the necessary treatment for conserving existing sight in the young eye and for correcting and preventing potentially worn may do much to prevent the development of addition know as strabismus or squint.

In the advertisement regarding the Picton Rochester excursion published in this paper last week it was said "the Picton man would run another excursion next week." This should have read that Picton Band would run another excursion next week.

DRESSED HOGS SLIGHTLY DOWN

Peaches in Large Quantities Offered on The Local Market

The only noticeable change in market prices of late is that of hogs, which have dropped a cent from 8c to 10c per pound.

Butter is also a little largely attended by both sellers and buyers and considerable trading is done. Fruit and vegetables are the chief display made on the outside, with tomatoes, corn, and potatoes predominating.

The chief products in the fruit line were peaches, plums and huckleberries. Peaches were of the smaller variety retailing at 40c and 50c a basket.

Dressed chickens, eggs, butter and home cooking were in a wide range upon the interior of the market building.

A slight decline was noticeable in the local market, dressed hogs dropping 10c per cwt. at $13 and live hogs 10c per cwt., at $11.

THE FAMOUS BLACK DIAMOND PLOW POINTS

We specialize in Plow Points for every make of plow. Through our experience of many years we have developed a metal more than fifty years of experimenting, that will last longer than any other points we know of. They do about three times the plowing of the average point and will not break like the latter. Consequently they are more economical although they cost a little more. Therefore, a great deal cheaper; actually less than half the price per plowing by about four to one. Try them and be convinced. Why use anything else? Black Diamond Plow Points is our great specialty. We put our whole experience into it. Most hardware dealers are handling our points now. They are a standard, quick seller. Don't accept cheap imitations.

SOUTH END CLUB HAD BEGINNING IN SMALL WAY

Labor Day Program as Arranged by Club Will be Memorable

Commencing in a small way, just three and a half years ago, a small band of sport-minded fellows, brought into being the South End Athletic Club in Belleville, so-called because their quarters were in the south end of the city. Under the sponsorship of the Wharf St. Debating Club they commenced to train young boxers shy by the second year were giving the fans their money's worth in boxing. At the same time they joined with King Rogers, Capt. Watson and Arnold Thomson in sponsoring rolling, incidentally taking in other sports such as ladies' and men's softball and hockey, etc.

As time went on the executive officers built the foundation of a sound sports club and finally decided on a larger clubhouse, building on the old Hendon coal yard, the South End Athletic Club House. After two years this building 31 x 38 was found to be too small again, so the members went into a huddle and the present clubhouse is the result, a two-storey building 43 x 60 in size, with a 6 ft. basement which is nearly completed, built entirely by volunteer labor, the same as the previous club-house.

Over the basement is the main floor measuring 1700 sq. ft. without a post (thanks to Mr. Thomson, architect) with the ceiling and walls agitsetting white with the new plaster and the woodwork painted a dark oak. A one-inch hard maple dance floor is rapidly nearing completion. This floor is being laid in a circle and dancers will know what is meant, that is to them.

Above this floor, at the Front St. end is the Ladies' room, reached by stairs from the main floor. Behind this room is to be the members' locker room, followed by the Executive and Secretary's office and at the waterside end in the Members' Room where the fellows can spend their time and have their meetings. This will be reached by a stairway on the south side, leading from the verandah which will be placed on the south and west sides of the main floor giving a clear view of the activities on the river. On the west side facing Victoria Park is being built a dock 80ft long and although not finished yet is being used extensively by visiting boats.

During this progress, the membership increased from thirty members until at present there are two hundred and eighty on the books and the members felt that with the increasing popularity of baseball in the district the name of the Club should be changed, and at last week's regular meeting it was decided to call it "The Belleville Athletic and Yacht Club."

As a yacht club would not be complete without a regatta, a regatta was decided on and as Labor Day was the day the old club used for its Annual Regatta, that was chosen for The Belleville Yacht Club's 1st Annual Regatta.

Commencing at 10 A. M., the smaller sailing boats, comprising 16 ft. punts, C Class, D Class, Snipes and Cruisers will race around the regatta sailing course, whilst off the Park, the girls and boys will compete in the swimming races, these will be open to all in two classes, under 14 years and over 14 years, followed by diving for girls and boys under 18 years. After lunch, commencing at 2 P.M. a series of canoe races are arranged for, by which time Dutch should be ready and an intermission will be called until 2 P. M.

At this hour, the feature of the day, the Picton Motor Boat Club will commence its races, these races will include the 210 Class, the Class Inboard, and Class Outboard with a Free-for-all, altogether eight races. In between these races at 2.30 P.M. the remainder of the Swimming Races for the Boat Club Classes will start on their way, encircling the course three times.

At 3.30 P. M. the Canoe races for all under 12 years will be run on the River in front of Leland's soap race and at 4.30 P. M. these will be followed by the tilting contest, a good laugh at the greasy-pole which Jim Cook guarantees will be well greased, with perhaps a few nice tilting exhibition to wind up with.

All of this entertainment which is free to the citizens of Belleville and District, will naturally be expensive to the Belleville Yacht Club, so to raise the necessary funds, the Club is putting on a Grand Euchre and Dance and Carnival Opening of the New Club-House in the evening commencing at 8.30 P. M.

Twenty-one prizes are being offered, the first prize being a Console of a Stewart Warner Radio valued at $114.00. Citizens of Belleville are asked to give this their full support, some having already done so, having donated nearly $600 in the past few months to enable the members to raise the money for their building, but more is needed yet, and if there is any surplus from this it will be used to be applied to the Building Fund.

VEHICLE STRIKES STANDING FREIGHT

W. Donnelly, London, Killed One Seriously Injured

St. Thomas, Ont., Aug. 23—(CP)—William Donnelly of London, 100 Broughdale Avenue, is dead and two persons are in the hospital, one suffering critical injuries, following an early morning crash when the car in which they were riding struck a standing freight train on the Pere Marquette Railway crossing at the southern edge of the city.

Floyd A. Nesbitt of London (111 Richmond street), was the most seriously injured. Donnelly's wife suffered from shock and other injuries. His son, Francis, was badly cut but his condition was not serious.

The four were in a car driving north from Port Stanley to London on Highway number Four. The car skidded for about 60 feet, swerved around and the right side crashed into the train.

Unaware the automobile had crashed, the crew moved the train on. The brakeman was reported to have shouted to a passing train; there was an automobile on the track and he did not know whether the train had struck it. Engineer E. E. Elliott of St. Thomas and Conductor A. S. Everts, also of St. Thomas, were in charge of the train.

Witness to the crash was Eric Nichols of London. Returning to the crossing, he found Francis Donnelly, the driver, wandering around in a daze.

As the train moved the car was heard above the train; they could not districate Mrs. Donnelly and Nesbitt from the car. Nesbitt was unconscious and Mrs. Donnelly in great pain. The car was generally pinned to the train. She was dead when they reached him.

Dr. J. D. Curtis, Acting Coroner, prepared to conduct an investigation.

Prayers for Rainfall Answered in Maritimes

EMPEROR MOVES TO GUARD THRONE

Haile Selassie Has Been at Loggerheads With Two Rivals

Harrar, Ethiopia, Aug. 24 (AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie has taken quick steps to remove the danger of losing his throne to two of his rivals with whom he has been at loggerheads since 1932, it was reported yesterday.

Fearing if the Italians invade Harrar they might attempt to release the pro-Italian Ras Hailu and make him King of Godjam Province under an Italian protectorate, the Emperor is reported to have ordered Ras Hailu's bodyguard to Arrussi Province in Ankober, ancient capital of Ethiopia, 100 miles from Addis Ababa.

Ras Hailu, once the richest and most powerful chief in the Empire, was imprisoned by the Emperor in 1932 for coveting the throne.

It is reported in Ethiopia Baron Franchetti, Italian aviator, recently pilot-ed to rescue Ras Hailu by plane. Emperor Li Yasu (Child of Jesus) whom Italians in Ethiopia recently reported dead, is said to have been ordered by Haile Selassie removed by soldiers from Nazimata, near Harrar, to Addis Ababa to frustrate any attempt of the Italians to free Li Yasu and restore him to the throne.

Madman Amok, Shoots, Slashes Three are Dead

Amisk, Alta., Aug. 23.—(CP)—Samuel Hollis, 75, prominent farmer near here, and his housekeeper, Mrs. Emma Cleeg, were shot and killed at the Sarcight home in the Amisk district early today by Donald Canadian Mounted Police said, ended his own life after attempting to slay two hired men in the Sarcight home.

Constable Hollis, 27, one of the hired men, was shot in the thigh but barricaded himself in an upstairs hallway in the home as Larsen approached, and then following his brother, Sam, 25, leaped from a window to safety. A few minutes later Larsen cut his throat and shot himself, police said.

Had Argument

Police said Larsen was Sarcight's hired man for seven years and left the home Tuesday following an argument. He returned late last night and found everyone in bed. He shot Sarcight, through a closed door, leg and thigh, cut his victim's throat and shot him twice more through the back.

Then he went to the room of the housekeeper, who had been at the home for a month, shot her in the head and cut her throat, police said. By this time Cornelius and Dan McGregor were scrambling down the upstairs in an effort to escape and one bullet caught Cornelius in the hand a moment before he escaped through a window to the ground.

Larsen followed into the room, after they had escaped, then cut his own throat and shot himself in the head, police said.

Amisk is one hundred and fifty miles southeast of Edmonton on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

France is Anxious Lest Sanctions Stand Rouse Mussolini

(By Robert S. Parker)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Aug. 24.—Anxiety was expressed in French official circles today lest Britain's threat of sanctions bring about a deadlock over Italy.

The British Cabinets' determination to exhaust all diplomatic possibilities in search of a solution for peace was welcomed as strengthening the French Premier's conciliatory hand.

Hopes found seriously threatened until last night were reported out of Geneva.

STABLE LANTERN USED TO LIGHT UP STREET AS TOWN ECONOMIZES

Weston, Ont., Aug. 23 (CP)—Residents of Weston, a suburb of Toronto, have not taken kindly to the council's idea of economy.

The town took on a ghost-like appearance when street lights were turned out and one citizen placed a stable lantern on a pole at one of the main street intersections. One theatre hung out lights in order that people might help find their way along the streets.

AT EX. FIRST BUT GOT NO CLOTHES

Toronto, Aug. 23 (CP)—Charles Clark, 18, and his 13-year-old brother Leslie of Silverthorn, were discovered here today as they unwrapped themselves from thin blankets in which they slept last night outside the entrance gate to the Canadian National Exhibition. The lads who trudged from the Toronto suburb with the belief that the first arrivals at the Fair would receive suits of clothes were admitted to the grounds an hour earlier than the scheduled opening but failed to receive the expected clothing.

Suspicion has again fallen upon him and police are said to have picked up his trail. His arrest is expected shortly.

MERCHANTS ASK CASH FROM ITALY

Government Reported to be Slow in Paying For Shipments

Djibouti, French Somaliland, Aug. 24 (AP)—Travellers arriving here from Kenya, Egypt and the Sudan ask British and other merchants in those districts who had sold large quantities of foodstuffs, timber, oil, motor trucks and livestock to the Italian army no longer would extend credit to Mussolini.

They explained the Italian government had not yet paid for supplies furnished the Italian armies in Eritrea and Italian Somaliland six and eight months ago. Merchants now demand cash on delivery.

A British company in Kenya colony received bills the Italian army $1,000 cattle to provide meat for Italian soldiers. The company is withholding further deliveries.

Scandinavian timber company in Kenya said the Italian army purchased supplies of timber during wood with which to make tropical helmets for the Italian soldiers in Eritrea and Italian Somaliland. The head of an Italian firm, one of the merchants arriving here, went to Rome in an effort to obtain payment. He returned with only encouraging promises, several good dinners, and a decoration.

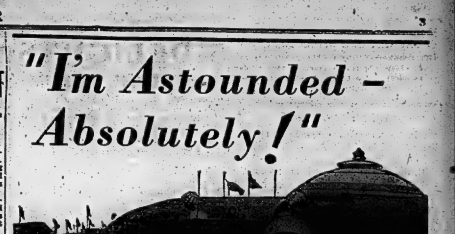
Citizens Indignant as Nudist Society Swears Out Warrant for Peeking

Long Valley, N.J., Aug. 24 (CP) —The 300 residents of Long Valley were in a fury of indignation yesterday as the North Jersey Health Institute, a nudist camp on Schooley's Mountain, five miles from here, it seems the institution has sworn out a warrant for the arrest of Dr. Will Searles, whose property adjoins the camp.



Searles said he had been picking blackberries near the fence which separates his land from the camp and he had seen several men and women running about with no clothes on. He had shouted across the fence to the nudists they were behaving improperly, he said. He received a laughing reply from a young woman in the group advising him to take off his clothes and "Come on over," he related.

Searles said he turned his back and started picking berries when he heard the warrant accusing Searles of trespass.

It was not Mr. Searle's first encounter with the nudists, however, a month ago he was walking with his wife on the Chester road when a group of nudists passed. While the man was searching for his wife, the women fled, screaming and growls. He rushed to the origin of the uproar and discovered Spike had treed a woman whose garments were remarkables only by their absence.

One Brower who owns the Long Valley filling station and is a crony of Searles described his friend's reaction as follows:

"When Will found those naked woman sittin' up there in the tree he run home a hollerin'!"

"I'm Astounded — Absolutely!"

Confessed Mr. Picobac

Dressed in his Sunday best, Mr. Picobac was paying his first visit to the Canadian National Exhibition.

Halting for a moment to chat with a salesman in a tobacco and cigarette booth with whom he had formed a passing acquaintance, Mr. Picobac surveyed the passing throng.

"I've been to fall fairs before now", said he, "—plenty of them. Down in Essex Centre we have a fall fair every year—but nothing like this. I'm astounded—absolutely astounded."

Mr. Picobac had just finished a pipe and was now contemplating another.

"I must say I congratulate you folks up here in Toronto for the way you take to Picobac tobacco. Never in my life have I seen so many nice looking stands where you could buy Picobac. If there's any place where a man enjoys a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke every little once in a while, it's at the Canadian National Exhibition."

MUSSOLINI MODERN CAESAR

Who is this man who turns a deaf ear to those who would bring about a peaceful settlement of the Ethiopian situation?

This man Benito Mussolini is the reincarnation of the Caesar of Ancient Rome: during the course of his unbelievable thrilling career he has changed the whole course of history. His life story reads like some Homeric epic.

HIS LIFE WAS RICH

In the universal sorrow and appreciation of the life of Will Rogers, in the lauding of the life and character of the humorist, the clean-living, the home-loving, the folks- understanding clown, the keen, kind, searching, clean philosopher of common things, the man who depended on truth not on tricks, the man who was a generous giver of time and money for every good cause, there came but one jarring note, sounded by a Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers of Los Angeles, who lamented according to the press that Will Rogers seemed to lack faith in immortality. Dr. Myers is credited with saying "The tragic incident in Alaska was tragic to the last limit, for I knew one of those men personally. Will Rogers was one of the keenest intellects, one of the finest men, one of the best of all friends, one of the greatest Americans, and one of the greatest of his kind, the only one of his kind. He had a wide soul, but the saddest part was that he knew nothing at all about the real riches of life, the riches of faith on time."

Dr. Myers may believe that, but not many will follow him. How different was the tribute of the great Evangelline Booth, General of the Salvation Army, when Mrs. Rogers she called "All America will mourn the loss of his great heart so quickly touched to generous deeds and sorrows, and your own grief will be overwhelming. But we remember Christ has abolished death and pours resurrection life into the souls of those who put their confidence in Him. He will be your comforter and strength."

In a second cable sent to the headquarters of the S. A. in the United States General Booth said of Will Rogers: "His passion for all good causes, the soothing influence of his gentle humor softening many of the asperities of our national life, and his love of humanity will be sorely missed. I mourn his passing. His staunch and generous support of the Salvation Army was a great comfort to me in many years." Public evidence of his friendship for us was in March last, when in response to my cabled request he acted as master of the ceremonies on a nation-wide radio program dedicated to the Salvation Army. He was a great soul."

The public, the thinking and feeling public, will bank on the words of General Evangeline Booth.

Flaws may be picked in Will Rogers as in any man, but the sum total of his heart, his unfailing sense of life and character and of the plays and entertainment in which he figured—everything spelled the man who was always trying to live the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount. Of no living and of no departed man did Rogers say what Dr. Myers said of him. What Rogers once said was "I never met a man I did not like."

Will Rogers loved mankind and this life so heartily and he lived it and expressed it so clearly that perhaps he did not need to give expression to views on the after-life, because he was dealing in life and in the now. He was a man who loves his neighbor loves God. Some men are silent on the great underlying truths; because they live them they do not need to speak the words which merely express what transcends the power of words to convey. A life is greater than any creed or doctrine as it is greater than any institution. Greed, institutions, creeds, formula and shell for the great inner truth. That Will Rogers caught in his sympathy for man a view of the spiritual world, God and who can say he did not, he realizes. That he knew and experienced the riches of life, they are confident. Millions mourn him. Does not their grief attest the discovery of love which he built up while he was among them? This sorrow was not the pretence of a servile populace for a dead dictator, but the outpouring of affectionate remembrance of a great human brother who had demonstrated his love of mankind.

In what better way could Will Rogers have expressed his belief in immortality and in life's truths than in the development of his great talents so to win life's only crown, the "well done, good and faithful servant", in cleanliness of life, in charity, in love and in kindliness?

Deep souls are like deep streams. They do not chatter, they are deep because they have their beds in the solid and rich foundation of life. They take life's great verities for a fact, and do not need to pronounce on them at every hour of the day for their lives attest their faith. In his deeds and in his outlook, in his moments when he was with himself, there is no doubt that in his soul there was but one prayer as regards himself" for some humble home among the sheltering mansions" where he might "find at last beneath Thy trees of healing the life" for which he longed. The new life which has begun for him is but the continuance of that great and humble beginning of life which he lived on earth.

Superstition renders a man a fool, and scepticism makes him mad. — Henry Fielding.

GLADIOLI

I haven't sunken gardens, but I have a goodly store
Of flame and gold and saffron blooming by my cottage door;
I haven't hot-house orchids, but my gladioli plot
Makes a riot of rich colour in my little garden lot.

I haven't costly paintings, but my gladioli, tall,
Like a thousand lamps of beauty, light up my garden wall;
I haven't one rare canvas, but upon my garden sod
Are immeasurable pictures painted by the hand of God.

I haven't teeming orchards, but the fairy queen of June
On each awak'ning blossom make my wonder burst anew;
I haven't gold or treasure, but I have a sweet repose
And joy beyond all measure in my gladioli rows.

THE BIG FAIR IS ALMOST HERE, the Bigger and Better Belleville Fair, gathering strength and glory as the years pass and providing a bright and brilliant week to which our summer season and higher is the fall. Thousands of our neighbors from the country attend Belleville Fair every year and thoroughly enjoy themselves. There is no question to know or say that if the citizens of Belleville patronized Belleville Fair as well as the folks from the rural districts this Fair would be the best small city fair in Canada by long odds. We are proud of Belleville and wish to be classed as Belleville Builders and here is a chance, right here, to join our cousins from the countryside in a real and lively interest in Belleville Fair. If we only invest one dollar, that means five admission tickets, and a daily attendance at the fair. Larger attendance would encourage the officers who have so faithful served the fair through good and bad times, and the effect would be a bigger and better fair each year. Citizenship entails loyalty, loyalty means attendance and active support of all municipal undertakings. Let's all go every day.

GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK STOOD FOR NINETY YEARS ON THE FLOOR—Tick, Tock, Tick, Tock — stopped short never to go again when the old pioneer of Belleville Town Clock stopped short but surely not, never to go again, because some old man died or didn't die, or because the City Fathers do not realize that the Town Clock striking the hours has become a civic institution, just as necessary to the life of Bonnell, Dundas and many citizens of the old school who have helped to build up Belleville and love the old town and all it contains. Get the Town Clock striking again or its silence threatens to become an issue at the civic elections.

A YANKEE MOTORIST PARKED alongside of the broad highway in the early morning—along came a truck and trailer from the west and the sun shone brightly in the eyes of the truck driver. Behind him came a car from the East, the car from the east and the truck from the west met opposite the parked car of the Yankee. With the sun in his eyes the truck driver did not see the car from the east until right on top of it and the car from the east did not see the truck from the west on account of the parked car. The truck driver pulled over so far the trailer went into the ditch and scattered merchandise to the four winds. The Yankee and his wife awoke to find themselves the centre of destruction and profanity. The police arrived and the Yankee was arrested for negligence—taken to Trenton and because he was a stranger in a strange land was let off with a light fine. Moral, do not park on a public highway—in the first place it's a poor place to sleep—somebody's liable to come along and push your car into the discard and possibly you into Heaven—if that's where you're ticketed to. You are liable to cause an accident and wake up in a damage suit—anything is liable to happen. You might almost as safely go to sleep on a railway track. Pull off the road on some grassy spot, or up a side lane, or anywhere off the main travelled highway —and avoid trouble.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT
by T. E. LAWRENCE

The splendid blaze spreading His village was the key to the His village was the key to the bridge. He described the position; the large guard; how it was placed, obviously the problem was harder than we had believed. If his tale proved false he was very sure to die. We had hard work to assure him of our enlightenment. His effect became, he said, were loyal Turks, and some of the non-commissioned officers. Nuri Shaalan was more close to the village, and he there secretly with his own people, and one or two last men hid in his room. He would call his subordinates one by one to see him; and, as each entered, our ambush might pinion him.

Nuri approved the proposal. Gesticulating with the points of his daggers he described the position of the guards, and the number of camels. He would be very busy, he said, with the sentry at the gate, and the two others would be in the village, one in the coffee-shop and the other with the Camel Corps lieutenant. They would be sitting on the ground, with their backs against the wall of the coffee-shop. Behind them, on the roof, would be the machine-gun. Nuri would call the lieutenant out to him, and, as he turned, would shoot him with his pistol. That was the signal for the attack. Nuri would kill the sentry at the gate, and the machine-gun would open fire on the coffee-shop. Meanwhile the men in the village would be attacking the Camel Corps lines. They would be sleeping, and their only weapons would be their rifles. Nuri would kill the officer, and the men would be ours. Then we would attack the machine-gun from the rear, and the business would be finished.

Slow work, and when at last we were ready a new visitor appeared, the boy-chief of Tell el Shehab. He was a fine-looking boy, about fifteen, with a handsome face and a proud bearing. He described the position of the village, and the number of camels. He would be very busy with the sentry at the gate, and the two others would be in the coffee-shop, one with the Camel Corps lieutenant and the other with the machine-gun. He would call the lieutenant out to him, and, as he turned, would shoot him with his pistol. That was the signal for the attack. He would kill the sentry at the gate, and the machine-gun would open fire on the coffee-shop. Meanwhile the men in the village would be attacking the Camel Corps lines. They would be sleeping, and their only weapons would be their rifles. He would kill the officer, and the men would be ours. Then we would attack the machine-gun from the rear, and the business would be finished.

Nuri Said offered to take the place of the boy-chief. He had bombs enough, and pistol flares; numbers and preparedness would be on our side. It was a fair enough bet; but it was at the game of reckoning up the value of human beings as a matter of life, and as usual finding it too dear. Of course most things dear to life were too dear, and we should have followed good example by refusing the gift, but we could not bring it. But I was secretly and disciplinarily proud of the planning of our campaign. I was told that I voted against it. We had today three sides to the bridge—building railway; and the bringing here of the Afuleh garrison was a third would be death-trap, without room to right or left, narrow, tortuous, and slippery with the dried water. In front would be our first with our men, their trained eyes attentive to every movement, their hands whipping out camel-guns. In front of us was the waterfall, whose boiling roar had given the character to that unforgettable night with all the noises drowned. If anyone attempted the bridge from the south-west of the ravine. Only the night in front of us was free from the noise flooded up oppressively and without end.

We crept very slowly and carefully now, sometimes on our knees for a while, then on our bellies, our soldiery snaked along, holding their bridles. Also we assembled enough for camels moved always softly at night, and we had posted them in the rear, with the sides of the descent and passed over; but the depth was great, and all risen of the water, and we saw only dimness and the pale vapour rising from the boiling pool. Somewhere down there was the railway, and we stopped there in our tracks, for that was the deepest trap. Three of us, went foot by foot down the rocky hill-side till we could hear voices. Then suddenly the smoke broke and shifted, and we looked down on the railway, the bridge, and the guard. Immediately below us in the valley, Our own men were getting out of their trains, and were preparing their bivouacs. Consequently, the airmen reported that we were very numerous, and only eight or nine thousand strong, and that our reinforcements seemed to be directed towards every direction at once.

Nuri Said offered to take the place of the boy-chief. He had bombs enough, and pistol flares; numbers and preparedness would be on our side. It was a fair enough bet; but it was at the game of reckoning up the value of human beings as a matter of life, and as usual finding it too dear. Of course most things dear to life were too dear, and we should have followed good example by refusing the gift, but we could not bring it. The Bay. D. Mitchell is visiting friends in Toronto.

Classes at Loretto Convent will reopen on Sept. 1st.

The Canniffon bridge was closed to traffic yesterday; a new floor is being put down.

Letters to the Editor

BISHOP'S PALACE

To the Editor; Ontario Intelligencer:

Many citizens of Belleville and vicinity are not aware of the fact that the village of Bellefonte possessed a bishop's palace from 1833 to 1839. In 1833 the union of the British Wesleyan Methodist denomination and the Episcopal Methodist denomination was formed, with a number of clergymen and members of the Episcopal Methodists refused to go in the union, including John Reynolds, and in that year he was elected superintendent and consecrated Bishop of the Episcopal Methodist Church.

The bishop's residence was in the new brick building standing on the east side of Front Street near the Upper Bridge, at which time all the land fronting northerly from this building between Front and Pinnacle Streets, was a farm.

A daughter of the bishop, a maid John Reynolds married a man named Greenwood residing in the vicinity of Whitby and these two became the ancestors of the present Hon. Baron Hamer Greenwood of England, who is now Lord Lieutenant of the British Government.

Hamer Greenwood after graduating from Toronto University went to England where he did newspaper work and being a fluent speaker, he was elected a member of the House of Commons and later acquired his present title.

The Episcopal Methodists of the above mentioned date flourished and later entered the union of the Methodist Church which afterwards became one of the members of the United Church.

The Episcopal Methodists in this vicinity were very active workers and their zeal brought into existence Albert College, which was incorporated in 1857. The name was at first the Belleville Seminary, but later changed to Albert College and given University status and granted the privilege to confer degree of Bachelor of Arts. The University achieved considerable prominence in various occupations. It never had a large attendance, but the students and teachers were brought into close personal contact with the result that students received a training which probably equalled more than would be obtained in a large institution.

The Bishop's Palace was afterwards acquired by the late Rev. Alexander Coyle who for many years carried on a hotel in the premises under the name of International Hotel.

On account of its early association with the Church this property might be acquired by the Methodist Church for a museum in which to house interesting historical relics.

Perhaps some of our citizens might be willing to donate such things as they present it to the City for a general museum in which to preserve valuable relics of historic interest.

Citizens and visitors would no doubt willingly contribute a small fee for the pleasure of entering a pioneer relic gathered from Quinte District sufficient to maintain it.

W. G. Mikel, K.C.

Belleville.

GRANDSTAND ACTS TO THRILL CROWD AT ANNUAL FAIR

Entertainment Includes Features of Superior Merit

To speak of it as a spectacle, stupendous, yes even colossal, is the only manner in which to introduce the program to be presented in front of the grandstand at the Belleville Fair this year. Never in the history of the local autumn exhibition has there been such a galaxy of big time celebrities to appear on a local stage. Acrobats, acrobats, tricksters, comedians, canny mimics, song and dance teams all to be centred on one stage before the grandstand and climaxed with the most dare-devilling feat ever presented in Belleville, a gymnastic exhibition 110 feet up in mid-air by four of America's outstanding aerialists, are but a few of the feature attractions at the Belleville Fair that swings open its gates on Tuesday next, with performances twice daily.

Included on the program are the Original Gold Dust Twins, a black faced pair of comedians who class themselves as America's riot of buffoonery. These fellows is a comedy bonnie skit that is sure-fire laugh-maker. It fittingly chases away the blues and makes you forget the depression days. These two outstanding comedians also present a lengthy song and dance act that is of the highest calibre. Their dialogue is rapid-fire while their jokes are gloom-chasers. Next they present colored burlesque in clowning and trick acrobatics culminated by a hilarious game that brings tears of laughter to even the most skeptical.

No introduction is needed for the feature attraction to be presented before the grandstand—"Four Lovelies," a stirring novelty of the air combining the outstanding features of a super-sensational character in their breath-taking accomplishments. Their feats as aerialists while travelling at dizzy pace atop a 110 foot trapeze are more than breath-taking. This fearless quartette of entertainers will also present performances of its kind ever witnessed before in Belleville, their exhibition on the seeter-board by the Diving Pendletons is exciting as well as educational.

Those who are interested in watching with interest the precision with which the horses are driven through the air always alighting in the proper position, do continue their act. It has been termed as "the ballet of the air." Then the exclusive company John in a breath-taking exhibition of hilarious acrobatic feats of comedy and balancing to close the greatest set of its kind ever to be presented here.

Comparable? Yes, they will have two of the world's most outstanding comedians at the Belleville Fair in the persons of the famous Gaudsmith Bros. of New York City. These funny fellows have actually appeared before the crowned heads of Europe and they are the laugh of the ages. The Gaudsmith Bros., themselves are a riot of fun, but couple with them the French Poodle dogs—Carlo and Major—well words fail to express just what comedy these two petite canines add to this comedy skit. The Gaudsmiths are trained as well as as comedians, but when it comes to trained dogs, Carlo and Major actually take first place in the hearts of all lovers with their cute little tricks they continually slip over their master and actually show them up before a packed house. A stand, it is indeed a real treat — so forget all of your worries and come to the grandstand at the Belleville Fair for two days and thrs se features and fun-makers, but before one of the attractions appear that will surely dispel the blues and make you young once again.

Then for the kiddies, and the children always have to be considered at the Belleville Fair, there is the great midway—that place of amusement par excellence. This year the Belleville Fair board promises the City midway with all of their rides, concessions and entertainments for both young and old, but that is another story and aside from the great attractions of the grandstand.

The acts to be presented in front of the grandstand are supplied by the George Hamid Amusement Company of New York and they include some of the best in their line. Mr. Hamid, personally visited the Belleville Fair, personally visited the Ontario Exhibition series this week in order to witness personally the acts that are playing there and also at the Belleville Fair next week. "All I have to say is that the Fair I saw today is truly far surpassed anything ever previously attended in that line and I know the patrons to frequent the grandstand at Belleville will agree with me when they witness the acts here next week," commented Mr. Ketcheson this morning.

Belleville's Men's Chorus, under direction of Ross Hunter, which will render special vocal programs at Belleville Fair in that big house on the Verdigris river-bank. After Will was born, he had to be fed on a bottle. He was named William Penn Adair Rogers, after a Cherokee leader. His mother wanted him to be a Methodist preacher.

LIFE STORY OF WILL ROGERS

Willie, as the youngster was called, had three sisters and a brother when he was born, but his fifteen-year-old brother died of typhoid when Willie was still on his bottle. That left him the only boy in the family of girls, a fact that was to have bearing in the shaping of his sensitive, but assertive character. The girls names were Sallie, Maude and Effie.

To outrage his wife and daughters, Clem Rogers liked to take Will-ie's bottle away from him and then hand it to his sister Sallie, somewhat as his father had taught him, so that, Clem Rogers" the boy's mother would order, "Why, let's see you kick to hear it!"

What Mrs. Rogers hated most was that her husband usually picked on her when there was "company" present at the start his act. Many neighbors were always calling on her, for she was popular with them. They liked her funny stories and her dry wit. As in the case of Mark Twain, it was from his mother that Will derived much of his sense of humor.

She was religious, however, in the best Presbyterian style, and what she was wrought in the Rogers' ranchhouse when Willie was able to go prowling about!

What he liked best to explore was his sister Sallie's box of cosmetics. Sallie, now eighteen and through school, was teaching.

He was too short to reach the box if he stood on the floor, so as he grew strong enough he pulled out a drawer from the bottom of the bureau, and stood on it.

When his mother found him and jerked him away he complained: "But I got to have some pot-on-ya-face. I GOT to," as a man, when he feels the need for a drink, had access to all the "put-on-ya-face" he wanted, and never used it.

In rearing Willie and keeping him out of trouble, Mrs. Rogers had the help of a colored cook, Rhoda, and the cook's married daughter, Babe Walker.

Babe's husband, Dan, taught the boy the first he knew about roping.

"Now, now, Willie. That ain't the way to do it. Hold yo' rope thisaway," and he would demonstrate. "Try it, agin."

Willie did. He was somewhat proficient when Mrs. Charley Robinson of Tulsa, came one day to see the Rogers' new baby-grand piano. Willie rode into the dining room astride a stick horse, and began to rope as everything he could. First a chair, then a passing dining-room.

"Willie," threatened his mother, entering, "you put that rope up or I'll take it and wear it out on you!"

Willie, not to be outdone, one day make his living by twirling his rope, kept right on at his sport. His mother started for him, and he roped her.

"Willie!"

"Now will you be good?" Willie is said to have asked her, "you have to promise to be good and not spank me or, I won't let you go."

In the age of five years the specialists, a child's character has been pretty thoroughly shaped. But if Willie's character was shaped, his life wasn't, and in 1885 something happened that was to have an effect as long as he lived.

Last Days in Summer Camp Before Return to the City

Comes a general let down in spirits in the old town along about the end of August. Energy is on the sob. Lassitude develops. The commencement of the annual return of city folk to town from northern summer camps strengthens. Vacation time has about ended and anxious, mothers are thinking that the youngsters had better get back to town and become accustomed again to the daily routine of school life before school bells clang again from the door steps of the city-grown buildings. A dismal air of mounting and discouraging heaps of books and school necessities occupy the forefront position in stationer's store windows, and local advertisements in the daily papers feature the going-back-to-classes needs.

The children arrive, freckled and tanned and there is a full cry vigor. Proudly they advertise the new scout strokes they have learned and developed at camp.

Mothers and other admiring friends they display baby turtles and the snapshots taken in the canoe and out of it. "That's Lollie cover-ed with sand!" "That's Bobby! We got the porcupine quills in his nose!" Mothers are straightening up the summer accounts and issuing orders for the milkman to call again regularly. Father is in the end-of-the-season golf tournament, and the lawn mowers are being oiled from the front counters to make way for the fall undergrass specials.

Down in the marsh south of the city a bittern booms and small flocks of noisy grackles join to make larger ones. The reeds, tough and strong from a dry summer's bend under their weight. The baby sea gulls and terns born on Nigger Island have learned to fly and the Waterworks Park pond is full and plump after a summer of fatten-ing perch and sunfish. In the bayous and hides of the west side marshes are covering, gorging mean-while on the wild rice. Muskrats have long since turned to frogs, and in the field among the dry furry field mice snuggle content-edly under the standing stubble. Pumpkins are ripening and late corn rustles its leaves in the breeze. Upwind a coon whistles actily as he stirs himself on his evening prowl for fat cobs from the corn-field. By morning stripped leaves and husks by the weathered snake fence will tell where he has feasted.

It's milking time and down in the front pasture the Jersey leans her sturdy head over the rail and lows softly. Long ago it seems since their calves slapped noisily in the mud and bawled with sturdy protests; and the pair of shoats pur-chased last spring now lying contentedly in the rays of the sun which slant across the part of the yard where the open farm house door comes the aroma of pickling cukes and the sizzling of grits tackle the first of the fall crop of tomatoes, not caring air floats the white wood smoke like an offering of incense to the gods for bountiful harvest and rural peace.

Inside, the cheery glow of the old farm stove, and old-fashioned kettle bubbles and simmers on its top. Mother, busy canning rays, Old Sherp sprawls under-foot by the fire, inoculated with odors of which Thatcha had never smelled.

It was along about this time, too, that the water in the old mill pond began to get warm. The "Thatchs" in the back country which ran a muddy freshet in the spring were now reduced to a trickle, and along its sides dragon flies darted over the green carpets of scum. Killdeers on still-like legs hunted their meals, and when fire flies danced above its banks like tiny shoot-ing stars, fat bull frogs boomed out their evening concerts. Barefoot boys used to search the creek bed, for sometimes, in the deep pools there was the belief that gold could be found under some rock if one looked hard and earnestly enough. But at the foot of the hill where the stream gurgled down the little waterfall there was other gold in the old cheese factory, the golden curds freshly salted from the whey, and always the shade of the driveway roof in which to sit and munch and idly speculate on the passing hours and the chill knowledge of school just two weeks off. Beginnings and ends a harvest moon were just around the corner. The city family lawn mowers were sounding their last clacking symphony of the season. Tiny stone fenced beds were being razed gaily fully into unyielding boots again, and the summer camp crystals with the many patches was being changed to street clothes. Into the leafy glades and thickets of nearby woods the quiet somnolence of Wednesday afternoons and playgrounds of the city the word has spread. Summer camp is over. Everybody's back; school's just 'round the corner.

MINUTE INTERVIEWS

Mr. W. E. Rowsome, General Manager, Local Joint Stewart-Warner Alemite Corp;

"Saying that pumper was one of the best moves this city has ever made. I'm unqualifiedly in favor of it after seeing some of the convincing tests that have been made with the machine, particularly in the end of the line districts where water pressure has been very low. The way in which the city could recover some of the money spent on it would be to arrange with some of the smaller nearby municipalities for fire protection. Four or five hundred dollars a year might be realized in this way if the city would guarantee to attend fires outside the municipality with the pumper. Here's another thing while I am at it: Why not put some of these city unemployed to work on the job of creating new playgrounds for the children, instead of having the children play in the present bug-infested grounds. Suitable land could be chosen and the work performed cheaper just now, than it can ever be done. Another thing I'm in favor if is a general reconstruction of Victoria Park for the citizens. One thing badly needed is a good system of lighting. As present, it's a total loss".

H. P. Corning, South Bay, Long Island, Automobile Dealer;

"The day of rambling big homes high buildings and old fashioned hot air or steam heating systems is past. Every architect has seen this to be smaller, more compact and comfortable homes will be built in the few years, and I have even noticed that the new cars are so designed that are going up during my brief stay here. All conditioning is here to stay; that will be one of the biggest industries in this continent in few years. Heating will be done electrically, and inexpensive blower and condition systems will carry the heat to any part of the house without fuss and bother from outside of the home as at present. Even the smaller home builders are demanding this new way of every residence now, and the bathroom with the kitchen is getting the most attention from architects. Manufactured homes are also making a strong bid on the open market. People are finding in them the answer to complete comfort and economy".

Chas. Mott, City Engineer:-

"We must call to the attention of the general public in this city the fact that we have now in actual connection with John soon to be constructed here by private contract other than the landing of permits and inspection of the job during the many completed. We have nothing to do with the hiring of men on these jobs, though we are approached daily by applicants".

Jack Robbin Custodian of the City Clock:-

"Ask ninety per cent of the people in this city what the city clock needs and they will tell you that you metal. The other five per cent couldn't know. But they've only part metal. The hub is, but the rest of the hands are wood. They'll be on display somewhere in the city if I can find a place to put them. By the people to see for themselves. After that they'll be painted and put in place again. That doesn't happen often, but now is a good time to do so when the scaffolding is up. Then they'll try and get the clock bell again after they get through cleaning up the tower".

Ralph N. Taylor, New York, (Tourist):-

Although some of the ornaments on the front of modern high powered automobiles are undeniably beautiful, they are a distinct menace. On most automobiles the cap on the radiator happens to be about on the level with the average person's head, and if an individual is unfortunate enough to bump such an automobile, not only does injury follow, but to have one's skull pun-ctured by the radiator cap is the equivalent of a spear, adds to the peril. Automobile makers on such ornaments do not realize their great danger.

Louis Stone, Van Driver:-

The annual scramble of tenants to secure apartments and homes will soon commence. The rush of van owners to move the belongings of such tenants will soon be here. This annual jam occurring at the same time each year could easily be avoided if landlords would permit tenants to sign leases terminating August 1st, September 1st and October 31 instead of all ending on December 31. This would multiple in favor of the tenants as well as the landlords who would avoid several days' vacancies in locations and renters for overtime work on apartments which must be made ready for occupancy on October 1.

Wm. E. Mifflin, Barber:

Daylight Saving Time may be all right for the majority of people, but for the average barber it does-'nt work out so good. Each year we has a lot of trade from rural residents who generally arrive in especially Saturday night about the time we are closing up. Saturday night is always the busiest night in the week, the majority of residents from the rural sections forget that the city is on fast time and when they do get in they find most of the barber shops closed at the specified hours. Daylight Saving was not in force, then they would have that hour extra.

Lale Mrs. Fred Newman

Picton, August 24.—On Friday afternoon, August 23rd, a large gathering of relatives and friends attended the funeral at her home on King Street, of Minnie Worthington, widow of the late Fred Newman, who passed away early Wednesday morning in the General Hospital. Mrs. Newman, with her daughter, Miss Frida Newman, had enjoyed a trip to Labrador. One week previous to her death, as their boat docked at Montreal on their return trip, Mrs. Newman was stricken and rushed to the hospital where she never regained consciousness. She was in her sixty-second year. Mrs. Newman was born at Newburgh, Ontario, a daughter of Mrs. King of Croydon, and of the late William Warrington. She suffers a stroke in the spring of 1934 and had since never regained physical health. Mr. Newman passed away in February last, at West Palm Beach, Florida. Mrs. Newman was an active member of the United Church as long as her health permitted. A quiet, sincere disposition, she had many friends. She was a member of the W.M.S. and a past president of the "Circle-Day Band" of that society. Surviving are her son, Clair, her daughter, Frida, three grand children, Fred, Phyllis and Shirley Newman, her aged mother, and one brother, John Warrington, of Niagara Falls. The body was laid to rest in the Belleville Mausoleum on Friday afternoon.

Messrs. John Harrington of Syracuse, and Charley Wood (Cissy) Wood of Trenton have returned to their homes after an enjoyable visit with Mrs. Richard Harrington and other relatives in the county.

Recent visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Collier, Church street, were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wright of Belleville, Mrs. Patrick Carrol of Peterboro, and Mrs. Collier's sister of Tampa, Florida.

Mrs. A. E. Chaplin and son Rex, Belleville, are holidaying at the home of her father, Mr. George Collyer.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dekille and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Robinson spent Thursday at the Thousand Islands.

Mrs. Sidney Owens (nee Marion Hart) and baby son, are at Lake Ontario on Bridge Street from Toronto.

Several hundred people gathered near the C.S.L. dock at 10 o'clock Thursday morning to "see off" the crowd of twelve hundred who journeyed to Rochester on the S.S. Ontario Car Ferry No. 2. In spite of the sudden coolness of the weather and a strong west wind, the band played and the crowd left in very happy mood.

Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Walmsley and family are vacationing until September 1st at their farm home near Point Petre.

HEALTH INSTITUTE NEWS

The Encyclopaedia Britannica says, "Neuritis is a disease of the nerves" probably caused by a cold" — a blow-pressure sounds an attack of influenza or pneumonia in the system! Several things are suggested to relieve the pain, but hot air baths are the best thing they know of to "remove the cause".

If you who are suffering the tortures of Neuritis, Sciatica or Lumbago, would like to be free from pain, to be able to climb stairs easily, to raise your arms above your head again, to enjoy the comfort of eight hours pain free sleep, just phone 1162, or call at the Health Institute, and we will prove to you how easily and pleasantly it can be done! We have given relief to many others, and can do the same for you. We have accommodation for both out or three resident patients who will receive courteous, friendly treatment, graduate Nurse always on duty!

STIRLING FLOWER SHOW IS SUCCESS

Stirling, Aug. 24.—After weeks of preparation, and the untiring work on the part of various committees in charge of the different branches of it, the Stirling Horticultural Society held Thursday at Notre Dame Convent, Kingston, when the annual diocesan president, was in the chair, Miss Hurley spoke of the success of the national convention at Ottawa. Plans were arranged for the regular diocesan convention at Brockville in October. A vote of thanks was tendered to the Sisters of Notre Dame Convent for their kind reception to the ladies of the executive board and all their meetings throughout the year.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bonter and daughter Dorothy, of Selkirk, Man., are visiting at Mr. and Mrs. Ward's and Mrs. Fred Bonter at Crowe Lake for a month. Mr. Bonter is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bonter and was born and grew up in this vicinity. It is his first visit here in sixteen years. On Sunday evening a very pleasant relaying gathered at the cottage for an informal reunion. The Bonter family were among the early pioneer families of the District.

Following is a list of the prizewinners with the number after each name indicating the aggregate number of points gained by the exhibitors: Mrs. D. A. Burkitt, 19; Mrs. C. Bateman, 9; J. B. Belshaw, 5; Miss E. Donnan, 7; Mrs. A. Hammond, 6; Mrs. S. Kent, 21; Mrs. Milton Martin, 7; Mrs. F. N. McKee, 11; Mrs. R. Morrow, 19; Mrs. W. L. Munro, 19; Mrs. A. T. O'Connor, 3; Mrs. H. Traffic on the streets of the village has greatly increased in the last few days with the heavy trucks hauling filling from the farm of Mr. Claude Tucker to the Marmora Highway. About fifteen are employed in this operation and another other drawing crushed stone from the pit at Harold to the Frankford road which is about to be paved. The preparation necessary to get this piece of road in condition for paving has made it very rough and motorists find it better traveling to go around by Glen Ross when travelling south on the way to Trenton. But when these operations are completed it will be one of the most beautiful drives in the province to follow the pavement along the banks of the Trent. The only obstacle to it in the past has been the condition of the roads. There will no doubt be a large increase in the number of tourists when this pavement is complete.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Saddler and daughter of Frankford accompanied by Mr. Mrs. Ford and her sister, Mrs. Sine visited friends in Stirling on Thursday. Mr. Saddler who now resides in Frankford is a former resident of Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Reid of Sine, were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Frank Hulin on Thursday.

Mrs. A. B. McConnell and family have returned home after spending their vacation at Picton.

Mr. Fred Dewitt who has been attending summer school at Queen's University, Kingston spent Thursday visiting his sister, Mrs. Roy Eggleton, and Mrs. E. Vanwormer.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitty were put out of the running by a team from Frederick Chip in the second round.

The second game of the play-offs in the Centre Softball League in which was to have been played on the field of the Stirling Club was postponed at the request of the Minnie team and will be played at that place at a later date. The game was originally planned for Friday, July 23rd.

Stirling Horseshoe Pitching Club Defeat Trenton Team From Tweed

On Thursday evening the Stirling Horseshoe Pitching Club met with very decisive win over the visiting team from Tweed, to add to the already popular position in the Centre Hastings League. The locals showed class in every point and were never in danger of losing. A large party of the Stirling players and visitors watched the tournament from the sidelines, and though it isn't known the thing the score in these games, some of the Stirling fans certainly felt like it. The local boys romped through to win an easy victory with a score of 21-6. The weather being in a good mode it an excellent night for this sport. The Tweed team are out to retrieve but on this occasion the Stirling boys were too much for them. The line-ups were as follows—Tweed No. 1 Court, Shorey and Davis. No. 2 Court B. Clark and Lee. No. 3 Court A. Clark and Lee. No. 4 Court, Thompson and Bateman. Stirling players were —Fox, Mitchell; Lummiss and Reid; Butler and Dalzell; Cooley and Jeffery. Final score 12-4 for Stirling.

MRS. WARREN HARLOW MADOC JCT. BURNED WITH MELTING WAX

Madoc Jct., Aug. 24—Little Miss Gladys Clarke has been confined to the past few weeks at her grandparents', Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Dalzell.

Mrs. M. Hamilton, Rev. Bell, has been spending the past two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clarke.

A very successful Lawn Social was held at the Belleville Church Hall on Wednesday night of last week.

After everyone had enjoyed the abundance of ice cream and cake things to eat, a splendid program was given as follows:

Rev. H. Turner, the new pastor, kindly acted as chairman and after the opening hymn gave a short address.

Musical numbers on their guitars were given by the trio, Messrs Irvin, Bleecker and Price in Halloway. Solos by Mr. B. Hedley of Stirling; readings by Miss Dorothy Reid of Halloway; selections on the guitars by Misses Ruby and Pearl Hapley of Stirling; instrumental numbers by quartette, Messrs. M. Bell, L. Whitfield, E. Hapley and Waterfield. A short address by Mr. Armstrong, minister at Sidney Street Church; musical duet by Miss Christina Saunders on the guitar and Mr. George McMullen on the harmonica. Solo by Miss Patsy Lassing, of Stirling's National Anthem.

Mrs. Carl Reide and day daughter returned home from the Belleville Hospital on Sunday.

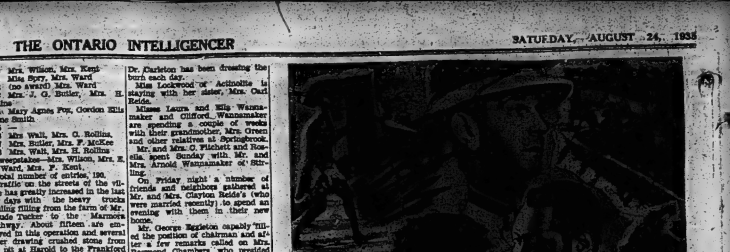
Mrs. Warren Harlow had the misfortune to burn her arm quite badly with the flame and burning wax from a candle on Friday night. Dr. Carleton has been dressing the burn each day.

Miss Lockwood of Actinolite is staying with her sister, Mrs. Carl Reide.

Misses Laura and Mila Wannamaker and Clifford Wannamaker are spending a couple of weeks with their grandmother, Mrs. Green and other relatives at Springbrook.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Pitchett and Rosella spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wannamaker of Tweed.

On Friday night a number of friends and neighbors gathered at Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Reide's (newly married recently) to spend an evening with them in their new home.



Mr. George Eggleton capably "filled the position of chairman and after a few remarks called on Mrs. Raymond Chapman, pianist, to open the piano and lead in community singing. Miss Penny Lansing and Miss Marion McMullen each gave a solo, and Miss Christena Beaudette delighted the gathering by giving a couple of selection on the piano. Mrs. Eggleton then called on Miss Margaret Danford who read an address.

Mrs. McMullen and Mr. B. Danford presented Mr. and Mrs. Reide with a lovely chesterfield, lamp and water set.

In behalf Mrs. Reide each made a suitable reply, thanking their friends for the gift and inviting them to visit them often.

Everyone joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows," after which the ladies served lunch.

A lovely time was enjoyed-the party and ice-cream treat at Halloway lodge room on Monday evening.

Scene from Edgar Wallace's best story "Sanders of the River," featuring Paul Robeson, Nina Mae McKinney, Leslie Banks, now at the Belle.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"Sanders of the River"

Thrilling Entertainment for the Whole Family

The British studios are now turning out a line of "supers" that can compare with anything Hollywood can do, and that means that all British pictures are epics.

"Sanders of the River" is that class. But Britain is now turning out a picture of really human and great films as America is turning out, that is, in proportion to total production.

The adjectives "great," "grand," "spectacular," "exciting," "gripping", all apply to Alexander Korda's latest effort "Sanders of the River" at the Belle theatre today and Monday, matinee daily at 2.30. It is the epic of the spirit of "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and the atmosphere and greatness of "Four Feathers" and tells the story of the British Colonial Commissioner Sanders, who by his hard work and profound understanding of the native was able to establish peace in his jungle district along the Upper Niger. Sanders, confronted by a huge native, Bosambo, a chief on probation, escapes from the prison and him as an escaped convict, Bosambo acting on Sanders' orders, stops the escape of the chief known as the Old King from slave trafficking and rescues among the slaves a beautiful native girl, Lilongo, whom he marries. It is a story of love and vengeance.

After a few years of comparative peace Sanders leaves to return to England to be married but he has not reached the coast before the Old King's warriors are on the warpath, the district is plunged in a turmoil as the false word is spread that Sandi (as Sanders is called by the natives) is dead. The white deputies left in charge are overwhelmed, Lilongo is killed by the Old King, and Bosambo's wife is kidnapped. Bosambo sends his children to Sanders and starts out alone to rescue or die with his wife.

That much of the plot we will take you all about halfway through the picture and is sufficient to show you that it is plenty colourful and filled with action. With the possibility of an early rain between Black and whites in Africa the background is especially timely and interesting.

As many as 30,000 tribesmen were in the cast, some of them paid only in cigarettes and chewing gum, and until they had seen the picture and chew it was impossible to get any work done.

Paul Robeson, already famous as a singer, proved himself an actor of distinction a couple of years ago in the filmization of "The Emperor Jones" but the role of "Bosambo" in "Sanders of the River" is an even greater triumph for him. Nina Mae McKinney, who has been on the screen since King Vidor's negro film "Hallelujah" shares his success.

Greatest interest, however, will probably centre in Leslie Banks, who plays Sanders, a role which should have placed him high in fame. Banks, as a boy, was trained for the church, but he discovered that this career did not appeal to him, so went to London to study art. He soon turned his attention to the stage and this time he found his niche.

"Sanders of the River" will be presented at the Belle today and Monday, with the latest World News, and a comedy Spiritual a Murray star personality comedy.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Baby Face Harrington"

Charles Butterworth in Hilarious Comedy Role

While Victor McLaglen as "Dick Turpin" continues his mad ride to York to save his sweetheart, and Charles Butterworth is scomed as being a super-gangster in "Baby Face Harrington" at the Capitol Theatre today, keen interest is being displayed by Belleville theatregoers in the double feature program that starts Monday.

Of unusual interest is the showing of "Beauty Doctor" in which Chester Morris, Virginia Bruce and Billie Burke are co-featured.

It is a romance contained within the four walls of a hospital, where an entire lifetime of love, drama and pathos are crowded into the brief span of a few days.

It tells the story of Dr. Morgan, young chief interne in an emergency hospital and of his friend enemy, Dr. Ellis, and their competition for the love of Bridget Wilson, pretty nurse.

Morris plays the role of Dr. Morgan, Billie Burke that there is no place in his life for love or marriage, Virginia Bruce is seen as the nurse. Dr. Ellis, the third member of the triangle, is portrayed by Robert Taylor, a comparative newcomer to the screen, who holds promise of becoming a big star.

The new drama is replete with thrilling action from its opening sequence when Dr. Morgan, with the high point of the story confronting when Dr. Morgan is shot by a gunman in the hospital.

A splendid cast appears in "Social Register" together with Morris and Miss Bruce, among the principals being Neil Hamilton, Walter Kingsford, Dorothy Peterson, Bob McWade and Sidney Toler.

What promises to be equally entertaining on the same program is the short subject entitled "White Lies" a romantic drama set in the turbulent years of the newspaper world, with Walter Connolly, Fay Wray and Victor Jory cast in the principal roles.

Briefly, the story tells of the career of Jimmy "Scoop" Mitchell, headline seeking publisher who drives a man to murder by ruining his sister-in-law in a series of sensational articles. Joan, Mitchell's daughter, played by Fay Wray, attempts to placate the victim of her father's ruthless reporting but as a result of circumstances is herself accused of the murder perpetrated by the crazed man. Terry Condon played by Victor Jory, a police officer in love with Joan, apprehends the real murderer and brings the exciting film to a dramatic conclusion.

Others in the cast besides the above mentioned are Lucien Littlefield, Irene Hervey, William Demarest and Robert Allen.

As is customary, each lady patron attending the Monday and Tuesday performances will be presented with an attractive piece of 18 karat Du Barry pastel, chinaware.

PICKING INTO WAR SHELL 18-FATAL TO FOUR

Venice, Aug. 24.—Four workmen were killed and four wounded yesterday when a road construction laborer sank a hole into an unexploded Great War shell.

JUNIOR ENTRY ELIMINATED

Frigidaire Team at Kingston Defeats Trenton For Second Time

Trenton Aug. 24.—(Special) — Trenton's last hope in the provincial O.A.S.A.C. play-downs was blasted last night when the hurler entry, the Whittall Can., dropped their second straight game to the Kingston Frigidaire team. On Tuesday the local team in the Limestone city by a 6-1 count and last night they were defeated 15-11 in a game that afforded the home plenty of excitement and more argument. The last inning was night ball without the aid of lights, leaving all added, the visitors have a better team and it was admitted that their both pitchers, Scrutton and Tallon had off nights. They are among the best in the league and the way the game in Kingston admit that the visitors were far off their regular game have last night.

Jack Kidd started for the Whittall Can but back had just returned from a sailing trip that day and was far below form. He was blasted from the mound in the fifth in favour of Niddery after the visitors had the score at 9-5.

Some argument ensued when the local base umpire, Ves "Chief" Baker, was in the opinion that Tallon was pitching illegal ball. After a holdup of fifteen minutes, the game was resumed but Tallon went wild and walked four batters in a row for Trenton's first run. Scrutton relieved Tallon but was touched for another and walked a couple and the next inning Tallon returned but he again was touched and Scrutton came back to finish the game. At the end of the seventh the locals had ten counters to the visitors thirteen but they could not get the extra runs to win the game.

Caitlin the fair-haired second baseman for the Frigidaire was the heavy hitter of the night with two homers and a double in six trips to the plate. Scrutton also had three hits. For the locals, Niddery led with a pair of safeties.

Herron looked weird given free trips to first in the several times that Tallon and Scrutton pitched to their turns. Five walks were given by the local hurlers while only the Kingston ber were struck out. The Kingston pitchers banded thirteen strike-outs in the nine innings.

The game ended the O.A.S.A. ball in Trenton for the season, as the Wonder Leafs were eliminated this week by the Belleville Aalmats in the first round of the Intermediate O.A.S.A. play-downs.

Trenton will now carry the Whittall Can team in a best out of three series for the honours of the town Cobley Cup, emblematic of the town championship.

PONIES DEFEAT PETERBORO 3-2

Finish in First Place And The Petes Meet Locals in Playoffs

Kingston, Aug. 24 —(CP) —Scoring their fourth straight night victory, Kingston Ponies finished the regular schedule of Central Ontario Senior Baseball League Friday night with a 3 to 2 victory over Peterboro. The win assured the Kingston team of the winner of the Peterboro-Belleville play-offs for the championship.

The game was a pitchers' duel between Rod Clancy and Jim Callaghine, with the Kingston hurler, Clancy, having a slight edge. The Ponies spotted Peterboro two runs in the first three innings, tied the score in the sixth when Quinn doubled with two on and then went in the eighth, when St. Louis smashed out a single to score Arnold with the winning run.

Two decisions of Umpire Corrigan in the fifth were disputed heatedly. When Manager Knotty Lee of the Peterboro team rushed on the field, Corrigan said, a policeman escorted him from the park. Corrigan also ejected Lee for using bad language.

Clever fielding by Ray Arnold appears was one of the features of the game. The Ponies' shortstop handled eight chances perfectly and started two double plays. At bat he walked three times and had a sacrifice.

Up Whaley, Peterboro, was scoreless team in the game was the only extra-base hit of the game.

ATTEMPT FLIGHT REC ORD OVER JUNGLES

With the world's non-stop distance flight record, now held by France, at 5,657 miles, Lieut. Antoine de St. Exupery, Lieut. Gilbert Moull, Lieut. Jean Dabry and James C. Prosser, of Cleveland, O., pilots, shown above, will hop for Saigon, Indo-China, the starting point of their record try. From Argentina they will attempt to fly non-stop to Cleveland, a distance of 8,500 miles over treacherous mountains, jungles and ocean. The present record of 5,627 miles was made two years ago by Paul Codos and Maurice Rossi of France.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

For the past week or ten days workmen have been busy building new up-to-the-minute dance floor in the Belleville Arena. The floor is now complimented and presents an enticing atmosphere, it having over 2,400 square feet of available dancing space. The Arena management intend further decorating the inside of the Gardens with evergreens and hundreds of colored electric light bulbs to Assure the place of being Belleville's outstanding place to spend comfort holf summer and winter. The floor was first installed in 1922 to meet the needs of the mammoth Kiwanis Karnival, but will be used for semi-weekly dances as well. The dressing rooms and canteen have been redecorated and everything is in spick and span around the Arena today. An up-to-date dance orchestra will be engaged and the new Belleville Arena Garden's dance pavilion will most likely be thronged every night of the week.

A goodly number of prospective early football players answered the initial call of the season at the Cricket Field the other night, but for the next week nightly practice will be held at the Cricketers' campus. Directly after the Belleville Fair, the strong candidates will meet Queen's in a bout to the Exhibition Grounds for further practice. Coach Dr. Vaughn Kennedy and Physical instructor George Loughlin, of the R.C.I. and Y.M. are attending to the pre-season training, with the latter putting the players through a nightly gymnasial calisthenics training, prior to their greeting the old pigskin. Indications are that Bill Fry before the season he has signed two new players from the K.C.A.F., "One of these two lads from Fort William, stands six feet two inches and weighs over 200 pounds. She's a lineman, while the other is a well known ex-intercollegiate star now training in the Air Force", stated Mr. Fry today, as he intimated that the thirty or so candidates to keep in mind as to attend all practices, if they wish to cash on with the squad.

During the performance in front of the grandstand at the Belleville Fair this year there is to be a boxing bout between two colored boys, the original Gold Dust Twins. Now this is no ordinary boxing bout; we hear, but a comedy affair with gloves and all, but the antics these two clowns go through is worth the price of admission alone we hear. Now that the fight game is returning in prominence in sport world, the patrons at the Fair should enjoy this added feature in no small degree.

Today the local Kiwanis junior ball team face, probably their toughest test at Oshawa, as a win for the home team will run the locals out. The locals' hike held a lengthy practice last night, Coach Allen Meagher announcing they had improved much in their earlier stage-fright. Although no announcement were made public as to their having the city today, it is believed that either Joe Kelleher, who held the Oshawa squad hitless for six innings here, or Johnnie Worden would get the local mound assignment. While commenting in regards to the junior game, Manager Meagher says—"It seems to us as though Belleville is always meeting the strongest Oshawa squads". Yes, it does seem slightly that way, but it also seems funny that such is not the case when other outside athletic camps in Belleville, as for the C.O.B.C., the local club seldom has a kick with Kingston or Peterboro umpires, while, in softball circles, outside umpires are received angry condemnation. Could it be, that the calibre of officials sent out from the Motor City is not only inadequate, but like the case of Umpire Higgins, downright inconsistent. Higgins, we have been informed by experts, did not even know the rules of baseball.

On Monday the local Aalmas A.C. softball team enter into the second round of the O.A.S.A. play-downs and journey to Kingston to meet the winners of the Kingston city district. The return game is slated for Thursday night in Belleville and should see the largest crowd ever to witness a softball game in this city, because the final game will have to commence about 5.30 p.m. simply because daylight saving comes to an end in Belleville on Sunday night at midnight, so don't forget to turn your lizzies and big-toes back an hour before hitting the hay on Sun. 25th.

For the lovers of sailing races there are to be three challenge races between the off Victoria Park tomorrow afternoon, with caps at stake in Sunday's events. The races are scheduled in each class of these special Regatta races and we find the Aldegro meeting the Fresie, the Anne C clashing with the Joka (this one should be a honey because Henry Semark says he can beat Duke Smith any time. Duke says "Oh yea?"), while the third matched race is between the Spray and Let's Go.

All is even in the South Hastings baseball league final play-offs with the final game being played at Foxboro on Monday. Yesterday the Foxboro nine taunted over to Latta and after nine hectic innings downed the homesters by 9 to 8 in a free hitting contest. The foreign victory gives each team two wins and a tie. Apparently the fans in the South Hastings loop take their baseball quite seriously, that is judging from the rabid manner in which the fans cheer for their favorites. Doubtlessly harvesting will be forgotten and discontinued on Monday when these two meet in the final finale at Foxboro.

In a final mad race to the barrier the Kingston Ponies finished in first place in the C.O.B.L. yesterday with a 3 to 2 victory over Kiwanis Loe's Peterboros. Incidentally it is reported to have been a beguiling pitchers' battle between Willie Callaghine and Rod Clancy, New that the Central League schedule is concluded we find the Ponies first, Peterboro second and Aalmas third. The result of yesterday's game simply means Belleville and Peterboro will battle up in the league semi-final play-offs while the Ponies will journey to Saturday in the Lifluck City, owing to the Belleville Fair. The Ponies should be comprehended for their similar up-hill fight to finish in first place, they were something like that last five or maybe it was six consecutive games to finish on top.

Kingston won the Mercantile softball championship of Belleville last night, when they downed Bucanos Tents 7 to 6 in the third game of the league finals. Although the Mercantile won the title in three straight games, they knew they were in a softball game each night of the finals, as Recreations proved worthy opponents all during the series. Congratulations today are in order for the Simpsons, 1935 Mercantile Softball League titleholders of the city.

SUCCUMBS TO INJURIES

Toronto, Aug. 24.—(CP)—Injured with her husband and two sons in an automobile accident yesterday, Mrs. Charles Wilson of Detroit, died in hospital here early today.

Mr. Wilson who received a fractured skull and arm was reported today to be improving while the other five victims of the collision, were all progressing favorably. Mrs. Wilson's skull was fractured.

SIMPSONS BEST IN MERCANTILE

Defeat Recreations For The Third Straight Game to Win Title

Taking three straight games in the final playoffs the Simpson nine won the Mercantile softball championship of Belleville by virtue of a 7 to 6 victory over the Recreations last evening. Every game in the final league play-offs was keenly contested, but last night's final contest was undoubtedly the most keenly fought of the series, with the Simpsons holding the lead throughout, but Recreations staged a belated rally to throw a scare into the champions in the ninth inning, but fell one counter short of knotting the count.

Decaup hurled consistent ball for the victorious Simpson squad, while Bill Carson pitched good ball for the losers, but was not afforded defensive support by his rival moundsman received, the Recreations kicking in with four costly errors. Simpsons nicked Carson for seven hits while Decaup yielded but six safeties.

The game concluded the local Mercantile softball league for the most successful season this newly organized group ever sponsored. The Simpsons equal winning the title in a clean cut manner and are worthy holders of the 1935 league pennant.

The line-ups— Simpsons — Amos ss; Howbotham c; Moon 1b; O'Neill lf; Clarke 3b; Decaup p; Mountcastle rf; Cooper 2b; and Reynolds cf. Recreations —Tapp, B. Morgan, B. Wilson, Bryan 2b; Tapp, C. Morgan, Balyz, Mansfield Cornell and Carson.

CHATTERING MONKES USED FOR PARALYSIS

(By SAM ROBERTSON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Aug. 24.—Among a chattering consignment of 449 little monkeys arrived here last night at the New York laboratory of Dr. Maurice Brodie, young Canadian scientist and now known as the man who has thousands of children in the Eastern United States might escape infantile paralysis scourge, seeping up from the south.

Paralysis cases took a startling jump in number of the southern States a few weeks ago, immediately centered in each class of these special Regatta races and we find the Algegro meeting the Fresie, the Anne C clashing with the Joka (this one should be a honey because Henry Semark says he can beat Duke Smith any time. ## MAN DECLARED DEAD AFTER 54 YEARS

Montreal, Aug. 24.—Pierre Quintal, Jr., who had heard of in California in 1881, was declared dead by Mr. Justice O. F. Gilbert in Superior Court and the portion of an estate to which he had fallen heir was ordered turned over to Dame Camille Pinsault, of Cartierville, Que.

Dame Pinsault had entered suit asking that Aristide Larose, of Lachine, Que., acting as executor of the estate of Pierre Quintal, Sr., be ordered to pay her $2,700 due her as an heir to the estate.

Wealth of many years had carried succession in the estate down to the plaintiff in the case. At the same time Mr. Justice Gibsone maintained the intervention into the suit of the Minister of Public of Charity and Refuge at Ottawa to the extent of $600. The order was granted the claim money left it as a universal legatee by a woman who had been in line to succeed.

Music From South Pacific Brought To The Fair

Hary Wagner's Royal Hawaiians will appear at the Belleville Fair in a program of dazzling dance and fleeting the spirit of the Isles of the Sea. This is a smart orchestra attraction to fit Hawaiian setting and sure to please Fair patrons.

FOXBORO WINS TO KNOT COUNT

Latta and Foxboro will meet on Monday afternoon to decide the championship of the South Hastings Baseball League, the Foxboro squad pulling up even with Latta by a 11-9 win scored on Friday on the Latta grounds. These teams have played five games to date each, winning two and one being tied.

Latta looked for a time yesterday as if they were on their way to a championship, when they sandwiched together enough hits for a six run splurge aided by a lengthy home run blow by Joe Marsh, the homestead pepper shortstop, with the bases all populated, but Foxboro whittled away at the lead and scoring five runs in the last three frames made victory possible. Latta in the last frame had a swell chance when they loaded the bases with only one out, but Arthur Hall was a victim of a strike-out and Young tapped a weak roller to short and the ball game was over.

The starting hurlers were not on the mound, when the game was initiated. Tyner and Stewart were both hit freely and neither hurler received the best of support. Tyner whiffed eight while working and Callahan had three while Stewart struck out but two and Peacock nabbed five by the route. The homerity Marsh was a hard hit ball, which sailed far over the centre fielder's head, in fact it was the longest hit ball ever seen on the Latta diamond. Latta outhit the visitors by four counters, to twelve, but errors at critical times spoiled their cause. The game required three hours and ten minutes to play.

The line-ups— Latta, c; Hall 2b; Greer cf; A. Hall 2b; Young 1b; Marsh ss; Vance rf; Parks lb; Shannon lf; Tyner p and lf; Callaghan p. Foxboro—Ashley rf; Seeley 3b; Guay cf; S. Ketchbone lf; Johnston ss; Clay lb; H. Ketchbone c; Stewart and Peacock p and Bailey 2b.

TOURIST CAMP BUSINESS BRISK

Maintaining a fairly steady average of twelve touring parties a day, registrations at the city tourist camp are declared to be well up to expectations this season. It is expected that before the end of the season total bookings will be well above that of last year. Still insistent in their demands for a camping ground with beach and waterfront, many of the tourists who inspect the local site refuse to stay and travel on. Much business is lost this way, it is pointed out by Mr. Maurice Connell, caretaker.

LEARN TO SWIM!

Breast Stroke

LESSON I

Leg Action

It is taken for granted that you have mastered floating or dead man's float, per Figure 2. To start assume position per Illustration, Figure 12. Then separate heels together per Figure 13. Whip legs out, soles of feet turned out and assume position, Figure 14. Whip together to the original position, Figure 12. It is advisable to count 1, 2, 3, during the leg exercises. Count 1 when legs are drawn up; count 2 when they assume the V position and count 3 during the final drive.

LESSON II

Arm Action

Assume position per Figure 15, arms extended, palms down, shoulders and arms slightly submerged below surface of water. Pull arms sideways below surface not further than line of shoulders, hands slightly turned and cupped, thumbs down, to position Figure 16. Drop elbows, palms down and draw arms in position Figure 17, then shoot arms out palms still down, back to starting position per Figure 15. The count 1, 2, 3, during the arm action may be used.

LESSON III.

Combined Arms and Legs

The last arm position shoots forward as the legs are brought together, bringing you back to the floating position of the start. Pull steady and recover on the 2 and 3 count of the arm action rather quickly.

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"Hmm!" he said. "It's a big case, that, I believe in you —you're not in this now; I'm for giving the young man a chance. Either I do Inspector Trent's berth for new, or some one else's. Which do you prefer?"

"Now soon can you get action?"

"Give me till tonight sir. I think I'll have a surprise for you. Shall I ask me to show my hand till then."

"Will it surprise Sonia Melff?" asked Fyrth, and his eyes twinkled.

"Some girl, that! — Was Guthrie right; is she the darkest horse in our bunch?"

"Not quite," said Howe.

"Who is, then?" insisted Fyrth.

"Sally, replied Howe as he went out. "and his daughter Deborah."

"You don't want me to tell you all that horrible story over again, do you Captain Despard?" said Sonia.

"I told it to Sergeant Howe."

The Chief Constable nearly clutched the car as he swung over the railway bridge; he was watching Sonia's face instead of the road, and he had never seen a face to compare with it. A lined face, a limited pathos in her eyes that made Despard groan in spirit.

"I don't want you to tell me anything, unless you're certain it's advisable," he said, drawing the driving rug over her, "and not worrying over that now. What did you think of Sergeant Howe?"

"I think he's clever, and knows his job; he never worried me at all. I didn't like the page-faced officer who came in, and stared at me as if I were a criminal."

Captain Despard laughed.

"Oh, old Guthrie! Just his way. Had several big fish to his credit last year, and got his man convicted at the Assize Judges thought it the first it had looked like a walk-over for the prisoner. Dash it, I feel like a criminal myself when I'm talkin' to Guthrie. But you—Long what an idea!"

"You don't think I'm the type, evidently?"

"That's better! Keep smiling," said Despard. "No, you're not the type, I'm decided. I'll tell you what gems thing if it will ease your mind. If Guthrie had thought you were a criminal he'd have arrested you. He's chiefly annoyed because this man Basher got away." He checked himself suddenly, and leaned toward her as the car slowed.

"Look here," he said. "Do you really want to go down there; to the place where this beastly affair happened?"

"I'm not going just out of curiosity if you mean that; and I'm not worried."

"Good Lord, no! But—"

"Shall I be in your way?"

"In my way! Rather not! I shall be only too glad if you'll come with me."

"But aren't you going to the Mine!" exclaimed Sonia.

"Of course I'm not!" said Despard. "In fact, I've been there already. But I'm an administrator, not a sleuth, and when I've got men at work that's all that I don't built in and fanilk them." He stopped the car.

"Do you mind if I give you some advice?"

"I'd like to hear it," said Sonia.

"You're dipping yourself deep into an ugly affair; I'm sorry you that's likely to become dangerous. Specially dangerous—for you. Leave it alone and keep out of it— stand clear."

"Is that an order?"

"I can't give you orders; it's a warning."

Sonia shook her head.

"Don't you see I'm dipped in it already, and must go on? I don't want to know the truth about this and I think it might find out some things! I can't see why it should be dangerous; but if it is what does that matter?"

Despard shrugged his shoulders, and started the engine, opened the car door for her. He pointed to a gate on the left.

"That's the way then; go along the footpath. If, as you say, you can't help it, and I can't help taking an interest in you; if you don't mind my calling you Miss Melff, you're a girl in a hundred. If there's anything I can do for you unofficially—I'll be there. Now I'll cut his hand to her. Sonia took it, and smiled at him.

"Thank you," she said. "I felt, somehow, very friendless."

Despard sat in the car, a little despondently, and watched her out of sight. Sonia turned down the footpath; five minutes walk brought her almost to the gate in the high fence that bordered the deep cutting of the railway forty feet below.

Here was the scene. She was standing hard by where that horror had actually happened. At that time she was on the farther side of the railroad—the side remote from King's Elm.

Nearly a mile away on the other side was the village, well to her left, and a little wreath of smoke from the chimney of the King Arms Hotel. Dead in front, but far back from the railway, the park wall of King's Elm House.

Away to the right, on her own side of the railway, was the quarry, that of the Stanmore Mines, standout above a dip in the ground. A quick look round, and she got her bearings.

Opposite— just about there—she had stood the night before last; the moment when the lightning revealed that eye-searing vision . . . the figure on the brink, Basher crashing to his death. The phrasing of a ridiculous horse . . . the sound of galloping hoofs in the darkness. She had but to close her eyes to see it now; it would be with her as long as life lasted.

But she was not here to dwell on that. She must go to the village; but there was plenty left to do.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Here, quite close to where she was standing, Jimmie Cocks and Basher had passed on his last ride. By what route had he arrived? She realized the vital importance of knowing that for certain.

It was not so hard, the first part of it. He had of course left the park by a door in the wall, then low ground to the left of the village and then the railway track north of the tunnel. Here! There was the level crossing—she could see it from here—it was unmanned and would be locked at night; Basnister's cob would never have jumped the five-barred gates.

He must have ridden right round the narrow road that skirted the railway, a good way farther down; in by-road with little traffic by day and none at night.

Sonia's car had just brought her. There seemed no other way. And possible for a mounted man . . . he had ridden because he was too lame to walk, she remembered. After crossing he had ridden this way, parallel with the track, close by where she was now—and he had met Brian.

That was the end of him.

Which?

Brian's story seemed to show that Basnister was on his way back from the mine: . . . But Sonia did not feel sure . Here was the one gap in the chain that wanted filling in. If he was returning, had he already encountered Sam Barber?

And if so, where was Barber at the moment of the meeting between Basnister and Brian . . . and where was Selby?

Pieing together in her mind all the facts that had come to hand, and eliminating the guesses, she thought it over rapidly.

At that came to her; a flash of thought. She gave a faint gasp. A moment later she had to abandon it again.

"It can't be! If true, would it help him?" she said to herself. "I haven't fully any chance of making things worse."

She moved farther along the fence, to where the new line lop strand of the wire had been smashed, but remained roughly to one of the fence poles—Howe's work. Here Basnister's body had hit the wire and had fallen before pitching down on to the metals far below. Here, was the precise spot of the tragedy.

She looked round carefully over the short turf of the cutting on her own side and noted, faint but visible though there had been rain in the night and they were nearly obliterated—the hoof-marks where Basnister Coote's cob had dug its toes in when Brian gripped it by the bridle. Remembering what Sergeant Howe had said she could read the signs without difficulty—could the read them in her own way. The whole thing must have happened just as Brian said.

She leaned over the fence and scanned the short slope between the fence and the cutting's edge, with eyes that missed little; the briars and the two or three thin stalks of seeding mountain-ash sprouting from the thin turf that covered the limestone rock; one of them was broken short, showing where the body had struck when it bounced off the wire before rebounding over the sheer edge to a stone drop.

What evidence was there that any third person had been within reach . . . had played any part in it . . . that Brian were the only one concerned. And unknown to Brian?

A thing that confused her a little was that there were two marks or tracks on each final jump of cob if them had been made by Howe's excitement with the cob and the gelde.

Along with that analysis of here came the first glimmer of hope; faint as yet, incomplete, but to be followed up presently.

She turned away. As she did so, saw a man's head— actually there was nothing "more" of him than that—a head in dull-colored cloth cap—disappear suddenly behind the hedge of the ploughed field, some way down.

She was being watched.

In a split second all Sonia's theories were swept out of her mind. Who should be watching her, and why?

The answer seemed obvious—one of Howe's men, acting under his orders. Inspector Fryth had mentioned that they were somewhere hereabouts. Nearby country cottages, of course; in the plain clothes that for some reason are supposed to disguise a policeman. They would keep an eye on any one who came near the Mine.

But why do it so furtively, why dodge about behind hedges? Orders, no doubt. The only thing for Sonia to do was to take no notice, and pretend not to have seen him.

Instead she walked suddenly up the slope and then broke into a run. Not away from the spot, but straight towards it. She was far from satisfied, she felt uneasy, and more than a little angry. She reached the gap in the thick hedge where that head had ducked down, and she pushed through.

THE WEEKLY NEWS
Weather. Could be better.

ENTHUSIASM
Explorers Operated On
Sid Hicks and Clarence Magee the famous explorers gave each other a hair cut Saturday as a experiment to see they ever get stranded together on a desert island where's no barber among, the result being fearse.

GOOD INFORMATION
If the earth ever bumped into another planet they would probably both some to a end, so neither one would ever know the difference.

Some people think it's bad luck to open a umbrella in the house, while others never even have any fear of opening one in the house.

Some skeletons of animals are so prehistoric that even the most educated professors cant tell whether they're one million years old or 2 million and even if they last 2 million years more they probberly wont be any odder.

RETIRED
MYSTERIOUS ACCIDENT
Fuds Simkins still has a skin knee as the result of a peculiar accident happening to him last Wenesday afternoon while he was going passed the school building and he suddenly unixpectedly found himself fall on his stummick on the pavment without any kleer how he got there, and he still dont know whether he tripped or slipped or was pushed or whether it was just his natural clumsiness or what. Her was my the barr kleer of school going to open.

LOST AND FOUND
Not so far.

I was suppose to have my hair cut today, wich I did, and lookin' I was kind of late for supper again, and I mensed it in hoping I wouldn't notice me special, wich pritty soon he did, saying, For Heat sakes who cut your hair, the barber or the shoemaker?

"For The barber, I said, and pop said. Then he couldn't of been in his rite mind, did you notice anything slapicious on his breath?

Yes sir, parlick, I said, and pop said, But yes sonn, such a thing is unheard of, it's impossible.

How do you know about the parlick? I said, and he said, No, that part's normal enough, unforunately. I mean about the hair. How could either of those barbers be capable of turning out such a botch? Why, you look like a berlesk comedian, you look like a porkupine after a serious accident. You look terrible. I'm going to march you around to that barber shop and demand an explanation? he said.

But Sunniny, pop, it's a long wawk, I said. I mean you don't realize, with barber shop, I mean I don't even know if I could find it again myself because Fuds Simkins took me and we had to wawk about a hour. It looks like a regular barber shop but maybe it's not because the sine on it says School for Barbers, Haircut 3 Cents and Fuds had to get his cut too so he thawt it would be a good chance for us to make some money by keeping the differce I said. The barber that cut mine didn't hardly look like a barber either he was capable of turning out such a botch? Why, you look like a berlesk comedian, you look like a porkupine after a serious accident. You look terrible. I'm going to march you around to that barber shop and demand an explanation? he said.

And you dont act any older than a baby in arms pop said. Go and get your cap on if you want to finish your supper in my site he said, and I did. But William at the dining room table for hand, saves.

There are exceptions to every rule and as an artist my love of beauty is greater than my respect for the lesser properties, pop said.

And I finished my supper with my cap on, feeling more like a adventure than a punishment.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Springfield, Mo., Aug. 26 (AP)—F. M. Clayter, 76, and Charles S. Cramp, 65, were father and son today.

Legal documents filed in the brief, Clayter, widower, married Cramp to inherit his estate. They've been landless since they lost as Frisco railway operators years ago. Clayter is robbed on a pension, Cramp, married, still works for the road.

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 26 (CP)—If you are around Bridgeport way don't wander into the corn-fields for you may get lost.

A. S. Biddle, nurse gravel, brought a corn stalk to Kitchener which reminded a small tree. It measured 14 feet in height and the farmer said there were many taller stalks in his field.

Victoria, Aug. 26 (CP)—With his leg in a plaster cast from a compound fracture and carrying a set of crutches, W. H. Langley, veteran Vancouver canoeist, paddled his tiny craft from the Victoria Inner Harbor to Vancouver, approximately 100 miles. He left Vancouver Friday morning and landed his canoe out of the water in Victoria's Inner harbor at nine o'clock Saturday night.

Calgary, Aug. 26 (CP)— More than 30 people watched a man blow a pennant two blocks along a windy road in Calgary's north end. The owner of the bet said it should have been three blocks but the pennant blower off when the lower was reached with a screaming finish. The bet was the Social Credit League would not attain a majority in the Alberta general elections.

Wynne, Ark., Aug. 26 (AP)—A new kind of "religious cult" is reported to have been formed in Cherry Grove where vows "being made to kill off cotton boll weevil, a pestiferous insect that has been a source of profane and told his friends to do likewise in the future matter.

Some of the lessons, members of the new "religion" declared, were send by the Lord. It would be a sin to kill them," they said.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 26 (AP)—A boy about 12 years old reached into the accident ward of the Annapolis Emergency Hospital and stuck out a badly swollen tongue. "M-M-M-M-M," he mumbled, fighting back tears. A doctor and a nurse tried to find out what had happened to him.

When the boy removed the swelling of his tongue he told them. While he was eating, he said, a bee flew into his mouth and stung him.

He left as quickly as he came and nobody learned his name.

Towanda, Pa., Aug. 26 (AP)—Warned by signals from a frightened crowd, Harold Mercer, engineer of Wyalusing, piloting a cabin plane, managed to land it safely more than half an hour while two mentally passengers crawled to safety through a broken strut. Then with his gasoline tank dry he coasted to "dead stick" landing on one wheel.

Lamar, Mo., Aug. 26 (AP)—Wed sixty a hay years were Ruby Espenson, 76, and Leonard E. Hilton, 78.

Miss Espenson visited a field where her husband was at work. Other workers jokingly dared them to be married. They did. The bride and Espenson—in print drove and sam Kent; was married by J. O. W. Williams was signed from a nearby field and Hilton and the girl were married. A collection paid for the license.

HUNTING SEASON MAY BE CURTAILED

Partridge Are Quite Scarce After Survey is Taken

Toronto, Aug. 26 (CP)—Scarcity of partridge has raised doubt there will be a hunting season for the bird in Ontario, it was stated today by officials of the Fish and Game Department.

Fish and Game Protective Associations and field men for the department are engaged in a survey of the fall hunting prospects generally and have turned in reports which would indicate the department would be ill-advised to permit a season for partridges.

The department, it is understood, is considering a plan of extending to the pheasant season over that of normal years.

HIGHWAYS TAKE LARGEST TOLL OVER WEEKEND

Automobiles Accounted For Four Lives And Water One

GIRL ELECTROCUTED

Man And Wife Found Dead in Port Arthur Hotel

(By the Canadian Press)

Twelve sudden deaths were counted in Ontario during the week-end with highways taking the largest toll. There was but one drowning as autumnal winds chilled holidayers away from the lakes.

Automobile accidents accounted for four lives, while a gasoline explosion and an electric current claimed two more.

At Bancroft Lake, Robert Kennedy died when a stick of dynamite he was setting exploded; the police described it as suicide. Doreen Saunders, 16, died at Toronto, when her wet hands carried the current from an electric iron wire through her body.

Alan Marshall, 11, was killed when an automobile plunged into a creek near Grimsby. Walter H. McKay, 42, of Ottawa, was killed instantly when the airplane in which he was turned over in a ditch near Renfrew.

Andrew Bonney 42, of Collins Bay, died when two cars collided Kingston. John L. Austin, Toronto Relief Inspector, was injured fatally when he fell from a moving train.

William McCoy, 16-year-old salvage worker, was drowned in Lake Simcoe. It was believed he was seized with cramps. The body of Ella Laform was found on a railway track near Cornwall. Cause of death was undetermined immediately.

The body of 25-year-old Ted Lodgley was found on the brink of the Lemon River near Campbellford. He was believed to have suffered a heart attack. D. J. Proctor of Toronto died at the wheel of his motor launch at Wasaga Beach. He suffered a stroke.

In a Port Arthur hotel room were found Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rose, 30 and his wife, Alice, 29. After an investigation, Coroner Dr. Charles Powell said death was caused by Potassium Cyanide.

COL. F. CARRON WAS KNOWN HERE

Brockville, Aug. 26—Possessing a distinguished personal and military record, Lieut.-Col. Frederick Carron, who died suddenly at the time of the Poor War, and was once known here, was a man of fame, but escaped. When commander of a hospital in Cape Colony, Dr. Carron was perhaps the physician to Sir John Pynch.

After retiring for some years as ship's surgeon, he practiced here from 1900 to 1914, when he volunteered for service overseas with the Canadian Army Medical Corps. He was at Belleville with the 39th Battalion C.E.F. He was in succession Assistant Director of Medical Services in the Shorncliffe area, Medical Officer of the 3rd Canadian Divisional Artillery Brigade, and second in Command of a special Canadian hospital in England. In 1918 he was appointed Principle in Brockville, where he was attached to the staffs of hospitals in the city, Unmarried and predeceased by a brother and sister, he survived only by a cousin, A. B. Henderson, of Brockville.

Mussolini may be concentrating troops in Africa for the approaching invasion of Ethiopia which statesmen believe cannot now be averted, but he is not going to be caught napping in Austria. Nearly 1,000,000 Italian troops are concentrated in the vicinity of Brenner Pass, the main highway into Austria from Italy. They are engaging in the most elaborate military manoeuvre Europe has ever witnessed. Many while, Germany is going through similar motions on a smaller scale on her side of the border. Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, France's allies, are dispatching armies to the border to await any eventuality. (Map from Times of Current Affairs, Ryerson Press).

Affect of Italo - Ethiopian War Upon Great Britain Hardly Doubted Says Angell

(By Sir Norman Angell)

(Nobel Peace Prize Winner, 1933) (Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

Northey Island, Maldon, Essex, England, Aug. 26.—The results of a war between Italy and Ethiopia, insofar as they affect Great Britain, and America, can hardly be in doubt.

Italy would of course conquer Ethiopia but not easily, and its subsequent occupation of the country will be extremely exhausting. Germany will in consequence be very active in the Mediterranean as Medical Officer of the 3rd Canadian Divisional Artillery Brigade, and second in Command of a special Canadian hospital in England. In 1919 he returned to private practice in Brockville, where he was attached to the staffs of hospitals in the city, Unmarried and predeceased by a brother and sister, he survived only by a cousin, A. B. Henderson, of Brockville.

The menace to democracy will be infinitely greater than would have been involved in a victory for pre-war Germany. Another unchecked successful assertion of Fascist military power coming after those achieved by Japan and Germany —the latter having been able to defy the nations with complete impunity within a few years of their victory—will in fact mean the ruin of the great democratic states of Europe, France and Great Britain as something like impotents.

The position of the British Empire will be weakened in many ways by the planting of an "expansionist" and an intensely militarist state, possessed of a particular political morality, which inspires an Italian military class to rise what you may call communication commanding the headwaters of the Nile Nile and establishing a new frontier marching 100 miles with the frontiers of British Colonies.

A still more important consideration is Italian aggression upon the only remaining Independent African State will add the most inflammable fuel to the flames of Asiatic and African Nationalism, which must sooner or later produce the most imperial structure in danger. The intensification of race feeling will certainly have American repercussions.

Compelled to Intervene

Sooner or later Britain will be compelled to intervene, in self-preservation and chief shareholder of the Suez Canal, the position of facilitating and making profit out of an act of aggression, which defies all International fights and which also undermines Britain's own security, will become the strongest indictment acceptance by the British people.

"Intervention" mustn't be read as

POSSESSION OF COLONIES RAISES MENACING HEAD

Germany's Need is Fast Developing Into Demand

TROOPS FOR MALTA

Mussolini Warns Britain Not To Apply Sanctions

(By Roger D. Greene)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—The long smouldering question of colonial possessions among the great powers assumed the menacing proportions of a rumbling Mount Vesuvius today.

Fear that Mussolini's African ambitis might blow the volcano lid off was accentuated by Il Duce himself. The London Daily Mail quoted him as saying in an interview: "Sooner or later we must solve the question of colonies in all its implications." It would be the first battle fit of all civilized states, especially those materially deprived of their share in the extraction of the wealth of the world."

Coincidentally, according to despatches from Berlin, Count Schwerin Von Krosigk, Minister of Finance, made it clear the German need extended to her colonial was fast developing into Germany's demand. Von Krosigk declared Germany to have said when the question of revision of colonial questions was discussed internationally, Germany would not be satisfied to allow her expansion desires to be ignored.

The British War Office has ordered 1,200 troops to embark in the steamer Neuralia from Southampton to Malta in the next few days to reinforce garrisons in Britain's outposts in the Mediterranean.

The Malta reinforcements, to the Mediterranean, public air raid shelters have been completed and all the populace has been instructed in the matter of safeguards in the event of gas attacks.

The British Mediterranean fleet has been ordered to leave Gibraltar day to take up positions where it will be ready for striking distance of the Suez Canal.

Spain is worried about her colonial possessions, the press said today, an uprising of Moroccan tribesmen may cause the general result in European feeling in sympathy with Italy. Spain has reinforced the Gibraltar garrison and placed dumps of munitions there ready for use in the event of trouble in Morocco.

The London Post today, under the heading, "America passes by," declares the United States neutrality bill, saying:

COACH OF TEAM DELIVERS SERMON

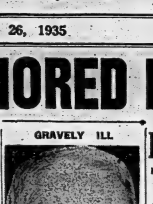
Presbyterian, Minister at Foxboro Addresses Ball Players



Sunday morning Sportsmen's Service was held in the Foxboro Presbyterian Church, which was attended by members of the baseball team and their supporters. Maclaren Gowsell, manager and coach of the team, and his brother, Grant sang a duet. The Rev. D. C. Hill, of the Boys' League on the spirit they have shown in the ball, by regarding that some of the supporters on both sides had not come up to the example set by the players. At a game between leaguers and staff, the climax of the play-offs approaching, he urged upon players to remember while they try to exhibit the highest sportsmanship, which should be essential as an essential element of a developed Christian character. "Those who can apply the lessons of sportsmanship learned on the ball field to the other interests of life will be the finest type of Christian ethics," he declared.

A large congregation joined in the service and showed appreciation of the timeliness of the message.

SEARCH FOR VICTIMS

Genoa, Italy, Aug. 26 (AP)—Rescue squadrons searched the waters of the harbor today for victims of last night's water spout which killed six persons and injured at least fifty others.

An early survey indicated damage to thirteen shipping vessels and the havoc caused by the huge inrush of water to the docks and derricks probably would run into millions.

GRAVELY ILL

Senator James Cousens of Milchigan, Canadian-born U. S. politician and former business partner of Henry Ford, is reported gravely ill in Mayo Clinic following four kidney operations.

HOUSE DESTROYED, ONE DAMAGED.

Busiest Week End With Quite Heavy Loss on Moira St.

Four new uncompleted home, the property of Mr. Thomas Harris, on East Moira Street, and a second home beside scorched by the conflagration, which levelled the first one almost to the ground, together with its adjoining barn were included in the fire loss in this city over the week-end, according to the fire department as the busiest one on record.

A total of thirteen alarms were answered by the department in a short period, which created a new hash for the department.

Fire Chief Lynch said today:

"At twenty-five minutes after five o'clock Saturday morning the department received the alarm to the Harris house on East Moira Street. Five trucks and one pumper arrived there between four and five minutes after the alarm and found a frame barn on the west side of the home burned to the ground.

"The house was all afire, a wall of flame spouting from the doors and breaking through the roof. Fire had evidently spread from the barn, which was burned to the ground, to the residence. We have no idea what started the barn burning, just yet.

"When I got to the fire myself I was only a minute behind the first truck. In the space of between one and two minutes after the arrival of the first truck, the house was completely afame, when we got there. The heat was intense and the flames spread to the barn who tried to get close to the fire were buckled. Across the road a window was open in another house. I was told by one of the inhabitants of the home, that paint was blistered in their room. A car belonging to a neighbor and a second fifty feet away from the home, were in danger of catching fire, but it wr: too hot to move it.

"All in all, the fire were fighting this fire we got another alarm to 104 Dufferin Street. It was a false alarm. Some one had seen the glow of the first one shining on the thickness of another brand and sent in the alarm."

"Shortly after we were first called to a spot near the Harris home, a fire was reported that was burning. The men, estinguished with hand pumps, and then we were called to the rear of the home, where the fire had started to burn the barn at the rear of the home. Investigation has revealed that one of the neighborhood had sent in two or three calls before the fire, but we are all ready to testify that none of the calls were received at either No. 1 or No. 2 fire hall. No answer to his call one department was just fighting a grass fire near the Devil's Elbow."

Loss on the Harris home will be partly covered by insurance it was reported.

In commenting upon the fire, members of the Belleville fire department did the best they could under the circumstances, stated Mr. Thomas Harris, owner.

Il Duce May Ask Hitler To Lend Italy Support In Demand for Colonies

Circles in London See Effort to Make Question International

ADEN IS STRENGTHENED

Evacuation of Addis Ababa By Native Men, Women and Children

By ROGER D. GREENE

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—Certain informed quarters said tonight Premier Mussolini may tell the League of Nations his price for calling off the threatened invasion of Ethiopia in a gift to other powers of colonies in Africa.

Circles in close touch with the Italo-Ethiopian dispute said Mussolini might endeavor to get the support of Hitler behind making any demands for colonial gifts. Such action, they said, would be regarded as an effort to make the question international instead of individual.

Archives Removed

Addis Ababa, Aug. 26 (AP)—The Italian legation today began the removal of its archives from the Ethiopian capital, following orders of native men, women and children started to evacuate the city.

The natives began leaving in accordance with Emperor Haile Selassie's verbal orders of last Sunday—but they did not, wait for his suggestion they depart seven days after war might be declared.

Already most of the Italian residents in Addis Ababa have left.

The Italian legation dispatched 60 cases of official archives to Djibouti by railroad. The action was regarded as the first indication of Italian official evacuation.

Defences up to Strength

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—The War Office announced today the fixed defences at Aden, Arabia, as well as at Malta would be brought up to strength already approved.

Confirming Malta and Aden defences would be reinforced with units of Royal Artillery Engineers and Singia Corps. The War Office however, specified these were the only moves to be made now.

Rear Rifles Not For Sale

Ottawa, Aug. 26 (CP)—The Defence Department's stock of Ross rifles is not for sale, a statement issued has been prompted by the numerous requests received since the Italo-Ethiopian crisis developed menacing proportions for the purchase of these weapons.

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 26 (CP)—William Morris Hughes, Vice President of the Executive Council of the Commonwealth and wartime Prime Minister, declared today:

"There could be no more certain way of establishing the peace of the for another terrible world conflict than a disarmed Australia left by Great Britain to intervene between the Italians and the Ethiopians."

Loyal Prepared

Paris, Aug. 26 (AP)—Premier Laval was said by his advisers today to be prepared for the consequences of his visit to London to confer with Premier Mussolini.

Gibraltar, Aug. 26 (AP)—The British aircraft carrier Glorious sailed from here for Malta today, to join the Mediterranean and was followed by a squadron of destroyers expected to play a month

The Glorious, of approximately 1,100 men including fliers. The complement includes a squadron of fighting planes, a torpedo plane group and a squadron of torpedo bombers.

Admits Setting Seventeen Fires

Denver, Aug. 26.—(AP)—A 17-year-old youth said today told police to have admitted he was the arsonist who set a series of fires, which struck terror in the city's business district.

"Sure I am it of the fires and besides that I'm wanted all over the country," detective Sergeant Fred Cramer, son of Dr., Harry R. Cramer, Chief of Police.

"I got a thrill out of it," Sergeant Cramer said the youth told him, "it was fun, especially last night, when I started a fire in police headquarters."

"We are positive we have the right man," declared Fred Police maintained their guard over churches and other buildings, however, while they checked the youth's statements.

The fire at the police station was the only one before the youth was arrested in a Night Club telephone booth.

LABATT SNATCH PLANNED IN '31

Abandoned Plot Not Discussed Until '34 Says McCardell

London, Ont., Aug. 26 (CP)—Michael McCardell, self-confessed kidnapper of John Labatt, testifying today at the preliminary hearing of Jack Bannon of Windsor, also charged with the abduction, said it was his "understanding" Louis McCaughey, general sales agent for Labatt's Brewery, "gave the information about Mr. Labatt to Bannon." He was then passed on to Ernest Rossi of Chicago.

London, Ont., Aug. 26 (CP)—To hear details of the Labatt case, a couple of hundred castless people crowded into Supreme Court chambers here today. Officials changed the scene of the hearing of Jack Bannon on arms charges and kidnapping charges from County Court chambers to Police Court.

Norman F. Newton, Crown Attorney, said he was ready to make Michael McCardell, self-admitted principal in the abduction, would be presented presently.

McCardell, however, would tell a complete story of the plot and name the men implicated with him.

McCardell Remanded

Mr. Newton asked Magistrate Hawtaker that McCardell be further remanded—for sentence to October 31. The case of Gerald Whitbeck, charged with being an accessory after the fact, was adjourned one week.

Klingdon P. "Piccolo Pete" Murray, said to have been cleared of Labatt kidnapping charges by confession, will appear in court tomorrow morning, Mr. Newton announced.

Bannon cleired trial by jury on a charge of kidnapping and armed robbery and was remanded. McCardell took the box and began telling how the Labatt kidnapping plot had been discussed as early as 1931.

Witness at the time, he said, of Chicago and Russell Knowles had come to London and drove past the Labatt home, named Sunnyside, the intended victim sitting on the veranda. Knowles, a former Labatt brewer was in ill health and plans were made to kidnap him.

Plans for the plot were not discussed again until 1934 when Michael went to Detroit and saw Bannon. He later met Albert Pogue, Detroit lawyer, with Russell Knowles.

Pogueam and I went back to Detroit and discussed it on the way," McCardell said.

"He said he had some other work cut out for him."

"What that the kidnapping of Samuel Bronfman" asked Newton, Q.C.

"It was my understanding Louis McCaughey have the information about Mr. Labatt, in order that we passed it on to Rossi."

In Detroit McCardell said "Ted" Meisner heard the discussion of Labatt and that Meisner had refused to have anything to do with the case.

BAND CONCERT AT OAK LAKE

Under the direction of Lieut. Sandhouse, those branded the A.I.I. Battalion band played a delightful concert at Oak Lake yesterday afternoon. Some twelve selections, including several marches and solos were included on the program that was so arranged in order that the people might hear each over the entire afternoon. A large number of visitors from the city and roughly stayed the band concert and many words of favorable comments were heard on Belleville's growing musical organization.

MIDWAY ARRIVES AND PUT IN PLACE

With little confusion and with the help of many local unemployed men, the effects of the Queen City Amusement Company midway which arrived in the city early this morning was hurried up in the Belleville Fair grounds this morning and this afternoon preparing for the grand opening of the local fair on Tuesday, the midway which carries complete up to the minute props of one of the largest midways in the country has in addition many of the latest amusement devices which will be totally new to local and district residents. A small jennical city is also springing up in the grounds as almost all of the small owners and other indispensable carnival followers have arrived.

REPAIRS EFFECTED ON CITY CLOCK

The booming notes of the big bell in the city hall tower is again shattering the stillness of the night as the hours are once more tolled off. After a quietness of several months the families of the city will be without its unaccustomed fashion to the stars of the night. Workmen made a good chance for repairs while scaffolding is up at present. Jack Robin, caretaker of the city hall, carried out repairs on the clock and bell on Saturday.

GOOD WEATHER FOR FAIR IS FORECAST

In the Belleville Fair to be favored with good weather during its four days?

Positively, stated the city hall oracle after a brief session this morning with the chief registrations of temperatures and a preliminary bout with the district attorney ball.

Just tell the local and outside residents they can leave their umbrellas home for the four days at least. It isn't likely there will be any rain during fair week, and from present indications there will be plenty of sunshine and fair weather.

"Remember, they all laughed last year when I said there'd have fair weather, but later events proved I was true. As already averaged just now is up in the 100's."

TROUT SEASON TO CLOSE AUGUST 31

Announcement of a change in the closing date of the season for Ontario trout is given by the Game and Fisheries Department, Toronto, this year the season for speckled trout, brown trout and Aurora trout will close on August 31 in all parts of Ontario, and on September 15 in the French and Eastern Rivers, in Lake Nipissing and that portion of the province lying north and west thereof, and including Manitoulin Island.

GIRLS' TEAM FROM HASTINGS CHOSEN

Hastings County girls' team for the Intercollegiate Athletic Association Championship this year will be represented by Ruby Calder, Wallbridge, Rosena Mumby, Bonarlaw; and Doris Ketcheson, Wallbridge, it was announced by Mr. Jas. Wilson, Stirling, agricultural representative of this district. The team will leave for Toronto Tuesday, September 3.

MILK PRODUCTION SLIGHTLY DOWN

A slight falling off in milk production throughout this district has been noted during the past few weeks owing to dry pastures and drier weather, it is stated by Mr. W. H. Morrow, president of the Belleville Cheese Board.

"It's drier, however, it is any worse than in previous years. About this time of the season production generally drops," said the president.

SUMMON RALLY AT THOMASBURG FOR ORGANIZATION

Bennett Government Acts And Policies Praised by Speaker

OPTIMISM VOICED

Tweed, August 26—(Special)—An organization meeting in the interest of Mr. W. H. Thomson was held at Thomasburg Oddfellows Hall on Friday night. The meeting was addressed by a number of leading Conservatives from Belleville, Tweed and the surrounding districts. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Harry Coulter, President of the Rungeford Liberal-Conservative Association.

Dr. J. A. Thompson of Tweed, said that each passing day brought additional reasons for optimism in the outcome of the pending election. He closed with an amusing skit which brought applause.

Mr. R. B. Rollins of Tweed, ex-Warden of Hastings County, was in those meetings considerable value although they are being preliminary to larger ones to be held later. He stated that as a class the farmers were a debt to Mr. Hon. R. B. Bennett, whose government had passed a number of Acts by which the farming class had benefitted. The people had appreciated the country-wide efforts in connection with the unemployment relief.

Mr. Jas. F. Hill, M.P.P., for East Hastings, spoke at some length, in support of Mr. Bennett and W. H. Thomson, whose illness he regretted. He referred to the move of the Provincial Government in connection with loans to farmers. During the past year the trade export trade with the United States had fallen due to high tariffs levied by the neighbouring republic. Having had been done to offset this. A leader must be judged by his public diplomats and Mr. King had nothing of a constructive nature to suggest as solutions of the country's big problems. On the other hand, during the last few years the Conservative government had tackled these problems in a considerable measure of success. During the Liberal regime the cry of opposition was rampant as usual, but there was nothing was done to stop it.

Mr. Hill urged the Belleville Conservative organizer for the district to appeal to the electors to canvass the votes in the district and urge their support of Mr. Bennett.

In referring to provincial politics, he criticized the present administration for the lack of efficiency of Conservative officials, particularly in Belleville, and filling the offices with Liberals. The Department of Public Health, in spite of the increased rigid control, had shown increases in expenditures. In connection with the hospitals the increase in the cost of production per patient-day was over $145,000 and salary increases were also noted. He criticized the Liberal Premier, Mitchell, who claimed that Mr. Bennett had failed to co-operate in the matter of unemployment relief in Ontario, whereas more than $5,000,000 paid to the province in the past year was for unemployment and direct relief. More than the foregoing, the government ever received from Ottawa. The attitude of the King to do away with Section 98 of the Criminal Code the speaker said was a serious matter.

Mr. Reid expressed the opinion that the farmer who had mortgage his farm, when valuations were high was entitled to a downward adjustment of his debt because of the lowered present day valuations of farm holdings.

The next speaker, Rev. M. G. Price of Ardenville, said that there was a tendency on the part of people in general to take politics either too seriously or too lightly. The new government to be elected in Canada will be the most important in many years, because of the pressing problems both internal and external with which it will be faced. He found a number of hopeful signs that conditions were improving in Canada. There is a gradual and steady upward trend in prices of farm produce. They, it said, have suffered greatly from lack of food or clothing. It is true there has been some privation, some denial of certain things that they have been few dire cases of want in Canada, unlike many other countries. The speaker expressed the opinion that the duty of a leader of the Opposition was to offer constructive criticism of the acts of the government. Mr. King had failed during the past five years to offer any helpful opposition. He cited as an example his attitude to the government with statesmen of the calibre of Sir Robert Borden would had weathered the storm of the past few years. He appealed to govern a country which is composed of men, men of integrity and of good repute in their respective districts. They must be, above all, God-fearing and loyal to their own church. In Mr. Thomson the electors on of South Hastings have a man of this type to whom all citizens regardless may safely place their interests in the next Parliament, he said.

Dr. Harold Welsh, of Roslin, also addressed the assembly briefly. He noted that the general trend of events is simply against the party that is in power. It is, however, the duty of every citizen thoroughly to inform himself on all questions before voting against the government. In Mr. King the country possesses a man of ideas, a theorist who in the past has been unable to put these ideas into practice, he claimed. In Mr. Bennett Canada has a practical man, successful in his own business affairs in whose hands the destinies of Canada are safe, he has passed a number of acts beneficial to the farming class—the Farmers' Creditors' Act, an Act establishing the price of wheat, and an Act bounding cheese. Mr. Welsh said that in the matter of power of the Conservative Party an assurance of the continuation of the improvement of conditions. The meeting was concluded by the National Anthem.

POLICE COURT

In the absence of Magistrate H. E. Bridge, K.C., His Worship Magistrate J. Ambrose Shea of Kingston occupied the Bench at to-day's local police court proceedings. A number of minor cases were disposed of in the police officer's quickly enriched when fines were paid.

Three Newburg young men appeared in the dock and pleaded guilty to charges of disturbing the peace by driving motor cars in upon a flatic encounter at a dance on the Wooler Road on Saturday night. A fine of five dollars and costs, amounting to $19.10 in all, was imposed in each case. The young men gave their names as William Lucas, Lucas and James Slade.

Sydney Brand, Tyendinaga, was sentenced to serve seven days in jail after pleading guilty to driving an automobile while intoxicated. Brand along with three others was arrested by Provincial Officer Street by Sergeant Booth late last night while proceeding in a zig-zag manner through Belleville. The other occupant and passenger of the car pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication and also of allowing a motor car to be operated on the highway with defective brakes. The fines in these cases were meted out. Two months in jail was imposed on the two above mentioned accused men who pleaded guilty to charges of common intoxication. The aforementioned fine of ten dollars and costs was imposed on Brand. His sentence, however, they will have to serve ten days in jail. His Worship pointed out as the quarters which would be escorted back to the cells.

Two bachelors, who had appeared on a previous court, asked for a $10 fine for disorderly conduct respective cases. Their request was granted. The local citizen, who assured the court he was not a clock while intoxicated, was given the same punishment. Another accused was arrested on Saturday, left clock in question being found in his possession.

POLICE BLOTTER

Local police were kept quite busy over the week end, numerous minor activities occurring in the district. Shortly before midnight last night considerable excitement was raised on Victoria Park near the lower end when a motor automobile bounded over the curb and collided with a bench on the park.

Upon the arrival of P. C. Evans, who investigated, it was disclosed, that the vehicle driven by John Sigsworth of Harrowsmith, was overdriving southward on Front St. at a considerable rate of speed. The vehicle struck the curb, bounded over the sidewalk, struck a side-walk and coming to a full stop as it collided with a park bench. Three tires were blown out and the left wheels struck the curb with considerable force. It was subsequently disclosed, that Mr. Sigsworth was driving his vehicle without the necessary operator's license. A charge of reckless driving was laid against the driver. No person was injured during the accident, however.

Nine transients occupied the police cell block over the week end, seven on Saturday night and two on Sunday. Of the former, five of them were trekkers returning from Ottawa, petios stated today.

Frank Thorne, 19 College St., committed to the police he had been bitten by a dog, while riding his bicycle on Victoria Ave. on Saturday. The matter was investigated and the name of the owner of the canine ascertained. Later the owner was warned in relationship to allowing the dog to run at large.

RINGS ARE TAKEN FROM FIRE RUINS

Police Discover Children in Possession of Articles

Despite the fact, that Mr. Frank Leggett, 192 West Moira St., boarded up the doors and windows of his home following a fire that gutted his place of dwelling early Saturday morning, youths entered the house and stole four gold rings later in the day. The entrance to the house was noticed by Mr. Leggett on Saturday afternoon, when he visited his home and found that the boards and other fonter drawers had been disturbed.

Plainclothes Constable Fred Jard investigated the matter and later ascertained that three small girls and two boys between the ages of 8 and 13 years, had been seen in the neighborhood. After questioning the children, Jard soon discovered the articles in their possession. Later, the rings were returned to Mr. Leggett and the kiddies instructed by Chief Kidd, along with their parents.

Although drawers and cupboards in the house were full of articles of clothing and household goods strewn about, nothing else was carried off from his home, nothing except the four gold rings was discovered missing. The damage done to the building was more securely boarded up to discourage further pilferers.

Obituary

LATE HRS. FERD NEWMAN (Picton)

The funeral of Mrs. Newman, widow of Fred Newman of Picton, who died at the Montreal General Hospital on Wednesday, Aug. 21st, took place from Picton on Friday last to Mountain View cemetery where interment was made in the Mausoleum.

MRS JOSEPH GOOSENS (Smithfield)

To many friends in this district the death of Mrs. Joseph Goosens of Smithfield, which occurred at the General Hospital at Kingston early on Wednesday, Aug. 21st, following a deep feelings of sorrow. On Saturday afternoon, funeral service was held at the residence of the deceased, after which she was unable to withstand.

The late Mrs. Goosens prior to her marriage was Miss Effie J. Spencer of Ameliasburgh, and prior to being the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spencer. All her life was passed in this district and she was blessed with qualities of character and pleasing personality that endeared her to a large circle of friends by whom she will be greatly missed. She was a young woman who had lived an active and useful life and was a member of the Ladies' Aid and also a member of the Church of England.

Surviving are her husband, and one brother, Mr. George Spencer of Smithfield. Much sympathy is extended to them in their bereavement.

ROBERT JAMES GARBUTT

Robert James Garbutt a prominent resident of this district died at his residence on the Kingston Road in the first concession of Thurlow, Sunday morning, Aug. 25th, after an illness of about a year's duration and many friends will regret to learn of his death.

The late Mr. Garbutt, who was in his 68th year, was born in Oshawa, Ont., his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Garbutt. When a young man he settled in Thurlow Township and resided there continuously up to the time of his death. He was engaged in farming, devoting much attention to stock raising and he was known widely throughout the Province of Ontario and in some parts of the United States as a breeder and expert judge of swine and sheep. At Toronto, Chicago and many other places he was in demand as a judge of live stock and performed this office up until a few years ago, when age and ill health prevented him from taking an active part in the work, which he liked so well. In addition to swine and sheep he was also much interested in horses and exhibited fine specimens at various fairs. His acquaintance was large and by all who enjoyed his friendship he was held in the highest esteem. He was a man of fine character and in his passing the township of Hastings has lost a good citizen.

The late Mr. Garbutt was largely instrumental in bringing the Tall Oaks which was held at Thrasher's Corners many years ago and known as the East Hastings Agricultural Fair, to Belleville and the establishment of a much larger fair which has culminated in the fine fair which is now held annually in Belleville. He was a past president of the Belleville fair and for many years was a highly valued director. He took a great interest in the affairs of Thurlow Township and for years was a member of the township council. In religion he was a member of the United Church and in politics he was a staunch Conservative, taking an active part in the work of the party. Fraternally he was a member of the Belleville Lodge No. 123 A. F. and A. M. and was one of the oldest, if not the oldest member in this district.

Surviving him and to whom the sympathy of many friends will be extended are his widow; one son, James R. Garbutt, Thurlow Township; one daughter, Mrs. William Noonan, Rednersville; two sisters, Mrs. Low Township; two brothers, George Garbutt, Port Hope; Charles Garbutt, Green Court, Alberta; three grandsons, Keith Garbutt, Thurlow Township; Hector Garbutt, Belleville; one granddaughter, Miss Jennie Garbutt, Strachiner Avenue, Thurlow Township.

DIVING TOWER ASSISTS RESCUE

Youth in Difficulty Brought To Surface From 25 Feet of Water

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 26—(CP)—Diving to the bottom in 25 feet of water, Ernest Morris, rescued Marshall Bethune, 17, son of Mr. Mrs. George H. Bethune of Hamilton, Ont. He brought the unconscious Bethune to shore, where resuscitation was revived Saturday at Long Lake Summer resort, 10 miles here. The boy had dived from the high board on the diving tower, when he got into trouble and sank. Morris spotted his limp body at the bottom of the pool and making for him, dived down and brought the 25 feet of water to the surface. Bethune is the son of Mayor Bethune of Hamilton.

Bethune was revived by Dr. Ross Jones, Dr. Morris, Bert Merrifield and Alex Ryan.

Hospital authorities today said the boy would be released late today.

Mr. and Mrs. Bethune were in Sudbury visiting their son, Marshall and William Bethune, employed at the International Nickel Company.

R.R. Box Cars and Transports Hurry Trek Army West of Here

Back From Ottawa Crowd Take Quickest Way "Home"

Some 200 trekkers, the main body of the on-to-Ottawa marchers now returning homeward passed through Belleville in two large transports early Sunday morning, but it took long enough to stretch their legs to the market square. They were accompanied by an escort of Provincial Police.

Apparently disbanded and in disorder a large number of the on-to-Ottawa marchers, upon their release from the Capital City, passed through Belleville unnoticed early Sunday. As early as Saturday night a number of marchers appeared at the local police station in quest of a night's lodging, on their return journey. We're not going to plod along the highway on foot when there's a hitch-hike car handy," was the answer given the night officer when he began questioning in relationship to their leaving the main party, who are still trudging the hot pavement.

On Sunday over seventy of the trekkers appeared on freight trains coming into Belleville, despite the efforts of C.N.R. and other police east of Belleville. Once established in the jungle seat of the city, Provincial and C.N.R. police rounded up this band and instructed them not to leave that point or attempt to make their way into the city, on pain of arrest and charges. Later through the co-operation of Inspector F. Gardner and railway officials two empty box cars were placed on a siding near the local "jungle" east of the city, and the trekkers were moved into these cars. Later the box cars were picked up by a passing freight train and transported eastward to Toronto where they were immediately transferred under the threat of arrest if they returned to their property.

A small band of trekkers, including a few girls, remained behind in the forced march to the Dominion's capital, but still on foot and stated they intended to return by the same route they travelled eastward. Reports from the vicinity of Napanee where the marchers spent Saturday were to the effect that many of their original number had fallen from the ranks and endeavoured to return to their respective homes as best they can.

The main body of trekkers were afforded motor transportation only as far as the two large transports, one having a capacity for 200 trekkers, both male and female, were placed in readiness for embarkment westward. At 1.00 a.m. today the two transports were stopped in Victoria square in Belleville. Sergt. Harman who was on duty, allowed the trekkers to line up a bit and procure whatever drinking water was necessary, the marchers filling water buckets and bottles with water before boarding the trains for the last leg of their return journey. The trekkers will be unloaded at Toronto and dispersed. Provincial Police stated prior to their leaving the city as the escort for the party.

MIXED JITNEY AT STIRLING

R. J. S. Dewar And Mrs. John Shaw of This City Win Prizes

Stirling, Aug. 26.—On Friday evening the members of the Stirling Bowling Club entertained 46 members of the Belleville Club, who were present to take part in the mixed jitney tournament sponsored by the local bowlers. This tournament was the fourth of its kind to be held by the Stirling Club this season. The evening was cool and with the competition close in the evening's play everyone present thoroughly enjoyed the games. The prizes offered for the highest score among the visitors were awarded to Mr. Dewar and Mrs. John Shaw of Belleville. Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Whitby were successful in gaining the most points among the local players and received the lovely prizes awarded for that honor. At the conclusion of the tournament a very delightful lunch was served by the ladies of the Stirling Club in the clubhouse which was appropriately decorated for the occasion with lovely cut flowers, etc. Bowling has become very popular in Stirling and the local club is well organized under the leadership of a very capable executive. Next year it is expected that the membership will be greatly increased because of the interest shown in this sport by the general public.

Lawn Social Well Attended

In spite of the cool weather a large crowd attended the lawn social given by the Women's Association of Carmel United Church on the lawns of Messrs. Ashley and Lorne Brooks on Thursday night, August 22nd. Ice cream and lemonade were available to all those present and a very fine lunch consisting of cake and sandwiches was served by the ladies. The program included several musical numbers and a period of community singing into which everyone entered heartily. An amusing interesting feature on the fine program was a splendid reading given in a very capable manner by Mr. Elm Brooks who has recently passed his 80th birthday. The weather was fine though inclined to be a bit chilly as the hour grew late, but the party was a very decided success, and portrayed again the fine spirit of co-operation that prevails within this congregation, when they attempt anything in the line of entertainment.

Stirling To Have New Steam Quarry

On the property of Mr. Claude Tucker, just west of the village, the first important steps in preparation work are nearly complete. A large area of flat rock has been uncovered with use of steam shovels and large trucks, and the loam or dirt taken from there is being used for filling on the Marmora Highway No. 14. From this quarry it is expected that the workmen will be supplied with crushed stone needed in the paving of the Frankford road. At the present time all the crushed stone has to be hauled from the quarry at Havelock which is quite a long trip for the drivers. With the finding of stone on the Tucker property of a satisfactory quality for road work, much of the stone needed in such operations will no doubt be taken from there. Men are all ready at work with drills on the great sheets of flat rock which have been uncovered by the steam shovels, and it looks as if Stirling has a new industry close by. This and the work on the new road has provided work for early all of Stirling's unemployed, at least the streets are quite deserted during the day and everyone seems to have work.

Personals

Mr. Harry Morrow spent a few days this week in Peterboro where he attended the fair.

Mr. and Mrs. John Neville Dunnof Toronto are spending a week visiting their son, Arthur Duncan and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wills.

Miss Greta Nicholson is spending her vacation at the home of her grandmother, in Toronto.

Miss Myrtle Kirkey spent last week visiting her sister, Mrs. Katie Grice Kirkey at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Morrow.

Friends of Misses Annie and Hurradette Maloney and Mrs. Smith will be glad to learn that they have all nearly recovered from the injuries they received in the motor accident. Mr. Patrick Maloney and his two daughters, Annie and Hurradette, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Scott were returning home from a dance in Marmora, in a car driven by Mr. Gerald Armstrong of Glen Ross, and were badly shaken up when the car collided with a car driven by M. Middullen. Mr. and Mrs. Scott and Miss Hurradette Maloney were riding in the rumble seat at the time and all but Mrs. Scott were thrown clear of the wreck by the impact as the car turned over into the ditch. The badly wrecked car owned by Gerald Armstrong was towed to a Stirling garage for repairs.

Misses Howard and Kenneth Morrow are spending a week in Northern Ontario visiting many friends and spending a few days at the home of their uncle, Mr. Arthur Morrow who is principal of Barrie Collegiate. The boys expect to spend a few days at the Canadian National Exhibition on their way home.

Mr. Gordon Bailey of the local Hydro staff landed a pickerel in the Trent River on Wednesday afternoon that is said to have weighed over five pounds, which is not a bad size. Especially these days when anglers say they aren't biting.

Betty Furness, Edith Fellowes and Neil Hamilton in Gene Stratton Porter's best loved story, "A Girl Reserved for the Boss," coming to the Belle tomorrow.

Mrs. Mary Powell, Sons And Daughters Are in City

For the first time in a quarter of a century, the members of the Powell family are meeting in Belleville, Mrs. Mary Powell of Hamilton, the mother, is visiting her sister, daughter of Mrs. W. H. Wright-ayer, Trent Road, Mrs. Helen Geary of Toronto, daughter of Mrs. Powell.

Mrs. Powell has also a son and four sons of Mrs. Powell, Leslie of Oakland, California, Joseph A., of Richmond, Virginia, Stanley of Hamilton, Canada, and George G., whose home is in Belleville. The California and Virginia members of the family arrived by the Shorey's after midnight.

The reunion will be brief, as tomorrow night those from the farthest points start on their way back home. Meantime they are holding a gathering and are also meeting friends of other days.

Joseph A. Powell began his life-work as a printer in Belleville, and was at one time on the staff of the Intelligencer. It is clevyn years since he was here. His brother, Leslie's present trip is the first time home in 30 years.

The only member of the family who is not present is a daughter of Mrs. Powell's, Mrs. Murney Dugan of Oakland, California.

ROUTINE PROBE CAUSES 3 DEATHS

Deputy Sheriff And Two Negroes Killed in Gun Battles

Helena, Ark., Aug. 26.—(AP)—A routine investigation of a traffic accident resulted in two gun battles and three deaths near Helena Sunday.

The dead are Deputy Sheriff Dan F. O'Connor, 38, of West Helena; and two negroes, Roy and Roy Bland, father and son.

O'Connor and his half-brother, W. H. Scholts, killed Roy Bland, 45, when the negro jumped from his bed after the sheriff awakened him. O'Connor was investigating a hit-and-run accident in which the Blands were reported involved.

Roy Bland opened fire from a rear room and O'Connor was slain with a shotgun charge through the heart. Scholts grappled his gun and grappling with the young negro, who stabbed him in the back and escaped.

The 17-year-old negro was tracked by bloodhounds and cornered in a woods. Officers said they wounded him but he escaped. The dogs later found his body, a charge from the shotgun he carried having torn away the top of his head.

Officers said the negro took his own life when he knew he was surrounded.

BELLEVILLE BOARD TAKES NO ACTION

Napanee Asks For Names of Factories Joining Association

Belleville Cheese Board will take no action for the present at least on a suggestion from the Napanee Cheese Board, that a resolution be passed requesting the Minister of Agriculture to forward the names of the cheese factories, who have signed with the Ontario Patrons Cheese Factory Association, it was decided at the regular meeting of the local board held on Saturday.

The letter and resolution, which was received from the Napanee Board asked that the local Board pass a similar resolution, and "then get from the Minister the names of factories boarding with you who have become members of the Ontario Cheese Factory Patrons' Association. With this information it will enable you to check up the levies, that are being made by the secretary of the Ontario Cheese Factories' Association in your district," pointed out W. B. Nolan, secretary of the Napanee Board.

The resolution read by Mr. Fred Mallory, secretary of the Belleville Board at the meeting and passed by the Napanee Board was moved by Mr. Drew and seconded by Mr. Wringe. It asked:

"That the secretary of the Napanee Board be requested to write the Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa, requesting the names of the cheese factories that Board their cheese on the Napanee Cheese Board who have signed with the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association. And that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Belleville, Ingersoll and Woodstock Cheese Boards, and that they be asked to pass similar resolutions in order that the several boards may know exactly what factories have become members of the Patrons' Association."

In commenting upon it following its reading, Secretary Mallory of the Belleville Board pointed out, that it didn't matter if cheese factories were patrons or not. "They are still subject to the levy as usual, because it is now law," he added.

Factories Not Agreed

"There is not a factory in the Napanee district, which has approved of this thing," declared Mr. McCreary, buyer.

"Exactly," agreed Mr. Cook, buyer. "The only thing the Napanee Cheese Board wants is the number, who have signed. They want to find out if it is was proper representation at the time they were being asked to sign, or if it was misrepresentation. Just as we want to do."

Mr. Ostrom, buyer: "As I see it they want to find out, who is responsible for this imposition—this levy."

Mr. C. Fraleigh, president Bloomfield factory: "The thing is law now, and we can't do anything to change it. Let the whole thing ride for a while and see if there will be any benefit from it. If not then it will kill itself. As I understand it, they will have to take another vote on it at the beginning of next year and if it hasn't been favorable all around it will be snowed under. I move we let it rest for a time."

"I'll second the motion," added Mr. Geo. Cross.

The motion put to vote by president of the board, Mr. W. E. Morrow was carried with only one dissenting vote, that of Mr. James Cooke.

ITALIANS TEST WAR INSTRUMENT

Chemical Solution Spread On Ground Will Burn Feet

(By Andrue Berding)

(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

With the Italian Army, Bolzano, Italy, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Poison gas and war maneuvres in this battle area on the Austrian frontier today exhibited the effectiveness of the chemical which, spread on the ground, will burn the feet of Ethiopians in the event of war in East Africa.

Only a weak solution was employed in today's demonstration, which was followed by more than 100 foreign military attaches. Its purpose was to check a counter-attack.

This military soon became the seat of most government leaders. Undersecretary Cabinet ministers and Under Secretaries of States cut from the commands of their regiments and battalions to transact government business by telephone to Rome. When Mussolini arrived here the government will be moved up to the sham war some nearly 100 per cent.

Among the soldier statesmen are Foreign Under-secretary Fulvio Suvich, a good-looking cavalry major and Alessandro Lessona, Under Secretary for Colonies. Suvich keeps in touch with developments in Paris and London over the Ethiopian situation while Lessona follows the progress of the extensive military preparations in Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

When the telephoning is finished, they again become snappy cavalry officers. It was Lessona's duty to lead "Divisione Celerye"—the Speed Division—cavalry through wooded mountains.

BELLEVILLE FAIR OPENS TUESDAY

Dating back beyond extant newspaper records and other documents, the fair at Belleville which opens on Tuesday afternoon launches out this year into a new life as a Class B. Exhibition.

The crowds which will visit the fair will see evidence on every hand of this increased importance of the institution from an agricultural point.

Records of the ancient fairs held in Belleville which have been reproduced from time to time indicate that important social events these exhibitions were, when the country was not so developed as it is today. But as the countryside develops the fair must develop .The country cannot do without this show of agriculture which must occupy in men's minds no small place for it is the prime essential of a country, especially of Canada.

The interest which the smaller fairs are arousing is but a sign of the supreme value of fairs.

Therefore everyone should lend support to the exhibition and so aid farming phases by throwing light upon it, and by bringing to it the ideas and experience that are the leaders in the various departments of farming as in stock raising, grain growing and so forth.

Modern industry also comes in for a large share of attention today for segregation of town and country is not to be thought of, for both are in reality one.

HOME FOR NESTORIANS

Nestorian-Christians, that is what remains of them, are likely to be given a home through the agency of the League of Nations. Certain places have been offered, France's proffer of territory within the borders of Syria on the Khabur River, which gathers the waters of several streams, lies in the area where once stood the Euphrates and on the way to ancient Babylonia and Assyria, will likely be the choice.

Those people are exiles. They belong to that ancient Christian sect which Marco Polo, the great explorer, found in nearly every place he visited. Driven by further side of Cathay or China, where a Nestorian was governor of a city which had three churches of Nestorian Christians. During the World War they lived in the Hakkiari Mountains, now unoccupied, which was given to Turkey in 1925. As they had left their homes to fight on behalf of the Allies they were not wanted in Turkey and Britain in yielding her mandate to Iraq expected Iraq would treat these strangers with kindness. A number were massacred in an Iraq village and now about 20,000, the last of them, live in Mosul as strangers fearing further calamity.

Britain has changed her colonial mandate and has felt them on her conscience because Britain assured the League that Iraq was ready for independence. Iraq has offered $125,000 to provide for the cost of the migration but more money will be needed.

Nestorius, the founder of the sect, became patriarch of Constantinople in 428 A.D. Soon after his consecration a controversy arose as to the divine and human nature of Christ. Cyril, patriarch of Alexandria, who followed Nestorius having in a sermon which was by some credited to Nestorius himself, started the controversy, exaggerating the difference between the two natures in Our Lord, the human person of Christ and the Divine Person of the Word. Nestorius championed the view of Anastasius. Cyril, patriarch of Alexandria, drew up a formal condemnation in twelve anathemas and a similar condemnation, accompanied by deposition and excommunication from Celestine, Bishop of Rome. At the General Council held at Ephesus in 431 Nestorius was condemned and deposed. He was ultimately confined in a monastery, being later banished to the Greater Oasis in Egypt and after several of changes of place of confinement he died in exile.

THE WISHING TREE

King John was reluctantly signing the Magna Charta at Runnymede, when the "wishing tree" on the Sandwich Road some six or seven miles from Bloomfield was a little sapling, such as many growing on lawns and in gardens today.

This was now what it was. Seven hundred years or more old this ancient tree has had all its limbs. Latterly they were broken down. They are now lopped off and over the top is a small canopy to protect the tree from the weather while under the fringe of the cover are colored light bulbs.

Centred in the roadway it stands. Those who see it now are among the fortunate persons to see so old a growth of nature. How long it will remain intact remains to be told.

It is worth seeing.

That only is true knowledge of God which regenerates and conforms us to God —Calvin.

Knowledge is the consequence of time and multitude of days are fittest to teach wisdom.—Collier.

SEA DAWN

Oh, the long dune, and the low dune—
Where the sea sighing lazily
Treads the shore with foamy shoon
And gulls wheel crazily!
Shy blush of waking East,
Red gold of dawning!
Fire stir of bird and beast—
Heralds of morning!
On the horizon's crest
Smoke banners trailing—
Gulls, sullen, hunger pressed
Break into wailing!
Salt breeze and soul space,
Freedom Elysian—
Spread sails on the sea's face
Satisfy vision!

WAR CORRESPONDENTS IN ETHIOPIA are sending in hurried calls for gas masks and tin hats. Looks like all the glamour is being take nof even the job of war correspondent. Poison gas, liquid fire, disescase germs and all the modern torture frills attached to war by scientists experimenting on the idea of killing as many men in the least possible time in the most horrible and torturing way, carrying out the German military code of frightfulness without limit, "sink without trace", etc., makes a modern war only interesting a few thousand miles away from the arena of hostilities.

BOAT EXCURSIONS which were pushed out of the picture by the vogue of the automobile, are coming back, and reports are still fresh in the memory of the popular reaction in favor of outings on the water. The Canada Steamship Lines are carrying capacity crowds this season, and some of the C. S. L. fleet boats are working night and day to satisfy the excursion demand. The Rapids Queen which makes the Saturday trips from Belleville and Picton, real, calling at Belleville east bound Monday night, west bound Friday afternoon, arrives in Toronto Saturday morning, leaves Sunday afternoon for King Ston and the Thousand Islands week-end excursion, returns to Toronto Sunday night, leaving on Monday on the Montreal trip, calling at Belleville about midnight Monday. The Bay of Quinte by moonlight and daylight, the Thousand Islands by daylight, shooting the rapids in daylight and night in Montreal, a seaport city, with its quaint French Canadian customs and sights and scenes peculiar only to a salt water port, these are the things read with its dust and dirt and many irritations, compared to the clean happiness of a boat trip with good meals and state room to retire to whenever a nap is indicated, just doesn't jell, that's all.

WHOLESALE PURCHASE OF VOTERS at $25 per month per head (promise to pay in eighteen months) has given Alberta a new government and left the province face with a potential debt, over and above present indebtedness, of over one hundred million dollars a year, in promises, on account of the provincial social credit plank in the platform of the victors. The magician who can make money out of mud promised $25 a month in credit to every elector, but added eighteen months to each his credit making machine. Alberta electors are no dumber than any other electors anywhere, so it shows that promises, no matter how fantastic, are still potential planks to get into office on. In fact one prominent Canadian statesman, said that political platforms were like Pullman car platforms, useful simply to get in on. The near success of Sinclair in California and growth of the Townsend and Huey Long phantasies in the United States seems to show that ballyhoo can overcome common sense—and blatherskites can attain strong followings if they only yell loud enough and promise wealth without work, a Santa Claus every day of the year—two hundred dollars a months for every person over sixty, a la the Townsend plan, and other equally visionary schemes like the Alberta social credit phantasy. Shows that it is easier to implant a lie than to prove the truth.

Some Speed—A man was driving a big car at a fast speed along a wide road when a very small car appeared alongside, as if trying to pass him. The driver of the big car wouldn't let a small car pass him, not even a new one. He went faster still—sixty—sixty-five miles an hour—but still the small car kept beside him. Suddenly the driver of the small car opened his window and shouted. "Do you know anything about these cars?" "Why?" asked the other driver. "I can't shift the thing into top gear," was the reply.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT

by T. E. LAWRENCE

At the same time we pushed our machine gunners forward on the left, to fire long bursts into the trenches, which returned a hot obstinate fire. However, our troops had natural shelter and the advantage of the afternoon sun behind their backs. So we suffered no hurt. Nor did the enemy. Of course, all this was just a game, and the capture of the station was not our plan. Our real objective was the railway bridge north of the village. The ridge below our feet curved out in a long bend, to this west, observing an one bank of the valley which it was built to span. The village stood on the other bank. The Turks held the bridge by means of a small redoubt, and had constant touch with it by riflemen posted in the village under cover of its walls.

We turned two of Pisani's guns and six machine-guns on the redoubt, and deep-dug the bridge, hoping to force its defenders out. Five machine-guns divided Maulud from the village. In fifteen minutes its artillery was all with us, very much perturbed. Nuri, pat, as the condition of Cossack fire, their instant allotment of the Turks' rifle bullet houses. They promised. So station after station fell silent.

We redoubled against these. The Turks from the bridge replied more violent, thanks to our twenty-five machine-guns. The Turks also were plentifully supplied. At last we put all four of Pisani's guns against the redoubt, and, as the range grew true, thought we saw its guard slip-through the bridge into cover of the railway bank opposite.

This embankment was twenty feet high. It the bridge-guard chose to defend it, they had the natural arches they would be in a costly position. However, we reckoned on the attraction if their fellows in the redoubt began to suffer, and so told off the half of my bodyguard, carrying explosives to move along the embankment, and, if the Turks stone's throw of the redoubt.

This was a noble enough rulow, mild and indescribably peaceful: a field for our inexperience to learn in. The declining light shone down the angle of the ridges, its soft rays mellowed them, and their colour was contour in a delicate complexity of shades. Then, the air was unusually still second, and the surface became shadow cool as the night approached there rose, starkly, the innumerable flints strewing it; each westerm reflecting light, tipped like a black diamond with flame.

The redoubt was indeed abandoned: so we dismounted, and signalled Nuri to cease fire. In silence we crept discreetly through the bridge-arches, and found them also evacuated.

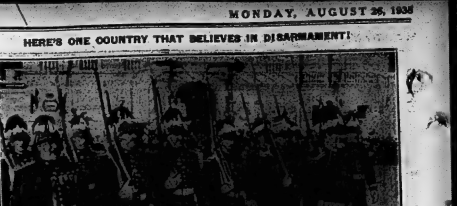
Hurriedly we piled gunmotion against the piers, which were about five feet thick and twenty-five feet high. A good bridge, and severely built, and strategically most critical. Alone we were going to fire, because it was dusky until Aziz's camp came forward and relieved us. Only I had determined to leave a record of it in place.

Nuri meanwhile was hurrying the infantry, towards the line, with orders to get a mile beyond Maulud, form up into one column, and wait.

Yet the passing of so many camels over the track must take time: slowly, the last and choked unit under the bridge, matches in hand, to touch off the charges (the troops had there was an alarm. Fortunately everything went well, and after an hour's blast on my signal, Hail a minute later my preference for the Turkish redoubt the right hundred pounds of explosive, and the black air became stalkast with flying stones. The explosion was terrific, shaking my seventy yards, and must have been heard clearly in Damascus.

Nuri, in great distress, sought me out. He had given the last clear-cut order that nothing that one company of mounted infantry was to be left behind. Many parts were reaching for service. Rtafi el Hareidhi, with whom I had spent the night in the hills, while Nuri and I stood by the yawning pit, which had been the bridge-centre, with an electric torch, to give them a fixed point to rally to.

Mahmud came back in half an hour, triumphant. Everything had gone well. We fired shots to recall the other searchers, and then rode off to the village, to join Nuri's forces at Umtaiya. The going became heavy, with the ploughed land, requiring dolerite: so we gladly called a halt, and I drew in the reins for an earned sleep.



However, it seemed that Nasir had not yet won the habit of sleeping. Our noise at Nlaib had awakened Jedda, and widely at the plateau of Mesereb. Hardly were we settled down when a messenger came in from three sides to discuss the news events. It was being rumored that we were looting, and that Nasir was buying that later we would run away, as had the British from Salt, leaving our local friends to pay the bills.

Two night, for hour after hour, was broken by these newcomers arriving and departing, and receiving their way to us like lost souls, and, peasant-like, blubbering and kissing hands with protestations that we were their highest lords and that they were our slaves. Then, gradually, the reception of them fell short of expectation of very good, but, in revenge, they were applying for torture of keeping us awake, uneasily searching for service. Rtafi el Hareidhi, with whom I had spent the night in the hills, while Nuri and I stood by the yawning pit, which had been the bridge-centre, with an electric torch, to give them a fixed point to rally to.

HERE'S ONE COUNTRY THAT BELIEVES IN DISARMAMENT!

When most nations are building up their armies to great strength, one country at least is reducing its military power. A few days ago Prince Louis of Monaco gave his "army" of 76 men three months' notice. The reason he gave was that a falling off of gambling returns from the famous Monte Carlo casino necessitated economy. ABOVE is seen the colorful army of the principality of Monaco.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 26TH, 1915.

In certain sections in this city only there was a slight frost on Saturday, but fortunately little damage was done.

Specimens from various ports on the bay were brought to the city today by the steamer Belleville.

The newly organized gun club at Foxcabbo had a successful shoot at clay pigeons recently. Messrs M. Spafford, W. Hall and Turley of this city participated in the sport and made creditable scores.

Mr. Ross Hunter who has been home on a visit, has returned to Buffalo.

Mr. William Thompson, merchant of this city, is spending a short time in the northern part of the county.

30 Years Ago

AUGUST 26TH, 1905.

Mackinonge fishing in the bay has been decidedly good during the past week and it looks as though the season is to be a best in many years. Some days ago at least seven were caught and on Friday fifty-seven were tarded by Messrs. William Jenkins, D. R. Lazenby and T. B. Clarke. The fish were caught in Muddy Bay and weighed from 2 and 36 pounds.

Messrs. Geo. Grills, E. F. Millburn, J. D. Clarke and R. Waller left today for a few days' cruise among the 1000 Islands in Millburn's sailing yacht.

Everything in readiness for the rebuilding of the pavement will on the east side of the river from the lower bridge to the park roadway. It will take months to do the job.

Mr. H. W. Cronk has returned from a trip to Buffalo, N.Y.

Mr. George B. Hall, solicitor, is spending today in Madoc.

Mr. George Gillespie, D.D.S., C.S. of the Ancient Order of Foresters, left this morning for Guelph to attend the annual meeting of the High Court.

Dr. David Bell Burdett died at his home here late yesterday afternoon after a lengthy illness. The late Dr. Burdett was the son of the late David Burdett and was born in Prince Edward County on June 10th, 1826. He married a sister of George E. Henderson and the late A. H. Henderson and Mrs. Vane Henderson of this city, all of them were born two children, Dr. Harry Burdett of St. Paul, Minn., and Miss Maud Burdett of Montreal. He graduated from Trinity College, Toronto, in 1856 and settled in Belleville the same year. He was appointed Medical Health Officer for a number of years and was Surgeon-Major of the 15th Battalion, A.L.I. He was a member of the Medical Board of Examiners of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario. Dr. Burdett was a skilful and successful physician and had a large practice. A member in connection with the death of Dr. Burdett is that his son Harry Burdett telegraphed his uncle, his father's brother at Newburgh, as follows: "Father died yesterday afternoon. Funeral tomorrow afternoon. After sending the telegram he returned at once to his mother's residence and there immediately he received a message from his cousin in Newburgh purporting to come from his son. At the one he had just sent, informing him that his uncle had gone to whom he had sent the telegram, was told that the funeral would be the same time as that of his father. The telegrams had crossed.

—MUSSOLINI, MODERN CAESAR—

Born in Poverty, Mussolini Began Political Career At Age of 16, Fostered by Radicalism of Father

Man Who Is To-Day the Red Incarnation of Caesar, Was Brought Up in Atmosphere of Revolutionary Socialism

'WAR IS AN ATROCIOUS BUSINESS'

In this the first of 12 articles, a distinguished writer of foreign affairs begins the life story of the man whose career, as brought in sharp relief by the North African adventure which may prove to be the zenith of his career. The romance of Benito's drama largely from original sources, the writings of Mussolini and his associates have been consulted freely. The story does not attempt to view Fascism either pro or con, but to set forth the facts of the blacksmith's son who has become Italy's modern Caesar.

By J. O. CRITTENDEN

In the crucible of war, heated by the flames to which outworn systems of government and human relationships were consigned, the 20th Century has moulded a few men of distinct personality.

They are those whose names are daily on the lips of all who speak, the writing of tongue, and before the eyes of all who read.

They are, in essence, the dictators, Stalin, Hitler — and Mussolini.

Of the three, two read nations still in a state of flux and turmoil. Stalin, silent and inscrutable in the shadows of Lenin, and Hitler, who has remade a nation and angered the world, are figures of mystery.

Of Benito Amilcare Mussolini it can at least be said that he did made of his dictatorship a success; that he has rebuilt his nation, has won unconditional support from the majority of his people and still marches unswerving on a path he has charted as a road of Italian glory.

In this one thing he has been consistent to the ultimate degree. In strategy and method of approach he has changed like a chameleon, and has justified it on the grounds of expediency. Long a pacifist, he became a militarist, for he saw in the great war the first flames of a conflagration not destined so much to change the map of Europe and the philosophy of the whole world as to make a political corpse of the parliamentarianism which for decades had retarded the progress of his own Italy.

Years ago he wrote, probably with an eye to the future, that imperialistic expansion by military means is a waste and a trap, and that in modern industrial development lies the hope of national glory. To-day he is getting for war, with Ethiopia, thrusting all spiritual considerations aside, facing the censure of the world with equanimity and stolid belief in the security of his own destiny.

He is courting war—for the second time in his life, for in 1915, after shedding the mantle of chief Italian advocate of "absolute neutrality," he campaigned with all the force at his command for intervention on the side of the allies against the central powers. His object was to find common ground among the men of all Italy — from the sanctimonious papal supporters to the lay Atys of the north — for construction of a "national" edifice dedicated to destruction of all that was outworn and old.

Inspire Greatness

Today, his object is no less clear. It is to make Italy once again with a feeling of greatness among powers and among men. Some critics say it is a confession his own position is slipping — that he is using this hypodermic for a new lease on life. Mussolini might not put it so boldly. But he has always heralded during the 13 years he has wielded unchecked power in Italy, that he drew alone his strength and in jealous and occasional use of arms rests greatness.

Force is not everything, Mussolini says, but it is the most essential thing — the thing to which peoples must inevitably come back in the end.

"Others do not always keep this fact in mind," he once said to a close associate, "I do. I never rule in cant from the play of possibilities. For there is no need to desire war —that atrocious business, and all who have a hand in it know how atrocious it is, and above all there is no need to wage war; but one cannot afford to be oblivious of it. The nation which rules war, out as the ultima ratio is lost."

Born in Poverty

The man whose intellect permitted him thus to embrace all irreconcilables but commit himself irrevocably to none, rose from the depths of obscurity.

He was born 53 years ago in the hamlet of Varano di Costa, situated on the slope of a hill near Dovia, in the region known as Predappio in the Romagna. For six centuries his antecedents had been poor and humble people — blacksmiths or innkeepers like his father.

Benito's father, Alessandro, who abandoned a smithy for the more lucrative trade of country barkeep when the dictator was a stripling, gave the youth all the home training he needed for a lively and growing interest in politics and human affairs.

Father Was Radical

He was a revolutionary Socialist, of a distinctly radical stripe, and about him in the humble inn gathered the liberals of the surrounding country to drink the rich wine of the region, and talk of the disintegration of the nation which Garibaldi had given birth. He named his son for Mexico's radical firebrand, Benito Juarez. Young Benito carried pails of wine and water for the first ears open and huge black eyes absorbing as he listened to the rustic discourse upon politics and society. Their recurring theme was how the greatness of Italy might again be restored.

His mother, a gentle and exceedingly intelligent woman, taught school at Dovia. Here it was that Mussolini received his first tutelage. He left no particular mark for brilliance in those early days, and appears to have distinguished himself more as a young roughneck fond of fights and quick to protect the younger and helpless friend from bullies.

In Politics at 16

At 16, still engrossed in studies which year by year took a more serious turn, Mussolini launched himself actively into politics. Not content with mere attendance at political meetings, he participated in discussions in his father's taproom. He founded his first newspaper and with boyish sheet called Le Lotta di Classe, or Peril of Class.

The four years he campaigned with this modest publication. At 20 he became Socialist leader of Predappio and editor of the party's leading newspaper Avanti. During his whole career as an active Socialist, Predappio remained his stronghold and Avanti his mouthpiece. But when in 1915 he renounced the pacifism of his party, took the rostrum for intervention in the war and broke away from Socialism, both disowned him. He polled but a dozen votes in the next local elections, heard himself read out of the party at a stormy and acrimonious caucus, and published unprintable terms in the columns of the newspaper he had so long edited.

Always a Journalist

In the life of Mussolini there are great gaps as a politician—the war years, for example, when Fascism was but a nebulous thought somewhere in the back of a singularly capable mind. But as a journalist he has continued without a break from the early, groping days as editor of La Lotta di Classe, until today, when he spends his time at council sessions jotting down notes for articles in his own great and powerful daily, Popolo d'Italia.

Thus his career has always been indelibly linked with the printed page. From the columns of his newspapers he thundered his thoughts in the days when people laughed and thundered again with renewed vigor when they began to do his bidding and plead impatiently for the start of the march on Rome.

How Mussolini became an article-writer of frequent repute while in jails is told in the next chapter, to be published tomorrow.

"The Autobiography of Michel de Montaigne," edited by Salvin-Berry. "The finest Frenchman that ever lived," is a selection and arrangement, from his essays, by Marvin Lowenthal. The author has collected the essays of Montaigne into a chronological sequence, and has arranged them under definite headings. He discusses his youth, his marriage, his old age. There is a definite charm to his zest for life. We see him commenting shrewdly on books, authors and notables of the time. Marvin Lowenthal, in this "experiment in autobiography" has made it possible for Montaigne to show what a modern he was in his own day and in the present day also. He has made this great mind of the sixteenth century real for the average reader as well as for the scholar.

Two new books on politics and government present reconstructive programs by competent thinkers. Professor Gilbert Jackson of the University of Toronto offers a simple but sound doctrine for the cure of the world's ills in "An Economist's Confession of Faith." "During these crowded years," Professor followed disaster, I noted that my fellow Canadians — like most of the rest of mankind — were sending their garments with unslackened zeal. One practical suggestion, and one only, permeated these homilies of mine — that men should read their own hearts better." Professor Jackson has had an interesting public career. He edited the Canadian Forum for the first thirty years of its life and since 1927 has been Economist for the Bank of Nova Scotia.

"The case for National Government is given, from the angles of politics, economics and social affairs, by five members of the Macmillan Committee who met England in "Towards a National Policy". Lord Elton, R. C. Davison, Prof. Allen Flux, Hubert Henderson, Lindsay M. P. and the Hon. R. D. Denman M. P., each discussing a different aspect of National Government. The preface by The Rt. Hon. J. Ramsay MacDonald forms a connecting link between chapters.

Harry Emerson Fosdick has collected his essays which have appeared in Harper's Magazine, the Atlantic Monthly, and the Ladies' Home Journal in his book "Adventurous Religion". The essays cover a variety of themes but their unifying background is "the challenging religious situation in America created in part by the rise of fundamentalism". Among the essay topics discussed are "Science and Religion" "The Degire for Immortality" "Tolerance" and "The Dangers of Modernism."

Mary Pickford has described her philosophy of life in the small volume "Why Not Try God." In simple terms she gives her methods of meeting troubles, fears and doubts. She advises others to do the same course. K. O.

MOUNT PLEASANT W. M. S.

The ladies of Mount Pleasant W.M.S. held their August meeting at the home of Mrs. Russel Treverton. The meeting opened by singing a hymn and prayer by Mrs. J. Treverton. Miss Lottie Goodman read the Scripture lesson found in John, 24th chapter. All the ladies answered the roll call. Minutes were read and adopted. Miss Treverton gave a recitation, "I Use My Little Now." Mrs. R. Hoard gave a reading which was much enjoyed by all. Miss Martha Treverton favored us with a reading, "Mama's." Mrs. J. Baldrick kindly opened her home for the September meeting. Miss L. Goodman gave the half yearly report which is as follows: Treasurer's receipts—Cash from last year 22c; Annual Membership Fee, $1.55; Easter Thank-Offering $25.00; Other Sources and Donations, $11.50; Sent to Presbyterial Treasurer, $38.00; Cash on hand 12c.

Hymn No. 223 was sung and all repeated the Lord's Prayer. Collection $1.39. Fifteen members and one visitor were present. The hostess served a dainty lunch and a social half hour was spent.

HALLOWAY W. M. S.

The W.M.S. of Halloway met on Wednesday, 21st, at the church. After dinner they served a quilt was quilted for the sale. The president opened the meeting with hymn 384 and the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. The Scripture lesson was read responsively by the secretary. The secretary, Mrs. John Townsend took charge of her work. The roll call was answered by Bible readings. After different items of business was attended to Miss Beatrice McMullen gave a reading. Hymn 45 was sung and the meeting brought to a close ....

Coiffure Fashions

Now we have a swing— away from the "Little Women" style of hair dress. Thick wide bangs of elegant ringlets, hair pulled away and straight at the sides, ringlets at the rear, may be all right for Ginger Rogers and some of the other exotic of the silver screen. But they're trying on Sally Jones and Mary Brown. They make Sally and Mary look quaint, maybe, but it is the kind of quaintness that lacks softness and becomingness. So Sally and Mary are chucking it.

The new mode is not startling Coiffures seldom are. They move in one state to another, like a growing thing. The requirements seem to be; a wider, softer wave line; puffs, rather than circls, and the fat rose at that; less length to the hair; hair upped a bit from the nape line.

More than one girl, this summer, has suddenly got mad at her dangling tresses and sheared them. To cut the hair is a delicious temptation. Small children are always getting hot locks here and there. Grown gals succumb. The results are only naturally satisfying. The blended lambrequin is shorter, but the professional hair cutter has to put it there. It looks like Ragandy Anne.

Coiffure designers have developed their art to the highest degree; offer completely new arrangements and a lot of the top mop. Their ingenuity is amazing, their versatility surprising, worn. It is an evening indulgence.

Correct Manners

Day In the Country

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited to spend the day with my girl friend at her home in the country. Shall I take a box of candy to her mother? I have never met any of her family, and I have only known the girl a few months. Do you think it proper?

2. If I go, should I write a note of thanks to my friend, and to her mother?

N.

1. Yes, taking a box of candy to the mother would be thoroughly proper and correct and delightful gesture for you to make.

2. Yes, even for so short a visit it will be gracious for you to write a note to the girl's mother and a note to the girl, thanking them for the friendliness and hospitality. This will show them that you are an appreciative person, and a person accustomed to express your appreciation in a generous way.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

After the gentleman has escorted the lady to her door, he is still very early, whose place is it to suggest going into the house for a while?

Flo.

It is the girl's home, and she, as hostess, should be the one to extend this invitation. A well-bred man would wait for this invitation from the girl, and wouldn't consider making the suggestion himself.

Who Is Served First.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a mother is visiting her self and family for dinner is it proper to serve the wife or mother first.

Bachelor Girl

By all means the mother should be served first. She is in this case, the woman guest of honor and the woman guest of honor should always be served first. It is not correct to serve the hostess first, and the son's wife, at this dinner, is, of course, the hostess.

MUSIC PUPILS RECEIVE AWARDS

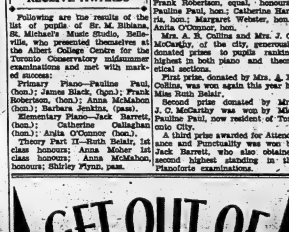
Following are the results of the list of pupils of Sr. M. Bibiana, St. Michael's Music Studio, Belleville, who presented themselves at the Albert College Centre for the Toronto Conservatory examinations and met with marked success:

Primary Piano—Pauline Paul, (hon.); James Black, (pass); Frank Robertson, (hon.); Anna McMahon (hon.); Barbara Jenkins, (pass). Elementary Piano—Jack Barrett, (hon.); Catherine Callaghan (hon.); Anita O'Connor (hon.)

Theory Part II—Ruth Belair, 1st class honours; Anna Moher 1st class honours; Anna McMahon, honours; Shirley Flynn, pass.



Theory Part I—Dorothy Kelly, 1st class honours; Barbara Jenkins, 1st class honours; James Black and Frank Robertson, equal honours; Pauline Paul, hon.; Catherine Harris, hon.; Margaret Webster, hon.; Anita O'Connor, hon.

Mrs. A. N. Collins and Mrs. J. C. McCarthy, of the city, generously donated prizes to pupils ranking highest in both piano and theoretical sections.

First prize, donated by Mrs. A. N. Collins, was won again this year by Miss Ruth Belair.

Second prize donated by Mrs. J. C. McCarthy was won by Miss Pauline Paul, now resident of Toronto City.

A third prize awarded for Attendance and Punctuality was won by Jack Barrett, who also obtained second highest standing in the Pianoforte examinations.

Stamp Appraiser Will Hold Clinic

Walter N. Emerson, Chicago stamp collector and appraiser was in Belleville today arranging to hold a stamp clinic at the James Tents shop, Front Street on Thursday from nine o'clock in the morning until five in the afternoon.

Mr. Emerson who was a president of the Chicago Philatelic Society, is an ardent collector. He comes to meet a number of collectors from the city and district who would like to learn stamp values. He is not selling anything, and only wishes to bring their collections. He is ready to buy any stamps in which he is interested if the collector wishes to sell.

There will be no cost for appraising values.

Livestock

Toronto, Aug. 26—(CP)— Cattle movement was spotty at the opening of the Toronto Dominion market today with killers very slow and stockers fairly active. Holdovers numbered 1,400 head and the fresh run included 2,900 head of western steers. Hogs and lambs opened unsettled with bids on both divisions down 10 cents. Cheep and calves were steady.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch: Cattle 3,700; calves 700; hogs 360; sheep and lambs 1,250.

Cattle trade moved from $4.00 to $6.75 with a few common down to $3.25. Bulk of good steers and heifers ranged from $7.50 to $8.00.

The calf division, though steady, had an easier feeling as choice vealers brought $7.50 to $8.00 and good to choice $6.50 to $7.50. Medium grassers went at $3.50 to $4.00.

Hogs sold from $9.00 to $9.25 with $8.50 f.o.b. for bacons, a 50-cent decrease from last week's close. Lambs also were graded with bids 50 lower at $7.50 for good ewes and wethers.

A few good, light sheep sold up to $3.00 per cwt.

Quotations:

Calves, good and choice, $7.00 to $8.00; common to medium $4.00 to $6.50; grassers, $3.50 to $4.00.

Hogs, bacons, hogs, sheep and lambs, as quotations.

Board Room Gossip

As reported to Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service.

Toronto, Aug. 26.

Diamond drilling from the 500-foot level of Central Patricia, Gold Mines Ltd., has cut the vein for about approximately 175 feet between the 500 and 600 foot levels, according to an official statement. The "D" ore shoot on the 125-foot level has been proved for a distance of 75 ft., averaging 6 oz. ores across the entire face still in ore.

The No. 3 shaft; is now down 150 feet and a station is being cut. Crosscutting and drifting will be carried on from this level.

Diamond drilling carried on at the east and west of the main shaft has found ore bodies has indicated sections of commercial grade ore. Further work will have to be done on these areas before any estimate can be given as to the importance of these intersections.

Despite the fact that Wall Street continued its rise last week, the Canadian markets were more or less stationary. The "Golds" have recently shown distinct signs of weakness. Liquidation in a number of these securities is maintained and in general it is maintained that the selling of gold stocks is emanating from the United States where bankers feel that the industrial outlook is not conducive for appreciation. Talk of inflation has practically died out, thus eliminating one of the chief buying factors for the yellow metal producers.

The long-awaited equipment orders officially announced last week, amounting to close to $10,000,000 and were divided as follows: American $5.5 million; Montreal Steel Car $2.5 million; Eastern Car $2.5 million; Montreal Locomotive $1.1 millions and Canadian Locomotive $483,900. For some reason, the securities did not respond and failed to reflect marketwise the benefits that will accrue from the above business.

A block of 250,000 shares of International Petroleum was reported sold privately on the Curb last week. It stood that this stock was placed at a new permanent level on unrelling market quotations. In view of the high yield afforded by the issue, its exceptionally strong financial position and its ability not only to maintain but increase present dividend disbursements in times of depression, it is not surprising that such a large block of stock was easily disposed of. The sale of a quarter of a million shares is considered by a real worthy of special note.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Aug. 26—Exports from Montreal last week totalled 1,000,000 boxes, compared with 20,753 in the preceding week, and 27,618 in the corresponding week last year. There were also exported 170 boxes of butter, compared with 1,000 the week of the season to date, and reflect the better trade with United Kingdom demand of late.

Receipts at Montreal last week with comparisons, were posted at the Board of Trade on Saturday as follows:

| | Eggs | Butter | Cheese |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Cases | Boxes | Boxes |
| Last week | 11,566 | 16,580 | 12,396 |
| Week ago | 7,266 | 19,315 | 7,351 |
| Year ago | 14,631 | 12,096 | 28,941 |

Price changes continued narrow during the week, but declined somewhat fractionally; cheese was steady to firm; potatoes were a little stronger; while eggs and poultry were unchanged.

The butter market ended the week generally around 31c per lb. for creamery specials, or 1-4c to 1-2c lower than a week ago. Offerings were light and good demand existed. Dealers were looking for 32c per lb. this week. Dependence on quality, other sales were reported 1-2c under the above levels on top grades, and 1-2c to 1c lower on lower grades. Small lots to the retail trade were selling at the wholesale jobbing houses as follows:

| | Cartons, Loose |
|---|---|
| A-1 large | 31c 30½c |
| A-1 medium | 30c 29½c |
| A-1 large | 29c 28½c |
| A-medium | 30c 29c |
| B | 28c 27c |
| C | 27c 26c |

The potato market was also 50c to 75c per bag lower for new potatoes.

Dressed poultry is quoted by jobbers to the retail trade as follows on a grade, B grade being 3c per lb. less:

| | Per lb. |
|---|---|
| Turkeys | 32c-35c |
| Milkfed chickens | 30c-32c |
| Selected chickens | 25c-30c |
| Fowl | 20c-24c |
| Broilers | 30c-35c |
| Ducks | 25c-30c |
| Bronze Lake ducklings | 18c-19c |
| Domestic ducklings | 15c-18c |

Livestock

Toronto, Aug. 26—(CP)— Cattle movement was spotty at the opening of the Toronto Dominion market today with killers very slow and stockers fairly active. Holdovers numbered 1,400 head and the fresh run included 2,900 head of western steers. Hogs and lambs opened unsettled with bids on both divisions down 10 cents. Cheep and calves were steady.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch: Cattle 3,700; calves 700; hogs 360; sheep and lambs 1,250.

Cattle trade moved from $4.00 to $6.75 with a few common down to $3.25. Bulk of good steers and heifers ranged from $7.50 to $8.00.

The calf division, though steady, had an easier feeling as choice vealers brought $7.50 to $8.00 and good to choice $6.50 to $7.50. Medium grassers went at $3.50 to $4.00.

Hogs sold from $9.00 to $9.25 with $8.50 f.o.b. for bacons, a 50-cent decrease from last week's close. Lambs also were graded with bids 50 lower at $7.50 for good ewes and wethers.

A few good, light sheep sold up to $3.00 per cwt.

Quotations:

Calves, good and choice, $7.00 to $8.00; common to medium $4.00 to $6.50; grassers, $3.50 to $4.00.

Hogs, bacons, hogs, sheep and lambs, as quotations.

CHEESE BOARD

St. Louis Cards Top National Winning Double Bill While Cubs Take Giants by 5-4

Looks Like Cards Stand To Stay For The World's Series

TIGERS MOVE ON

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

If the Cubs don't accomplish anything else this season they can claim credit for being the club that knocked the Giants out of the National League lead. And right now it looks as if the New York team would have a very tough time trying to get back to the top.

It was the Cubs, who put the skids under the Terrymen more than anything else when they took four straight out in Chicago last month and they repeated the task yesterday by knocking off the Giants for the third time in four starts, 5-4, but not the way they did it in the first game behind St. Louis Cardinals. The Giants did their share to help them the Dodgers twice, 10-3 and 4-1 behind the three hit pitching of those who pitched St. Louis to a pennant and a world championship last year.

Wad Tunes Play at Home

It was the first time since April 27, with the exception of the intervening between games of a doubleheader last month, that the Giants have been anywhere but first and the Cards have been that high. As the situation now stands, the Giants are the pursuers instead of the pursued and the program is all against them. They have to take on the fourth place Pirates then Brooklyn, while the Cards have a chance to increase their margin at Philadelphia's expense. Chicago, only two games behind New York, goes to Boston for another effort to catch up. After Labor Day the western teams will have the added advantage of playing most of their games at home.

The Giants made a fine effort to avert yesterday's defeat. Hal Schumacher was wild and the Cubs built up a 5-1 lead with Mel Ott's 26th homer as the only New York run. Then the Giants got busy and drove Bill Lee out but failed to get the tying run. Meanwhile the Cards belted Johnny Babich for five runs in the second inning of the opener and went on to give Jerome Dean his 22nd pound victory. They followed up with it more, blows while Paul Daffy held the Dodgers to eight.

American League

The American League action again centred around the three way struggle for third place and a series of doubleheaders ended with Boston Red Sox jumping from fifth to third and Chicago and Cleveland winding up in virtual tie for fourth.

The Red Sox beat the Indians twice, 5-4 and 8-3, winning the opener with a two-run rally in the ninth and the nightcap with a 17-hit barrage, while Cleveland fans staged a near riot in protest over a reversed decision. Umpire Brick Owens called Meldrim's bunt foul, then after consulting with Lou Koltz at first changed the ruling. Some of the 30,000 fans—the season's largest crowd—heard pop bottles and dashed out on the field and the umps got police protection, when they went down.

Chicago split a bargain bill with the Yankees, winning 6-3 behind John Whitehead's three-hit hurling then losing 6-1 as Lou Gehrig struck the haymaker with his 30th circuit clout. The split put the Yanks 8 1-2 games behind the league-leading Detroit Tigers, who trimmed Philadelphia 6-3. Earle Combs, veteran Yankee outfielder, suffered a broken wrist and sore injury is as many seasons when he crashed into the 20ft. concrete fence and tore the ligaments of his shoulder.

Tumbling up for the Giants' series, Pittsburgh defeated the Braves twice, 5-2 and 6-3 to bring it 11 games before Manager Pie Traynor drove in the odd run of the second game with a single that scored a double bill beating Washington 3-2 and 7-6. The Pirates withstood an eight-run Cincinnati rally to pound out a 13-10 victory over the Reds and save sixth place in their control.

BOXING

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Two little fireballs of the ring, Stanislaus Loayza and Frankie Genaro, clash at the Polo Grounds tonight for recognition as champion of all the Bantams.

Pre-basic strength and speed in training camps of the 118-pound aspirants reported high form in that shape and the betting along canvas flowers row—otherwise dingy fifth avenue hotel lobbies—was even. Both Ayo—was even money and take your pick.

With both the National Boxing Association and New York State Athletic Commission ready to bestow the bantamweight purple upon the shoulders of the winner, the largest outpouring of fans for a champ of little note there in many years is prospect. Promoter Abe Attell expected a crowd of at least 50,000 to jump to Jacobean oval.

AMATEUR BALL

(By the Canadian)

A couple of former little-leaders got together for a chit-chat on baseball diamond during the week-end and the result was one of the best events see in a long time.

But elsewhere in the benevolently league a couple of sworn enemies crossed swords and produced a brand of ball, that was every player fighting to the last ditch, drawing the contest into two extra innings.

Stratford, the 1934 champions, met St. Thomas, 1933 Crown wearers, in the first game of the series, that will decide the championship of the western section. Galt met Guelph and struggled into 11 innings before coming out a 6-5 decision.

Stratford had a slight edge over St. Thomas and came out a 6-4 victor. Four of its six runs were scored in the third frame, on five hits and one error. A double and a single brought in the first pair of tallies, an error and a fly put a charity runner across the plate with the next counter.

St. Thomas Licked

Two of the St. Thomas runs' were made in the fifth and the other two came along in the eighth and ninth. The tom cats, got right hits and made four errors, while Stratford connected for nine clouts and only made two errors. It was a victory for Merlin, Stratford hurler, who struck out six. Weeks only put three on the bench.

Guelph opened the game in Galt with three runs in the first, on a hit, walk and two errors. They of the Galt counters came in the first and one more came in the fourth. Galt at one time got man on base with none out but was unable to score. A different story was played as ended six chances when it had the bases loaded in the fifth. Galt came back strong, however, to score three runs against Guelph's two to the 11th in the game. In all 13 men batted the game. Galt connected for 14 hits, against seven for Guelph.

15 Innings Tussle

The only other game of importance during the week-end was between the Hamilton Tigers and Hamilton Victoria for the championship of the Hamilton group. The first game went two to 15 innings before the Tigers won. During the week-end the Vics evened it up with an 11-7 victory.

The Niagara District Senior League game proved a big surprise during the week-end. Niagara Falls whitewashed the League-leading Thorold nine, 7-0. This was the first of the playoff series.

SERIOUS AT LAST!

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Tomorrow the gates of a bigger and better Belleville Fair swing open for the tenth consecutive year in their new quarters at the Belleville Exhibition Park. Each year the local fair has increased in all departments until today Belleville boasts of a class "B" fair, reputed to be the best fall exhibition in the Central Ontario region. For the past month members of the Fairs Board have centred their efforts around the race track until today Belleville boasts of the finest cushioned track, for harness racing, in this province. The track has been rid of all foreign matter, fully banked at both ends and is what is commonly known as "lightning fast". Promising some of the better class trotters and pacers drop into Belleville on their way from Ottawa to Toronto fairs, well the track record will undoubtedly be shattered in four of the three days of racing.

As is usually the custom at the Belleville Fair there will be two harness racing on Tuesday, opening day, when the kiddies hold sway, and on Wednesday, "big day" will up and at it with a special 3 year old colt class and the speed class. On Thursday the 2.35 class and the 2.18 class are scheduled with the big race of the week is slated for Friday—the 2.14 class and on the same day we have the 2.24 class also. Secretary Dick Ketchesan announced this morning that a good field of horses could be expected in all classes, more especially the 2.24 class of racing, for of course the horse races are not the only attractions at the fair this year as the midway entry of Iverleaf etc. in the history of the fair has already been secured, while the performance before the grandstand is to be a something doing every minute.

This evening the local Asjmaa A. C. softball team is scheduled to meet the Arrow Dairy team, winners of the Kingston City softball honors, in the first game of the second round play-downs of the O.A.S.A. The Kingston City team is reported to be one of the strongest softball teams to come out of Kingston in years, but we are in no mood in their category, so it looks like a torrid series. The return game will be played at Central Park on Thursday. In the meantime the Belleville Intermediates have fully decided to take their home games of the Bay or Quinte play-offs right into Picton and Wednesday sees the success or the greatest of the Pantaglian as a Picton victory will give the Doyle-ed aggregation the 1935 Bay of Quinte pennant. While all of this is going on the local Stewart-Warners team haven't seen a ball game since August 18th, are marking time awaiting the opening of the semi-final play-offs in the O.O.B.L. As the LeRoux City crew finished second, they will meet the Picton nine in the semi-finals which doubtlessly will open at Peterboro next Saturday.

Last week we spoke of the possibility of a donkey baseball game being played in Belleville under floodlights. The project has further been taken up by the local Kinsmen's Club and doubtless will live to see realization. The promoters of this rollicking fun-maker provide 16 donkeys and the floodlights, while the Kinsmen have to supply the players. It has been suggested, that the Kinsmen challenge the Kiwanis or the Y's Men to a game of donkey baseball. The negotiations are about completed and we are accordingly thinking of staging this unique spectacle the week after the Belleville Fair" stated President Bill Hurst of the Kinsmen's Club today. This donkey baseball is a riot, they tell us.

The local Kiwanis juniors were rubbed out of the O.B.A.A. picture in exactly two games, and the second game with Oshawa 7 to 4 on Saturday. A couple of blunders are all that stood between the local lads and winning the round, but then the Oshawa team had been playing all season in an organized league, while the Kiwanis kids were forced to accept available opposition as they could provide themselves in the matter of exhibition games, so the junior league being afforded them in the province of the province. Individually the locals looked equally as good as the Oshawa nine, but due to the inexperience of not having played together sufficiently long enough to developed took its toll. The foundation for a good junior baseball team has been laid in Belleville, but unless they can hand together the league in this community, their efforts again be wasted next season. Perhaps a better plan would be to enter the local juniors in the Bay of Quinte Intermediate league next year, playing their part of the schedule in a similar manner to the 1934 Crystalcas, who gained sufficient baseball education through the medium in advance to the provincial junior semi-finals. Youths under the ages of 17 to 18 should be quite able to step into present-day Intermediate ranks and hold their end up. When the 1936 season rolls around, the mentors of junior ball could do worse than to place a berth in the Bay of Quinte League, when they stepped out into the play-downs in the fall, they would be an even footing with their opponents.

Yesterday's heavy west wind proved too much for the contestants in the three challenge races off Victoria Park, only three of the 14 starters crossing the finishing line. Bobs Smith made Harry Strange's ship "Uncle" when the Joka beat the Anna G for the Payne trophy, while Reg Hinchey's Allegro sailed alone in the special challenge race across the Prairie, the latter the drawing in the middle of the course. The Spray capsized and Ed Kelsey's Lets Go called it a day and no contest was declared for the Smith trophy in the "P" Class. The strong wind was much too heavy for the small sailing craft, however, but the officials of the Belleville Yachting and Athletic Club are hoping for a little lighter breeze for their annual aquatic and thletic day at Victoria Park on Labor Day. Fun for all, is their motto.

KIWANIS JUNIORS ARE ELIMINATED

Two Pitchers Knocked From Mound in The Fifth Frame

Oshawa, Aug. 26.—Oshawa juniors won the first round of the O.B.A.A. junior playdowns at Motor City Stadium Saturday afternoon when they handed Belleville Kiwanis a 7-4 defeat. Oshawa had previously defeated the Belleville team in the Quinte City by a 7-6 score. Oshawa won the game in the third inning when they knocked Joe Kelleher from the mound, while his successor, Keith Weeks, was worse, if possible, hitting the first two men he face him. Weeks was unable to get anyone out in the fourth frame and was succeeded by Bawden, who hurled good ball, letting the Oshawa team down with but two blows for the balance of the game. "Tip" Anderson, on the mound for Oshawa, hurled hitless ball until the sixth inning, but in the last two frames was slightly shaky, although he managed to go the route for a well-earned win.

FIRST 6 TEAMS WELL BUNCHED

Rochester And Albany Can be Counted Out of Race

(By the Associated Press)

A perusal of the standings in the International League today shows only two teams, Rochester and Albany, can be definitely counted out in the race for the pennant.

The first six teams in the League are bunched pretty well and although Newark or Toronto would have to pronoce a phenomenal winning streak to land out there, such a thing is possible. Newark would have to gain nine games to draw even with Montreal Royals in the two weeks left to play. Toronto is only a half game better than Newark.

Its pretty definitely established, however, that Rochester and Albany will play the rest of the season strictly for the entertainment of their customers. Rochester is 22 1-2 games away from first place, while Albany is far in the rack.

Syracuse Chiefs climbed into a virtual tie for second place with Buffalo yesterday by winning both ends of a twin bill with Albany 6-1 and 8-0. Flint Rhem was in the box in the first game and held the Opposition scoreless until the eighth. In the seven-inning nightcap, Joe Ascarella hurled five-hit ball to blank the tail-enders.

Hickeys Rout Leafs

The Hickeys of Buffalo managed to hold their position, by defeating Toronto Maple Leafs 11-6. Bill Harris chalked up his 18th victory of the year, even though he was hit pretty often and Owen Carroll had to be called in to force the last Toronto batsman to hit into a double killing.

Olsen had a perfect day for the Bisons, hitting a homer and two singles, walking twice and scoring two times.

Montreal walloped Rochester Red Wings 7-2 and 3-1 in a double bill, thus gaining a half game on the Bisons. Pete Appleton got his 21st victory in the second through the opener and Harry Smythe allowed but four hits in the second game.

Newark Bears copped both ends of a doubleheader also, downing Baltimore Orioles 6-3 and 10-2. A muffled fly by Olsen in the fourth inning of the second game with three on and two out, resulted in five unearned runs for Newark.

CHALLENGE RACES SPOILED BY WIND

Only One Contest Finished, "Duke" Smith Winning Payne Trophy

Frank Smith's sailing punt, the Joka, won the Payne trophy in a special challenge race sailed off Victoria Park yesterday afternoon, when the Joka came down in front of Harry Semark's Anna G with plenty of time to spare. A stiff west wind swept down upon the three special challenge races yesterday, forcing two out of competition, while a third, the Spray capsized, nothing worse than a ducking befalling the crew, however.

In a special challenge, race in the same class Jack Hinchey's Allegro crossed the finishing line alone, the Progio withdrawing from competition due to the heavy seas. The Spray "D" class with the Smith trophy going to the winner, the Spray challenged the Let's Go, the former pursing over in the stiff breeze, while the latter soon afterwards withdrew from competition, no doubt deeming it wise as to the trophy, as neither craft crossed the finishing line.

These special challenge races were staged under the auspices of the Belleville Yachting and Athletic Club, who are also staging a monster aquatic, sailing and athletic meet at Victoria Park on Labor Day. Monday Calendar listed as starter, while Chaffin Jaffe recorded the times as clerk of the course.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

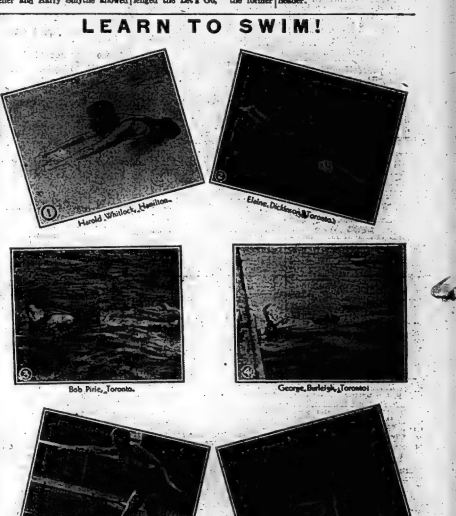
(By the Associated Press)

Chuck Klein, Cubs—Led attack on Giants with double and two singles scoring one run and driving in two.

Charley Gelringer, Tigers—Made three hits for perfect day at bat against Athletics.



Dizzy and Daffy Dean, Cardinals —Pitched Cards to double victory over Dodgers that gave them League lead.

Jack Whitehead, White Sox, and Lou Gehrig, Yankees—Whitehead held Yanks to three hits in first game, Gehrig hit 34th homer to help win second.

Al Todd, Phillies—His pinch hit drove in runs that beat Reds.

Johnny Babich, Cubs—And Johnny Welch, Red Sox— Gave seven hits each in beating Indians in doubleheader.

LEARN TO SWIM!

Elementary Crawl Stroke

SPECIAL NOTE:—Always learn to swim in shallow water.

LESSON 1

Floating a Dead Man's Float

To start, stand in water waist deep, fill lungs with air through mouth. See Illustration, Figure 1. Fall forward or push away from side of pool, and body will glide in this position. Stretch body from head to toes and relax as much as possible. Head well down between arms to control body balance. See Illustration, Figure 2.

LESSON II

Legs, Flutter Kick

Take position per Illustration, Figure 3., with hands on bottom, and commence to thrash legs up and down. Keep knees straight, legs relaxed fully, and toes turned in. (Pigeon toed). Kick at the rate of 60 above per 30 seconds, and from 10 to 18 inches of a thrash; or.

Assume position per Figure 4, holding side of pool or float, and practice similar action with legs as described immediately above.

Continue down and back through water with right arm, left arm meanwhile continues over the water until position Figure 6 is attained. Continue arm action like two arms of windmill movement. This can be practiced on land for rhythm. Full stroke is completed when back to position Figure 8.

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

Nothing there! No one in sight. She wondered if her nerves were playing tricks on her. There was very little cover on the hillside, it seemed impossible anyone should have got away so quickly, nowhere for anyone to hide; she had never known a policeman move so rapidly as that. He seemed to have vanished into the ground—which was nonsense for the ground was plastic sticky ploughed land. Had she imagined him? For she had seen a dark brown tweed cap and a glimpse of white face, as sure as the daylight.

A search revealed nothing, not even footmarks, there was a grass border along the hedge—it seemed to her its grass would have shown if some one had stood there. But as if some one had stood there. But there was he and why take all that trouble to avoid her?

Sonia's brow knitted; she turned away and walked back down the slope. A conviction gripped her tighter every moment—this problem was darker and deeper than she had guessed.

No use staying here any longer; she made straight for the Mine. The old works and the chimney shaft were away back at the top of the slope. From them a gully ran down at right angle to the railway and it joined it at the gap in the face of the cutting.

It was quite easy to get down on to the line, from here. In a few moments she stood on the permanent-way.

She walked back along the track to the place where Bannister's body had been found, and as she walked she counted her steps; two hundred and eighty paces.

Two eighty! Now she was on the spot. Above was the sheer face of the cutting, the slope and then the broken-wired fence. Here by the metals the police had been busy, that had failed. There was a faint, dark stain still visible on the ballast stones that bedded the sleepers. Here, Bannister... Goose had died. She, who had been the last person to revisit it in the sunshine. It was a place of ghosts.

Fighting down the sense of horror that for a moment seized her, she—single-minded in her purpose, she examined carefully the metals, the iron knees, and the ground for a score of yards around; the face of the cliff, even the little drainage ditch half choked with the mud swept down by the storm.

She found it's piece of flat shale and with it in the soft mud began to dig with it in the sort mud beneath the bridge of water running along the ditch; it seemed a useless thing to do and it was a wet, messy job. But the theory that had been running in her mind impelled her, and she persevered. She found nothing but a little broken gravel and a more debris of the ditch, and tossed it aside.

She picked up the stick and looked at it again, a tough sappy thing as thin as a whip, with a knob and a few fibres at the thicker end. She laid it beside the excavation she had made; it was not what she had hoped she might find. Yet somehow even that little intrigued her, she took the stick with her, cleaned her hands, and walked back along the track to the mine, mounting into the gully once more.

Half way up was the old ruined machine-shed. Before she reached it, she halted.

The pistol-shot!" she said. "It must have been just about here."

That little stab of flame she had seen in the darkness—when she was struggling in the barbed wire of the fences. A good way off—she was then on the far side of the railway. Brian said she had imagined it. But there was no imagination about that shot. It was stark reality.—

Here was the place and the direction; in line with the mine chimney she searched the stony path and the grass. There might have been an empty cartridge shell; but there was not. She found nothing at all.

Sonia moved up the gully, thinking the thing out, building it up rapidly in her mind. She was now close to the shed, and while she reflected, staring at it idly something caught her attention; a lateral thing, easily over-looked.

The blind end of the shed was towards her, covered with the ivy that grew over the derelict mine buildings. She noticed a dark-green leaf that hung down on a long pedicled and slightly withered stalk. She reached up to it—it was as far as she could stretch—pulled the leaf aside, disclosing a tough stem that was bruised and gashed, and a ragged hole alongside it, sunk deep into the planking of the shed.

No mistaking what that was. A bullet-hole.

The next moment she heard voices inside the shed and started back as if she had been detected. A man thrust his head out and glared at her.

"You want anything here"? he said. Sonia smiled at him. He was a burly young fellow in a soft cloth hat. A most obvious policeman.

"I'm Sonia Holt from Kings Ern. Sergeant Howe said I could come and see if I liked; he's expected here."

"That so?" he said gruffly and with a touch of sheepishness. "Well, you can keep away from this shed, me and my mate are busy."

He returned to his work. He and his partner, who was wearing a tight grey cap, was busy with a rake and shove, not digging but carefully removing the layer of white mud that had flowed into the hut and covered its floor during the storm. They had evidently been having a stand-off and a smoke. They worked on for a few moments, she believed she knew what they were searching for. Soon they moved on, her nerves tingling, up the hill to the flat plateau where the mine opening stood.

Here was a vast ancient dump of rock—stained stone, and an opening in the ground that was covered over with planks and timber baulks a great rusty iron staging with an immense wheel on top—the hoisting-gear—and long ago collapsed and fallen across it.

This was the main shaft to the mine. Some of the planks were pulled aside; Sonia peered in the edge and looked down. A round black chasm seemed to reach down into the heart of the hill; the bottom was invisible, but she thought she saw a gleam of water. She dropped a chunk of slag between the planks, and after a lengthy pause, heard a hollow splash. It fell a shade through her. The place was a death-trap; she could imagine a white face, floating in that dark water.

The police had evidently pulled those planks apart; some one had been down at the end of a rope, she could see the marks of it on a timber beam. The police had a theory of their own; she wondered if it help also with the case, and guessed that it didn't. If these was anything down there they would find it. The water wasn't likely to be very deep.

She turned back down the hill, and half way up the slope she stopped at a little square enclosure of posts and wire, which she had passed on the way up. The wire had been recently put up, to prevent strayed sheep from falling down a small shaft like a well. It was a miniature of the big one up the hill; not more than thirty feet deep. As the bottom she could see a volume of dark water, like a little underground brook, hurrying along a tunnel. It fascinated her, as. For some time she leaned on the wire, staring down.

"That's it!" she said aloud.

"Think so?" said a voice behind her, and a hand dropped on her shoulder. Sonia gave a gasp and turned round, her face white.

"Sorry," said Sergeant Howe. "Silly thing to do. Miss."

"It was, rather."

"I get a sort of habit of droppin' my hand on people's shoulders. Wasn't thinking."

"That's all right," said Sonia.

"My nerves are a little jumpy today," she added. "I think she shaft. "What is this?"

"Old mine workin' — turned into a ventilating shaft for the mine, I should say. Water goes down it after a last night's rain, opening the springs. In dry weather there's a trickle running through that gallery."

"Have you been down?"

"I was down yesterday, before the rain. Didn't find much. We found nothing. You see, there's series of old galleries sloping down from the foot of the hill and half choked, always flooding. Nasty place. I'll be down again tomorrow if the water drops."

"Found what?"

"It's a tricky place for a man to clamber any length of time, I wanted to get rid of. We shall have another look; mind you, I don't believe we shall find anything, but I'm a man that makes sure."

"Where does all that water go? It must run somewhere?"

"Fills the lower galleries and seeps off into the ground I suppose. In flood time, some of it spouts out of a fissure on the west side of the hill—long way from here—in drains off into the river valley".

"Sounds like Bill. But I'll make sure. I'll look into it."

"Do. I may be wrong. Hope I'm not going to be watched—I should hate it."

He accompanied her down to the shed. She stopped by the blind end of it.

"Notice anything?" she said. It did not take Howe five seconds to spot the place where her fingers had slightly dislodged the ivy, though she gave him no indication. He pulled the stems aside, and ran his big finger over the bullet-hole. He pulled out a pocket-knife, and opened the long blade. The young plain-clothes man poked his head out of the shed.

"Get back to your job!" growled Howe. The constable disappeared and Howe carefully dug out of the hole a nickle-jacketed pistol bullet. He showed it to Sonia, an ugly little scrap of metal twisted and distorted, lying in the palm of his hand.

"That's from a 45-gauge revolver. That bit of stuff is dumb, but its the best witness yet."

CHAPTER XXVII

Howe searched the whole face of the shed, cutting away the ivy with out further result.

"Only one shot was fired! I suppose. How's turned to her.

"Why do you say that?"

"Looks like it, doesn't it?"

"I haven't a doubt you're right."

Howe turned the bullet over in his palm, and looked at her with that odd little gleam in his eye that she was beginning to dread.

"Miss, isn't it, that you should light on something which I suspected all along, and hadn't much hope of finding. We'll have to enlist you in the C. D. force."

"Sheer accident," said Sonia. "I noticed a cut leaf hanging down, I wondered why, and just took a look. I suppose I'd no right to."

"I didn't say you'd no right, Miss Neil, what do you imagine you're doing here?"

"Anything I can, not merely to discover who murdered Bannister Cooke, but to insure that nobody who's innocent will suffer."

Howe nodded.

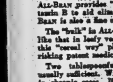
Step out into the SUNSHINE



How many days of your life are lost in feeling "under the weather"? How many hours which might be bright are dull and dispirited?

Half-hearted days are frequently due to common constipation. It needs only a few hours' delay in the sensitive cog of living. Yet it can be corrected easily by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's All-Bran provides the bulk and vitamin B to aid elimination. All-Bran is also a rich source of iron.

The "bulk" in All-Bran is much like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't this "cereal way" more convenient than drinking patent medicines?

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. But if you're subject to chronic cases, If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve All-Bran as a cereal or use in muffins, bran-meal omelets, etc. In cooking recipes on the red-and-green packages. All of special. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

TARZAN THE UNTAMED— (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As Tarzan of the Apes drew himself over the topmost ledge the two watchers below heard a chorus of shouts. And Tarzan, scrambling erect, was astonished to see a British Tommy kneeling on his rifle at him. Just in time, the ape-man cried: "Don't shoot: we are friends." Hearing English spoken by this naked giant, the soldier ran forward.

Soon the British sergeant in command of the advance guard approached. Explanations followed at the main body of the expedition, sent out to trace Lieutenant Cecil, came into view. Followed many hours of arduous work before Roger and the girl spy were brought from the gorge's depths. First aid was given, but joy did much to revive the two.

By sundown all were on the way to the camp of the lieutenant. It was arranged that next morning Lieutenant Cecil and she whom Tarzan knew as the Red spy should be transported by plane to British headquarters. The ape-man declined the offer to accompany them, explaining that his objective lay northward. "You are not going with us?" he asked.

"No," replied the ape-man. "I continue my journey alone." He gave him an appealing glance. "You will go back into that terrible jungle?" she said. "We shall never see you again?" He looked at her a moment in silence. "Never," he replied and without another word turned and walked away. Just then Colonel Capell arrived by airplane. "

Fort Francis Girl is Killed Instantly In Crash

Fort Francis, Ont., Aug. 24 (CP)—Jean Nelson, 18, of Fort Francis, Ont., was killed instantly here when a Minnesota, Dakota and Western freight train backed into a car driven by her father, Arthur E. Nelson. Nelson suffered a lacerated leg, a crushed foot and is in hospital here. The accident happened last night when Mr. Nelson, sales manager of Shevlin Clarke Lumber Company, drove his automobile into the International Railroad bridge, and the train backed into him.

Dr. C. C. Craig, 85-year-old physician of International Falls, barely escaped with his life after administering first aid to Nelson. The doctor lost his footing on the bridge and saved himself by catching a steel beam.

POLYGAMIST COLONY DISCOVERED IN ARIZONA

Neath a background of red and bronse mountains of Arizona nestle the tiny village of Short Creek which has come into the public eye mainly because of action taken by the county attorney, Elmo Bollinger after he found that it was a polygamist colony. There are only about 25 or 30 families in the town, most of them on relief. The situation came to light when some of the women, in applying for relief funds listed themselves as "plural wives". In one instance three women gave birth to babies in one month, and all of the infants had the same father. The families are Brethren of the United Order and had been excommunicated by the Mormons. Bollinger filed criminal charges against eight persons. The charges come under a state statute which proscribes three years' imprisonment.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Hockey Doctor"

Novelty, Speed and Romance is Featured in Double Bill

"Hockey Doctor" the feature picture that is sharing honors along with a feature entitled "While Lies" at the Capitol the first half of this week, is one of those rare pictures which makes audiences sit up in their seats.

It is an engrossing story of a series of gripping dramas that involve a group of characters in a metropolitan emergency hospital within the short period of eight hours.

Within eight hours, the secret marriage of a young bride and groom is discovered while the bridegroom lies under the surgeon's knife on an operating table. A rebellious young internee is charged, then rubbed when all his illusions of professional ethics crash upon the rocks of stark reality.

A policeman lying near death with a gunman's bullet in him, is avenged when the officer's wife slays the gunman within the hospital. Two young interns become bitter enemies in their duel for the love of a pretty nurse.

These and many more are the gripping situations that are crowded in "Hockey Doctor" which moves at a rapid pace throughout the entire play.

It brings Chester Morris and Robert Taylor to us as the rival interns; Virginia Bruce as the nurse; Billie Burke as the wealthy neurotic; William Henry as the bridegroom; Dorothy Peterson, as the policeman's vengeful wife and many other excellent performers.

The other half of the double bill presents a vivid and startling production, "While Lies" that features Ray Wrack, Canadian-born player. Walter Connolly, one of the best character actors on the screen and Victor Jory, good-looking juvenile and excellent actor.

"While Lies" records vividly and with a sure sense of good theatre the torrent of drama that is unleashed when John "Frosh Face" Mitchell, portrayed by the versatile Connolly, pays on the confiscate circumstances of Dan Oliver (Leslie Fenton), a repentant embezzler, and assists the story of his crime across the front page in a series of sensational news articles. In an effort to right some the injustice meted out by her father, Fay Wray as Connelly's daughter, is herself involved in a murder committed by the fugitive Oliver in only through the office of Victor Jory, the city editor who falls in love with Miss Wray that the film's rama arrives at a thrilling and resourceful climax.

An excellent cast support the leading players, among them are Robert Allen, Irene Herwy, William Demarest and Oscar Apfel.

A lovely eight-piece dinner plate will be presented to each lady patron attending the Monday and Tuesday performances.

AT THE BELLE

"Shadows of the River"

A Grand And Unforgettable Picture of Entertainment

All the thrills and perils of a journey through the black heart of darkest Africa were brought to the Belle Theatre screen on Saturday in "Shadows of the River," Alexander Korda's colorful filmization of the famous Edgar Wallace story, to produce which his director brother, Zoltan Korda led a daring film expedition into the Congo.

Perfect casting place Paul Robeson, the handsome and brilliant Negro actor and singer, in the leading role of Bosambo, while Leslie Banks who recently scored in "The Man Who Knew Too Much," is seen in the title role of the miracle-working British District Commissioner who, by his great personal courage and understanding of the native mind and heart, manages to maintain peace in the jungle. Nina Mae McKinney, beautiful negro actress plays the lovely slave-girl Lilongo, and all give flawless performances.

Spell of the Jungle

The mystic, haunting spell of the jungle have been magically caught in the picture, which employed some 20,000 natives and African chieftains, and also features weird and fascinating native rites, dances and songs never before filmed.

The story, briefly is this: Acting under Sanders orders, Bosambo, chief on probation, stops a slave convoy, kills the leader and makes Lilongo, the loveliest slave girl, his wedding bride. For this he rouses the undying hatred of the wicked old king who dispatched the convoy, taking advantage of his inaccessible mountain position to break Sanders' law.

Reaches Thrilling Climax

When after a few years of relative peace and prosperity in the jungle, Sanders leaves to be married, the white man whose slave trade he has outlined take revenge by spreading through the jungle the rumor that he is dead. Law and order are forgotten, all tribes prepare for war. In his absence, Bosambo's bride is captured by the old king's men. Bosambo goes single-handed into the treacherous mountain country to rescue her. Learning of Sanders' danger and also that his deputy Commissioner has been killed by the old king, Bambora makes the perilous journey up the treacherous impassable river and a thrilling climax results.

Robeson's magnificent voice is heard in several haunting jungle songs, and Nina Mae McKinney also chants a number or two.

"The Korda's have achieved faithfully to Wallace's great story which Lajos Biro and Jeffrey Dell adapted to the screen, and the result is a grand and unforgettable piece of entertainment for the whole family.

The stirring and beautiful photography which is an important feature of the film, is directed by Georges Perinal.

"Shadows of the River", to be repeated again tonight at the Belle, for the last times is so vivid, so realistic, so sincere, and so shrewd intermingling of travel, romance and drama, that it cannot fail to be among the most successful films of the year.

FOURTEEN RESCUED FROM BURNING YACHT

Alexandria Bay, N.Y., Aug. 26.—(AP)—Fourteen persons were rescued from a burning yacht in the St. Lawrence River during a power boat regatta yesterday. The yacht, 38-foot cabin cruiser, Phineas, was owned by Charles P. Lyon, of Ogdensburg.

An explosion in or near one of the two gasoline tanks started the fire. Passing boats quickly removed 12 persons but Lyon and Captain Chauncey Birch of Alexandria Bay were not taken off until after they had made a futile attempt to put out the flames.

One of the racing boats towed the burning cruiser to a sand bar where police punctured the hull with bullets, allowing it to sink.

tal or military operations. It may last of closing the canal, leaving it open to Italy. Or it may be dragged in, in the sense she was dragged in, in 1917, sooner or later she will be compelled to co-operate with other powers in withholding from Italy not only munitions in the last stage of manufacture but those things indispensable to war.

Britain could have stopped the drift toward war if she had given a lead modelled by the spirit of American statesmanship over a century ago: If, in fact, she had declared that the principle of the covenant to be her sole doctrine. The Covenant lays a state in the circumstances of the Italo-Abbidan dispute, which is at war with one member of League, goes to war with all. Such an assumption is a straightforward application of the rule by Great Britain would be at war. That assumption is obvious facts upside down. If two months ago had declared and defend the Covenant—to say, rule, that the State of Italy's attack on Ethiopia is assembly just as she would defend Jamaica or Australia, there would be no war crisis.

But the British Empire, shows an attempt to seize would be resisted by all the British Empire. A seizure is not attempted British policy of so defined territory does not involve war, nor would a similar definiteness of intention to defend the Covenant, had that intention been sufficiently plain in time, have involved war. The uncertainty as to what he would do in that truth explains the drift toward war.

While Italy knows there would be no question at all of our defending Australia or New Zealand, or for that matter, St. Kitts, West Indies, defending these single-handed without talking of the difficulties into which we might get with the United States on account of a blockade or what not, Italy also knows unhappily we are in two minds in defence of the Covenant. Upon that uncertainty and that division of will, the military dictator is ready to gamble.

We get this absurdity: defence, without war, for the tiniest and remotest colony can be secured by Britain's sole power, acting "silently." Defence for a principle upon which the whole of civilization (including presumably the Empire), rests cannot be secured at all.

TWEED REPORTS FOUR BREAK-INS

Approximately $30 in Cash Taken by The Robbers

Four places of business in the village of Tweed were robbed some time early Sunday morning, when burglars entered the premises of the Tweed Milling Co., Rashotte Lumber Co., Gordon Gee Works and the Tweed Foundry, stealing approximately $30.40 in cash.

Entrance in each case was made through rear windows and upon record does. The largest haul was suffered by the Gordon Steel Works where the burglars rifled an unlocked safe and helped themselves to $25.00 in cash. At the Tweed Foundry only $4.00 was left in the cash box, while only three dollars was taken from the office of the Rashotte Lumber Co., at the Tweed Milling Co., however, the robbers' efforts were in vain, as they enriched themselves to the extent of only a few cents, that being all left by the cashier on Saturday night.

As the various places robbed are at opposite ends of the village the authorities to investigate are of the opinion that an organized gang, travelling by motor car is responsible for the robberies.

The break-ins were discovered by proprietors of the various firms and reported to Chief Hayes, early Sunday, who in turn relayed the information to the O.P.P. Constable John Kelly being detailed to investigate the matter. No clues were left by the robbers, who made a clean get away.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Gilead Bay, N.S., Aug. 27 (CP)—Timothy Addison, one-armed war veteran, today received word that his daring rescue of 12-year-old Lorena O'Brien, in mouth of the New Aberdeen River, was to be rewarded by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission. The girl, swept out to sea, clung to Addison's back in the water, almost her to shore and received artificial respiration. The girl recovered.

Chicago, Aug. 27 (CP)—"Dares" by the "speakeasy" habitues have finally become so ridiculous to citizens of suburban Cicero, Ill., that police have decided to prevent what almost happened on the fair ball. Ignoring the police ban, a group planned to tie grenade fuse to a cat and release it. Instead, the cat escaped with only minor injuries.

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 27 (CP)—Lemont friends of Harry Hoffman, 37, invited a few friends to "go for a pleasure spin in an ambulance." Hoffman was dead.

They indeed got where most ambulances ride—to the hospital. But after the vehicle collided with an automobile and rolled down a 25 foot embankment.

Toronto, N. J., Aug. 27 (CP)—This town is so powerful Justice of the Peace Henry Tracy doesn't get enough business to give him a living. He recently was ordered by the court to find a job. The judge said he could not afford to have the municipal court here if he had only eight cases since he was elected four years ago.

Brownsville, Pa., Aug. 27 (CP)—Chief Frank Cox, who for the past year has made the big clock atop a local building keep time for everybody, announced: "They said they would vote it again when the unemployed in Brownsville got 10 cents each per week."

California, Mo., Aug. 27 (AP)—$8,000 fire raged but the California fire department didn't aim to quench it.

It couldn't; the fire department had the fire.

Fayetteville was destroyed and only the bank and courthouse were left saved from Jefferson City. Origin of the blaze was not known.

Washington, Aug. 27 (AP)—Secretary Morgenthau of the United States Treasury admitted today he had passed a big fish story, but not before he had broken it. At his home in Fishkill, N.Y., he showed visitors a tape with the bill. It was returned as spurious. He said he had "left it in a safe place." Friends at Hayfield at the Capital, requested from them the "safe place" and the answer:

"The joke's really on the chief clerk." Morgenthau.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 27 (CP)—R. E. Hall, a farm reporter, never had been robbed and it was the first thought to him when he complained, that caused him to act.

Hall decided to be robbed and a posse's changer containing 26 dimes was purchased and given to the man, ordered to ask cash from the man's pockets and came out a little richer than he went in and had had some change in his pocket.

Vancouver, Aug. 27 (CP)—While many must look on the bright side, Stephen Shaffer over the pavement in the lee of the 36-storey marine building. He fell a distance of a 14-piece orchestra. It is open-air free band concerts, and although the city council with the idea of creating a gay white way instead of a dismal harbor, allow as a gratuity to the Canada Pacific Exhibition which plays here. ## BLACK STEM RUST HEAVY IN WEST

Worst Epidemic Ever Experienced in The West

Ottawa, Aug. 27 (CP)—Farmers of Western Canada will lose approximately $100,000,000 on account of wheat rust this year, taking 80 cents a bushel as the average price per wheat, Dr. E. S. Archibald, Director of Experimental Farms, believes. Grain fields had been struck by the worst epidemic of black stem rust ever experienced in Canada.

Rust caused a loss of 100,000,000 bushels in 1916, said Dr. Archibald. He said this was "the year of the great disaster in Western Canada when wheat was so badly needed by Great Britain and the Allies." It had caused a loss of $150,000,000.

This year the loss would be greater and United States farmers suffered as well to the tune of many millions.

MORALINDICTMENT BEFORE LEAGUE BRITISH PROPOSAL

Plan Reported to Have Been Presented to Premier Laval

AVOID SANCTIONS

Japanese Expansion Plans Reported at London

PARIS, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Authoritative sources said tonight a British plan for the moral indictment of Italy before the League, in case of aggression in Ethiopia, had been presented to Premier Laval.

The plan was described as a substitute for sanctions—international penalties to be applied against treaty-breakers.

French officials and Ambassador Clerk of Great Britain in an interview with Laval said Britain would refuse to invoke sanctions or intervention in Ethiopia as "a Colonial campaign" or as anything else except war.

Not to Ask Sanctions

Such an action would morally indict a treaty-breaker in the eyes of the world without risking sanctions.

Ambassador Clerk indicated Great Britain still hopes Italy finally will accept a plan for the peaceful penetration of Ethiopia which Mussolini appointed as the tri-power conference here ten days ago.

It was said Great Britain was ever willing to bring pressure on Premier Haile Selassie to appeal to the League for help in running his country, help which the League would promptly give.

Developments in the Italo-Ethiopian situation:

Paris: French financiers calculated the drift of Italian gold and estimated Mussolini could finance an eight-months campaign.

Rolsmon: Mussolini invited French and British experts to accompany him on inspection of army manoeuvres. He holds a Cabinet meeting tomorrow.

Japanese Expansion

LONDON, Aug. 27.—(AP)—The Daily Herald said the Japanese Government was preparing to open negotiations with Great Britain, the Netherlands and other powers "with the idea of securing immigration rights in the Far East for some of her millions of surplus population".

The paper said Japan had a number of British possessions would be sought for the Japanese surplus.

$500,000 a Copy For New Book by T. E. Lawrence

By JOHN SELBY

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 27 (AP)—Highest price ever quoted on a book at publication will astound those who inquire today about "The Mint," by Aircraftsman Ross.

The price is $500,000 the copy.

Aircraftsman Ross is T. E. Shaw and T. E. Lawrence and "Lawrence of Arabia."

One of the greatest potboilers ever kicked up about a book attended the almost surreptitious of his "Seven Pillars of Wisdom" in 1926.

A few more than a hundred copies of "Seven Pillars" were printed amid a pre-song fog of secrecy. The book as being published in a popular edition next month in the United States, incidentally, since Lawrence's death released A. W. Lawrence, brother and literary executor of the author, from restrictions imposed by the scholarly and strategic.

But Lawrence also left a manuscript, entitled cryptically "The Mint." This manuscript 70,000 words long and contains Lawrence's experiences in the Royal Flying Corps, his criticism of living men of British insignificance and of the profession of soldier and several other things are described by one who has seen the manuscript as so stringent publication may not be had in England for many years. However, Lawrence wished it to be protected but kept out of circulation.

So the book is to be set up and printed by Doubleday, Doran & Co. Two copies will be sent to Washington to secure copyright: 10 copies will be kept for sale. But it is not believed there will be any takers at $500,000.

SOVIET REJECTS U.S. PROTEST

Moscow, Aug. 27 (AP)—The Soviet government today rejected the United States protest against Communist activities.

NO TESTIMONY IS SUBMITTED AGAINST MURRAY

Murray Will Now Be Turned Over to Investigation Authorities

McCAUGHEY SUSPENDED

Sales Manager For Brewery Implicated by Mc-Cardell

London, Ont., Aug. 27 (CP)—Kingdon P. Murray, of Ovington, Ky., held for questioning seven months in connection with the kidnapping of John Labatt, was given into custody of immigration authorities for deportation today, when the crown offered no evidence against him before County Judge McFadden.

Murray, since his arrest last January, has been in custody seven months and three days.

Before Judge McFadden he revealed his previous election of trial by judge and jury and asked immediate trial by the judge on the charges of armed robbery and kidnapping.

No Evidence Offered

He pleaded not guilty. Crown Attorney Norman Newton offered no evidence and suggested to the court that Murray be turned over to immigration authorities on the way from Windsor.

Murray, a thin, partially bald man of 40, and father of two children, stood nervously twisting his hands as the formalities proceeded. His high, mild voice could hardly be heard when he replied to Judge McFadden's questions.

"Well, that's that," he said as he walked out of the court accompanied by his counsel George Mitchell.

Photographers had him a willing subject and he posed several times in the law library. He later went to the jail to get his hat and things and said he was going to have a bite to eat.

To Test Labatt's Boss

"You know," he said, "when they brought me in here I came through the back door and I've not been anywhere else. I'm going to see if Labatt's beer is as bad as his prosecutor."

Reporters questioned him as to what he intended to do but he merely replied he was going home. "It's a long time since I've been there, you know."

It was not certain when the immigration officers would arrive and he was deported Royal Canadian Mounted Police might return him to the border.

Photographer Acquitted

Arthur Carty, London newspaperman and photographer, was acquitted on a charge of assisting Magistrus Menzies on a charge of common assault on Mitchell Hepburn, confessed kidnapper of John Labatt.

REYBURN MINAKER FOUND HANGING

Prince Edward County Farmer in Ill Health

Picton, August 27.—(Special)—Reyburn Minaker, 35, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Minaker, prominent farmer of Royal Street, Prince Edward County, took his life by hanging early today. The body was found hanging from a beam in the barn by the father, Benjamin Chapman, who notified the father, Bruce Minaker, and Coroner of the district, Dr. G. A. Whiteman. The Coroner and Chief Biddle of Picton, went to the scene and after the facts had been explained, Dr. Whiteman declared an inquest unnecessary.

The young man, lame from birth, has been in ill health for the past few months, suffering from low blood pressure and during the last month has been quite melancholy. It was reported the victim of the rash act did not appear for breakfast today but nothing was thought of it, however, as he sometimes during he was "sleeping in" on account of his lameness. The late Mr. Minaker was a favorite in the family and an earnest and conscientious worker on the farm, that he has continually resided on. His mother at the present time is quite ill at Kingston. He was a member of the United Church and leaves besides his parents two brothers Quentin of Milford and Ralph of Detroit. The funeral will be held on Thursday with interment in Glenwood cemetery at Picton.

MONKEY BUSINESS

Wallis Jiff Nine of the 175 jungle clowns which escaped from Frank Buck's farm, led Massapequa, N. Y., firemen a merry chase on the pictured flagpole. The firemen would climb down after the monkeys had reached ground by the rope method. They would make a grab for the monkeys and the latter would immediately climb up again, thwarting all the while and providing merriment for all but the firemen. They finally gave up—i.e. the firemen, not the monkeys.

FILM STUDIOS GIVEN TRENTON

Last 4 Employees Notified of Dismissal By Government

Toronto, Aug. 27.—Premier Hepburn yesterday wiped out the last trace of the Ontario Government's motion picture industry.

The old Trenton studios are being donated to the town of Trenton, provided the town takes over it into a public gymnasium. The four employees of this industry to survived Mr. Hepburn's Queen's Park bonfire-clearing of last September have been served with notification of dismissal, and will not be reinstated. The civil service unless suitable openings for them materialize.

Ontario started to make pictures and films in 1919, and since that time, according to Mr. Hepburn, has spent $1,750,000 on the work. "And he informed the press, "we haven't a thing to show for that huge expenditure but a lot of useless, obsolete, out-of-date film."

TEACHER LOSES LIFE DROWNING

Ronald R. Hale, Was Son of Rev. R. Hale of Colborne

Havelock, Ont., Aug. 27 (CP) — Ronald R. Hale, 32, teacher in Humberside Collegiate Institute, Toronto, was drowned in Round Lake, near Havelock, early today.

The empty boat was found at dawn, washed up on the shore at Hart's Landing where Hale had been staying for the last month. Details of the drowning are lacking.

Provincial Police were summoned and efforts are being made to recover the body. Hale is the son of Rev. R. Hale, Baptist Minister at Colborne.

Chancellor is At Sea With Army, Navy Heads

Berlin, Aug. 27 (CP-Havas)—Chancellor Hitler, it was reliably learned tonight, is holding an important conference with the heads of the army and navy aboard the German battleship Graf Zeppelin, Nazi cruiser with the German fleet.

WEATHER FAVORS DISTRICT FAIR ON FIRST DAY

History of Local Fairs Traced by Fairs' Superintendent

VALUE OF EXHIBITIONS

Tribute of One Minute's Silence is Paid Late R. J. Garbutt

Under a beaming sky that had previously threatened rain, and to the boom of the cannon and the strains of "O Canada" played by the Belleville Municipal Band, Belleville's Fair was officially opened shortly after two, o'clock this afternoon by Mr. A. L. Carrol, Toronto superintendent of Ontario Fairs, who delivered the opening address at the Directors' luncheon held on the grounds.

Hundreds of citizens from Belleville and surrounding district were on hand to witness the opening ceremonies from in front of the grandstand.

Board Luncheon

Presided over by Mr. Walter Asselstine, president of the Belleville Fair Board, the luncheon which was served by the ladies of the Loyal Orange Benevolent Association was featured by one half minute's silence in memory of the late Robert James Garbutt former director of the Fair Board, who died this week.

President Asselstine in a brief address to members of the Board Directors and visitors present extended the welcome on behalf of fellow officials. "This" declared President Asselstine gesturing toward the midway and the exhibits, "is the culmination of all the work in which we have been actively engaged since the Directors' meeting held in January. The success of the fair—your fair, now rests with the general public. Without its support we must fail."

Introduced by Mr. Dave Thrasher, 2nd vice president of the Board Mr. Carrol traced the growth of the earlier fairs in this and other districts and pointed to the steady and sure success that had followed the initial efforts of the early pioneers in Belleville district particularly. "It is impossible to estimate the amount of good fair boards such as this one has done to make Ontario and Canada, the leading agricultural province and country the leading one in agriculture in the world," declared Mr. Carrol.

Value to Standard

"You are now a Class B Fair," he said, "but after that I expect to find a higher standard every department that would be observed in a C fair, for example," commented in paying compliment to the efforts of the local Board in making this possible.

"A fair can only succeed where there is co-operation and enthusiasm. Each exhibitor is not only independent of the efforts of others but try to live without the assistance of your local clubs, service organization and the general public," remarked the chief speaker.

"I have gone over your fair carefully and I am pleased to find you upon the improvements in certain sections and the fair in general, your fruit and vegetable exhibits and other produce, is more than creditable," complimented Mr. Carroll.

Among those who spoke at the luncheon were Mr. A. E. Hicks, Mayor Geo. O. Tice; H. B. Stock, past president; Secretary N. J. Ketchison, David Thrasher, 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Galloway and others.

After the luncheon directors left to attend the funeral of the late Mr. R. J. Garbutt, a past president of the fair.

Sunday Labor To Save Harvest Not Condemned

"When the harvest calls, and weather conditions threaten, there certainly is no disgrace connected with any farmer working on Sunday," declared a leading agriculturist today in commenting upon the fact that some rural residents of this section have been reported to be working on Sunday's latch in their overtime work. "Only people who drive past the farms and see the work might wonder, but they don't know what we are up against just at this time of the year. We would have to keep going" he added.

"There might be other worthy things than honest work on the Lord's Day" nonetheless he replied one member of the local Ministerial Association, "but there is no excitement. There should be no sin in that."

SIDNEY SECTION SUFFERS LOSS AS FIRE SPREADS

W. Bailey's Barn, Shed, A. Lawrence's Drive Shed Wiped Out

GALE FANS FLAMES

Ditches Are Dug in Vain as Flames Race Across

Fire which started in a shed behind a barn owned by Wilmot Bailey, 2nd Concession of Sidney, late this afternoon, swept to the barn—proper, fanned by a strong southwest wind and the buildings fell prey to the flames. Flying embers carried the fire through fields and by way of fences like a raging inferno and the threshed owned by A. M. Lawrence, north of Bailey's property was destroyed with a number of farm implements. A hay stack owned by William Bush also caught fire. Bailey have 1,000 bushels of grain and a large quantity of hay stored in the barn. Neighbors to the number of hundreds from every section of the community rushed to fight the blaze, assisted by Chief Lynch and a detachment of the Belleville Fire Department, which were given permission on help in extinguishing the conflagration.

Only heroic efforts by the volunteer helpers saved the home of Mr. Bailey and that of Mr. Lawrence. The wind fanned the flames to such an extent that I. was impossible to go close enough to effectively stop the fire. The fire followed the rail fences and the newly formed dry stubble in the fields and wet blankets and other means were used to check the progress. Some of the farmers' crop-adjoining fire-fighting flames jumped them quite handily and raced for more prey. The buildings owned by Mr. Lawrence are on the north side of the Second Concession and it is impossible to state the exact loss.

The fire destroyed with wet rags, pans of water and biber fire fighting aids were anxiously standing to this afternoon as wind borne sparks were being carried across the dry acres. At the meantime they eyed the wind apprehensively. If no chance to check them were in for it," grimly remarked one citizen, standing to watch for sparks. The fire running along the rail fences leaped with incredible speed through the tall and rank growth.

Holds Match, Looks Into Barrel of Iodine

Montreal, Aug. 27 (CP)— Jean Paul LaMarche, 28, was in a critical condition in hospital today from burns received in an explosion that followed when he looked into a barrel of iodine — while holding a lighted match. Several thousand dollars' damage was done to the building of the Corporation Pharmaceutique Francaise.

1935 Fairs Improved . Says Sup't Carroll

"Better quality exhibits, better attendance and better weather," said although Ontario are noted this year, declared Mr. A. L. Carroll, Superintendent of Ontario Fairs when questioned today by the Intelligencer. Mr. Carroll is superintendent of Fairs officially opened the local fair today.

"All I have visited up to the present have been successful; Belleville's from what I have already seen seems to compare favorably."

BLINDED BY SHOT

Sidney Resident Meets Dead Man

Thomson, Aug. 27.—The 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gallagher of Cornwall Island was shot through the head and instantly blinded when he stepped before a target at which companions were shooting Monday. The boy was rushed to the hospital here. His condition is serious.

WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 27 (CP)—Synopsis: —An area of high pressure and cool weather extends from the Arctic southward over the western provinces and northwest states, while a moderate depression, centred over James Bay with a shallow trough extending southward over the Great Lakes. Light scattered showers have occurred from Ontario eastward.

Lake Superior: Moderate to fresh northeast winds; partly cloudy and cool.

Manitoba and Rainy River: Moderate to fresh northwest winds; fair and cool.

Alberta: Partly cloudy and cool; probably some light showers.

Starts Meal With Gallon of Wine Ends With Gallon of Beer as Chaser

Philadelphia, Aug. 27 (AP)—Tony sauce and cheese. There followed in succession: 12 spring chickens, two large sirloin steaks, a meat roast and a gallon of beer as a chaser.

But then, unlike the proverbial circus gormand who said, "This is good practice but when do I eat?" Tony called a halt.

A scales showed he had gained 20 pounds at the sitting.

The proprietor brought forth a gallon of Italian ice cream. "No, no," objected Tony. "Spumoni. It is heavy."

City and District News

VISITING FIREMEN INSPECT EQUIPMENT

Travelling in a large, chartered bus and following a program mapped out that was arranged by them last fall, 32 citizens of the town of Linwood and vicinity, north of Lake Erie, in Waterloo County, Pennsylvania, stopped over in this city for a brief visit this morning before continuing their trip east to Montreal and Quebec. There another stop will be made en route to Toronto.

Included in the party were Fire Chief William M. Pickett of Linwood and Deputy Chief Harvey Haywood Morton who spent some time as guests of the local fire department, admiring the new quarters and equipment in No. 1 Fire Hall. The tour started this October at Shaffer's Falls.

MERCHANTS PROTEST THANKSGIVING DATE

Local merchants have joined with those of other larger cities in a combined protest against the change in Thanksgiving Day date, it was indicated by statements observed on the street today.

"The business we do in and through the country to change the usual Monday holiday to the middle of the week on Thursday," stated one local merchant, "and I feel certain the trade on Monday, but the buying public just starts to warm up, shortly thereafter."

It was not indicated that a general meeting of business representatives would be held here to make protest, but it was pointed out that this would receive serious consideration by the Ontario Committee meeting at Toronto on Wednesday.

SEEKS ROLL OF BILLS HIDDEN BY CAT

A Point Anne farmer this week is neglecting his regular farm chores while he painstakingly carries on a search for a roll of money, rolled for a roll of bills, carefully buried by the owner, a cat, in a potato crop. Paid in cash for the sale of four fat hogs, the farmer returned home with the money and carefully removed plowing, stopping briefly for a smoke. On the way he dropped a stone and forgot it. When he returned the roll of bills was gone. "I only wish that little brown pup could talk" he sighs as he continues the search, the pup at his heels.

START WRECKING OLD ALBERT COLLEGE

With the demolition of Massey Hall now about completed, a start on old Albert College building properties will be made by the wrecking crew in charge of the work within the next week or so, it was stated today by Mr. Harry Smith, owner. Slowly and reluctantly the solidly constructed building of Belleville's sinewy timbers and beams is yielding to the sledge and heel of the wreckers. It is expected that upward of 2,000,000 hand made bricks eagerly sought by builders of the new collegiate effect will be reclaimed from the ashes, and many of the fine old building are finding a ready sale in local construction circles.

Association Secretary Attends Meeting

At a special meeting of the Belleville District Welsh Milk Producer's Association held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening, Mr. Glen Stanley, who is secretary, was unanimously elected to represent the local organization at the annual meeting of the Ontario Whole Milk Producers' League to be held in Toronto on Wednesday of this week. The annual convention will be held in Toronto and new resolutions expected to be introduced. The local meeting which last was slimly attended here last evening was not well attended because farmers are not worrying. Even if it does take five pounds of grain to make a pound of pork, they figure they'll be ahead," he added.

BARLEY SALES NOT QUITE SO HIGH

Canadian and United States buyers, tumbling over themselves last year to secure shipments of grain, particularly barley, from this district last year, are lukewarm in the matter of buying this season. It is stated by Mr. Stanley May, well known buyer who has been shipping oats and barley from the city for the past week or so.

"Barley doesn't weigh up so well this season and anyhow we elevators can only add so much," he said, "and if there are just taking the odd load or two, that's all we'll get." It was slimly attended here last evening, was presided over by Stanley May, president.

BUSINESS GOOD IN FAIR WEEK

Restaurant owners, store owners, food and peptonic men, and even grocers of the city were experiencing the first day's rush, which it is stated is expected to be one of their best weeks of the season following the entry of hordes of visitors to Belleville from outside points to attend the fall fair. Even early yesterday morning parking space along Front street was cramped, with long streams of cars, while the avenues leading to the fair grounds were filled with a constant stream of cars for the day.

Hotels, also, were reporting business good, with nearly all rooms booked.

In honor of the annual event merchants, even about the last early of displaying their flags in holders at the entrance to their places of business.

A hint of rain threatened this morning but shortly before noon cooler winds had alleviated the depressing humidity and coldness of the morning. Rain, threatened all day, ended, Today five teams and fifteen men were at work on the excavation at the Dominion Entomological Laboratory alone.

Speculation of Officials on Rain Turns to Broad Smiles

CHILDREN EARLY BIRDS

Darkening clouds tumbling in the west were being eyed apprehensively by Walter Alabaster, president of the Belleville Fair Board this morning and fellow officials of the Board, up to noon there was no need of the proverbial bubble of joy or good luck token with which to stave off the threatening downpour, holding off, it was figured by the agronomy executive for the past month or so "until the fair grounds were good and ready for one of our best efforts." "Where is that weather forecaster now?" demanded James F. Barber, 1st vice president.

Since early morning cars and trucks carrying hundreds of visitors into the city from all parts of Ontario have given Belleville one of its busiest circus-day appearances. In the downtown section parking space was at a premium. On roads leading to the fair grounds solid lines of traffic passed back and forth. Along the sidewalks almost from the top of the hill Friday, men and women, even with their intriguing novelties on the board were crying their wares.

'Hank' the Bell

A bell, a solid mass of bone and muscle and sinew and had looks, with a dog as large as a calf, is a kitten's in spite of his odd 1200 pounds weight, and breathing fire and defiance in his looks, Hercules of him along nonchalantly with a rope through a ring in his huge nose. Hank. With a snort he tossed his head just as they were leading him into the stall. The rope slipped through the handlers' hands. The cow turned on the ground. The bull was loose. A dozen citizens scattered. He backed away, head down, and straightening up. "Come on, Hank, quit the foolishness," one of his handlers recaptured the rope. Hank was led quietly into the stall, still protesting, but following readily.

Extreme precautions are being taken against fire at the grounds by members of the local department now posted on duty with their equipment. Under the grand stands are dry barns and outbuildings await only the menace of a careless tossed lighted match or a smouldering cigarette and to cause a wild blaze, but the potential fire brands are being watched closely by those entrusted with the duty.

"Cap" Walmsley, indefatigable worker who has the unenviable task at the end of the various programs, is proud of his band. As chairman of the fair grounds committee on the Board he has been one of the most busy members of the organization since March. And nobly the local Band under the leadership of Conductor Cap Hunt has responded. There will be many new musical features added for fair visitors, promises the chairman.

- Running a million dollar outfit such as the Belleville Fair is not all drinks and skittles, Mr. H. E. Fairfield, chairman of the Finance and Membership of the Board is free and willing to agree. There are invoices for this, cheques for that, prize money here and there; there are lists and counter lists and check and re-check constantly, with the financial end of the city's annual exposition. For often, however, the finance chairman is being assisted with the experience and knowledge of a regular Hasler, Mr. H. C. Stater, member of the committee.

Kaleidoscopic View

It was Children's Day at the fair today. Almost endless in number was the hurried and flying jumble of arms and legs and feet, and the hundreds of feet scampered over the close-clipped lawns, invaded the buildings, roamed the midway, and its many sights, and in general "got in the hair" of the harrassed fair officials. How many peanuts and nickles and dimes and quarters found their way into the many money coaxing devices, and how many lunches were eaten, how pounds of paper were scattered over the broad acres could only be reached by conjecture. Anyhow the kids had a good time," it was really agreed by all who saw them.

Helen McQuaid Wins Scholarship

Miss Helen McQuaid, brilliant young scholar at St. Michael's Academy High School, has been informed that she has won a matriculation scholarship at Queen's, Kingston. The scholarship was in provincial competition and was awarded for the highest marks in six Upper School subjects. Brescia Hall is affiliated with Western University.

Miss McQuaid has achieved an enviable scholastic record at St. Michael's Academy being the recipient of prizes at the end of each term. She is a gifted speaker and debater and has taken a keen interest in all school activities.

PEACE RIVER TALE IS RELATED HERE

Three Members of Fellowship of West Present Travelogue

One of the final pioneer regions of Canada—the Peace River district of British Columbia—was the theme of a travelogue shown in Christ Church Hall last night. Moving pictures and colored lantern slides were used, as well as the spoken word, to describe this north-western country.

Members of the Fellowship of the West, led by the Rev. George Wolfendale, presented the Travelogue. The Peace River district is a vast expanse of the Church of England and five years ago came into existence when it was realized that this large district of western Columbia—containing some 6,600 square miles—was without the ministrations of the Church and settlers were pouring in to it.

The Travelogue showed some of the difficulties the land had overcome by wagon and car through knee deep swamp and muskeg; travel by river steamer; farming methods in the days of the "sod busting" settlers of the Peace; the intense cold of the winter; the hardships endured by the homesteaders; and the sometimes tremendous distances between the settlers' homes, accompanied by menace, loneliness. But it also showed the splendid crops, the enormous and magnificent gorges of the river, and the wide-stretching acres of golden grain.

Moving pictures illustrated some of the wild animals of the region—the deer, moose, and grimly bear; the towering mountain ranges; placer mining; the building of a mission of church and the back-breaking trials of the settlers in opening up the bronco busting.

Among the members of the Fellowship who presented the Travelogue returned only last fall from work in that district. They told briefly of the accomplishments in their five years' residence there. Among these accomplishments was the building of three churches and the maintenance of services in a score of other places both summer and winter. But the pleasure and mental consolation for their tremendous hardships was found in the fellowship land and lumber to build a church just north of the Peace River and known as the "Church of the Farmers turned to and built the church, and the result is a beautiful church now owns men and women who had tired for years without it, and testify that they have found firmly established the House of God in this frontier country.

The Rev. G. Wolfendale is assisted in the Fellowship by Mr. Fisk of Montreal. The splendid quality of these men, for the work of the Church and humanity made a deep impression on the audience. It is hoped they may sometime again show the beautiful colored reels, with appropriate musical setting.

Mrs. Stanley Wright accompanied by Mr. George Maybee, gave a solo which for an encore responding to a vociferous encore. The Rev. Rev. G. G. Wright was chairman.

DENTAL PROGRESS RAPID SINCE 1910

Dr. John Guthridge Tells Rotary Club History of Profession

Dentistry, ancient and modern, formed the subject of a very interesting address by Dr. John Robert Guthridge at the weekly meeting of the Belleville Rotary Club Monday.

Dr. Guthridge told how dentistry has made several thousand years to the first records of dental surgery which are found in the tombs of wealth lost a front tooth, a similar tooth was purchased from a poor man, extracted and placed in the rich man's mouth. Gold wire was used to fasten the tooth with this gold wire. Lead was used as filling for teeth as early as 1800, also gold. Vulcanizing for dentures came in about 1840 as the result of a discovery by a man named Goodyear, and the first vulcanizing was the result of a pot of rubber boiling over on the stove. Goodyear patented the process and secured royalties for its use, holding back the process until vulcanizing methods for some years until a court dissolved the patent. The greatest progress in dentistry has been made in the past twenty-five years, said Dr. Guthridge, the greatest single changes in treatment from the days when it was considered good sense to drill the nerve in a tooth, fill it and cap it. Then came the discovery of the pulp canal, a specific all teeth in the supposed hollow. Then Novocaine paste was passed, and now every effort is made to save the tooth. Today the accidents of dentistry in war time when toothache made men forget all else, the trauma of war and long for ease—of a French dentist, Dr. Evans, who founded a school, who operated on a soldier pal suffering from the toothache and gave him a gold poker.Notwithstanding the unethical manner of obtaining his fame, Dr. Guthridge said meeting his former pal several years after the Winnipeg Exhibition, found that the tooth had never bothered him since and was the best tooth in his head.

Dr. Guthridge was introduced by Jack McFee, and President Boyce.

Librarian Fred Ashley, of Everett, Massachusetts, was a visitor.

Letters to the Editor

Aug. 26, 1935

The Editor:
Sir,—I wish to cite you on Mad Moira St. on Sunday morning, your paper states the firemen got a call at 10.30 on Mad Moira St. I just want to say that there was no fire. The Fire Chief was out at that time. It was in a barn belonging to the residence next door, and as I was the owner I would like to ask when the fire trucks arrived at a fire at midnight and there was wrong with the new pumper, that they couldn't get any water? I myself sent in the alarm and I know what I am talking about for my water on the fire as soon as they got there, they could have protected all that property from burning. I would like to ask Chairman Fire Church and Donnelly what was wrong, that it took so long to get water on the fire.

Thanking you for your valuable space, I remain,

Wilfred Sanford.

A brother of Mrs. Robert Soles of Belleville, died at his home at Collins Bay, died as the result of injuries received in a motor car accident last Saturday night. He was 42 years of age and served during the Great War, having gone overseas in 1918.

Surviving him are his wife and three young sons; a brother, Thos. Bonnee of Kingston and his sister, Mrs. Robert Soles of Belleville.

POLICE BLOTTER

Found abandoned behind a dwelling on Dundas Street, a bicycle was stolen from Belleville Hall, work, was discovered by Howard Kelleher yesterday. The recovery of the "bike" was reported to the owner today.

Local police today were asked to keep alert with the aim of a motorcycle stolen at Brockville early this morning. The vehicle was a 1930 Harley-Davidson bearing Ontario license plates 29-846.

William Day, Purdy Street, complained to the police regarding the killing of 18 of his valuable chickens. Mr. Day informed the authorities a large mongrel dog was seen carrying one of the fowl away last Saturday. The canine bore no dog tag, the police were assured.

A general falling off in the trend of transients appearing at the police station nightly has been noted of late, only two transients appearing at the sergeants desk in quest of a night's lodging. William Smith, the rarest check-up by local authorities of tramps slumbering in the great outdoors. Smith is a cordial with being the paramount reason for his discontinuation of transients slopping in Belleville.

Baltimore, Aug. 27 (CP)—Earl Frayer, night club chef, was stirring up soup, William Smith, the repairing the roof. Smith fell through the skylight and landed on Frayer. The soup was ruined and the two men went to the hospital. Only slight injuries could be discovered.

WHAT NAME ZWICK'S ISLAND!

Zwick's Island, Does it Exist?

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

No, there is no Zwick's Island. Over thirty years ago before the bridge was constructed there was an island known as Zwick's Island containing about twenty-five acres, which belonged to the City and another small island to the east known as Busby Island. When the bridge across the Bay was being constructed a roadway was made from the mainland to the bridge proper connecting Zwick's and Busby Islands since when these two islands now form part of the mainland and therefore both have ceased to be islands.

It is therefore a misstatement to describe this park as Zwick's Island, and for that reason that name would be objectionable for the park. The name Zwick's Park is objectionable because of the difficulty of pronouncing the name, besides it is over a century since any person had that name had any interest in the land.

Quinte Park would be a more appropriate name because it stands out in the waters of the Bay of Quinte.

It is quite evident that water pleasures are coming back. Some day a steamboat service will likely be built at this park where excursion boats could call for passengers, and as it can be approached by land, as well as water it would become a most attractive public ground in the district.

The shallow waters of the bay afford excellent opportunity for an annual rowing regatta of this park which could be extended for days.

The Fair Board could stage a swimming and rowing contest as one of the features of the exhibition at this park. Some points in the Bay where the water is now dangerous by dredging in former years could be rendered safe by dredging material from future dredging operations. If the bathing facilities were improved, no doubt some enterprising person would pay a very substantial amount for the park privileges.

As the park stands high above the water, it would afford excellent opportunity for observing swimming, sailing and rowing contests, and would afford the opportunity for automobile parking space.

In the winter time the park could be used for tobogganing, skating and other winter sports. It would be an ideal place for a winter carnival.

The absence of water privileges in many localities, suggests that Belleville has been a great deal for Belleville, but no place can become any greater than its own people make it.

The suggestions and many that characterized the former gatherings in the building of Belleville's magnificent City Hall and splendid business houses could be infused into the present generation and a great deal could be accomplished.

W. G. Miles.

Ninth Annual Flower Show Held by Tweed Society

Tweed, Aug. 22—The ninth annual flower show of Tweed Horticultural Society, was held in the pavilion at Victoria Memorial Park on Friday, August 23rd. In spite of the ill-many treacherous days of weather during the summer there was some fine flowers and also an opose available was filled with outdoors and potted plants. The dull weather participants of the past few weeks, and the hall caused a great deal of damage to many gardens and resulted in a marked falling-off in the number of exhibitors. In 1934 there were 321 exhibitors; in 1935, there were but 14. On the other hand the number of entries increased from 956 in 1934 to 966 this year.

The exhibit of gladioli was the finest ever shown in this district, beauty of the spikes and flowers being of magnificent proportions. The flower is rapidly becoming a universal favourite and there are few gardeners that do not boast of at least a few of the better sorts. In addition also there were many beautiful blooms of the various types. There were numerous magnificent cut flowers of different varieties.

The scene was a veritable bower of beauty under the lights as the exhibitors and their friends passed among the tables admiring the many mammoth blossoms of the ballas; thus or stunning the dainty blooms of the pansy or the rose.

The ladies of the society served a splendid supper from five o'clock to seven. Unfortunately there was not as large an attendance as usual and receipts showed a marked falling off from last year.

The judges was Mr. C. W. Fallis-ter, florist of Campbellford. There was an unfortunate delay in the beginning of the judging as Mr. Fallister met with a motor accident a few miles out of Campbellford about 11-30 and was unable to begin judging until about three o'clock. The Rotary Club kindly loaned a chauffeur for his help in connection with the Flower Show.

The sweepstake awarded to the exhibitor with the greatest number of points went to Rev. S. R. Nicholson, President of the local Horticultural Society, with a total of 49 points. He received the beautiful Rock Maple donated by Mr. Jas. Zalzo Co. The second prize in the sweepstakes was awarded to Mrs. W. J. Blakely with 134 points, and received the clock donated by Robt. Simpson Co. In amazing the total Mr. Nicholson took 20 first prizes, 17 second prizes and 6 third prizes, while Mrs. Blakely received 18 firsts, 14 seconds and 2 thirds.

The complete list of prize winners is as follows:

He Was "Cruel" Big They're Still Friends

Maybe this divorce business doesn't mean so much perhaps it's a marriage that means nothing. At any rate, Bruce Cabot and Adrienne Ames (ABOVE) a few months ago were happily wedded. Then Adrienne obtained divorce from Bruce on the ground of "cruelty." And now they're together again, apparently quite happy in each other's company and rumors are that there'll be a reconciliation. Both are Hollywood stars.

Fair in October of Year 1856 Was Known as Cattle Show

Chronicler of 79 Years Ago Records Impressions of That Fair

Co-incident with the opening of the Belleville Fair, it is interesting to note a clipping from the issue of October, 1856, what might be called a forerunner of the local annual exposition was held in this city called the Fair and Cattle Show of the United Counties." An interesting account of that fair is contained in the old Intelligencer files of that period.

According to the historian, good weather favored the exhibitors who had arranged their produce and exhibits on the green grass and vegetables on the old Market Square. "We have little doubt," says the report that these exhibits compare favorably with those of the provincial show (Provincial Exhibition of that period). The vegetables are nearly all in and the following account of that fair is contained in the old Intelligencer files of that period.

"Among the articles on show at the exhibition on which almost as much as the fine fabrics. We are pleased to see the tradesmen and others taking exception to this. He fails to display their handiwork. From the neatness of the make and and the superiority of the cloth in the garments exhibited, we opine that it is to no longer necessary for our gents to send to Montreal and the other larger cities for their clothing.

"Taking it as a whole we think the County has reason to be proud of the effort that has been displayed on this occasion.

"One thing has always been a source of annoyance and that is a room sufficiently large to exhibit the specimens. Could not a plot of ground be purchased by our agricultrists and a building erected for the purpose which will at once fix the attention of both the city and the county."

The report director attention further at the fair to the display of fine horses, the carriages from the Brown Carriage Factory of the city, the Chinese sugar cane from which nehamed was being made in Belleville, and points out:

"On the whole the fair was good, but we should like to have a greater degree of rivalry exhibited by our farmers and mechanics in every branch of their calling. Then we

BAPTISM SERVICE HELD AT STIRLING

Ceremony Performed For Several Members of Tabernacle Church

Stirling—During the afternoon a large crowd attended the Baptismal Services conducted by Grace Tabernacle of Stirling when several members of the congregation were immersed in the sincerity of their belief as they were submerged in Baptism according to the Command of their Lord. Many people gathered in the main auditorium where the impressive and solemn ceremony was carried through.

With the return of Rev. A. S. McConnell, Rector of St. John's Anglican Church, services will be held again under his direction after being withdrawn for the past three Sundays. With the holiday season drawing to a close services will continue throughout the year in the usual fashion.

St. Andrew's Church

On Sunday morning Aug. 25th, the last of a series of union services was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. These services which continue the same congregations of St. Paul's United Church and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church were specially arranged by the Pastoral Aides of both the churches for the vacation period of the year and were very largely attended. The first two were held in St. Paul's United Church and the Minister of the congregation Rev. A. Kofford occupying the pulpit The 2nd two Sunday services were conducted in St. Andrew's Church by Rev. R. W. Rowland of St. Paul's the charge to the First Sunday morning both congregations gathered in St Andrew's for the short service under these special arrangements and Rev. H. W. Foley of Springbrook was the speaker in the absence of Mr. Rowland, who presented his message from the pulpit one of his churches, Mr. Foley delivered a most inspiring message on the theme "Mounting the Nets", an interesting feature of this service was the fine rendition by the soprano Solo "Holy City" by Miss May of Belleville. Miss May who has been a member of St. Andrew's choir before is a talented soloist, with a lovely voice and is always willing when called upon to offer her services to the work of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Thompson of Belleville spent the week-end visiting on Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fry and daughter Peggy of Niagara Falls, Ontario, returned to their home on Aug. 19th, after spending a few days at the home of Mrs. Fry's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Mitchell.

Mrs. William Darrah and son of Marmora were week end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Mitchell.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Barber and Bobbie of Mountain View called on Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Wood on Sunday.

Mr. W. L. Anderson accompanied by Mr. H. Johnston left on Monday for an extended business trip through western Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Duncan and son Arthur attended services at St. Andrew's Church, Campbellford on Sunday evening when Arthur Duncan assisted with the music.

Mrs. Andrew Fry of Campbellford spent Monday at the home of her daughter Mrs. Jas. McDonald.

Sunday visitors at the home of Mrs. H. Rosebush were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Demill of Trenton, and Mr. and Mrs. Jeffery of Belleville.

Mr. Don McCallum of the Bank of Montreal staff is spending vacation in western Ontario.

STORAGE SHED AT PICTON DESTROYED

Lawrence O'Neil is Badly Burned Trying to Put Out Blaze

Picton, Aug. 27.—At four-fifteen Tuesday afternoon, a fire raged for thirty minutes, destroying a large storage shed at the rear of the Picton Post Office, causing grave anxiety for a time, and injury to three individuals, Lawrence O'Neil, in the shed allegedly was stored napatha gasolene, oil and ten gallons of thinner. An explosion occurred when James Hedges, a clerk of the store, poured some kerosene out of a drum into a bottle. The explosion could be heard for blocks around. Lawrence O'Neil, trying to fight the fire, was badly burned on face and hands, when his shirt became ignited. He was rushed to Maher's Drug Store for emergency treatment. Fortunately the dynamite did not explode, and the Picton Fire Brigade kept from spreading to nearby stores.

Mr. Al Stafford received a sprain on leg on Friday afternoon, while about his work in connection with the meat department of Stafford's Grocery.

Mons Irene McConnell

A sad death occurred at the home of Mrs. Irene McConnell, Mrs. Irene McConnell, Salmon Point, on Friday, August 23rd, when Margaret Jane Hagerman, passed away after a short illness with pneumonia. The deceased was eighty-three years of age. She was a member of Salmon Point United Church and devoted to church work. Prior to Church Union in 1925 to the absence of the pastor the service was conducted by members of the Bible Society, and a Bible was presented to Mrs. McConnell in recognition of her work in the Society, Although very ill at the time, she never lost her cheerful happiness. The funeral service took place on Monday afternoon from Salmon Point United Church with interment in Cherry Valley cemetery. Rev. Irr. Mowbray of Picton conducted the service. The bereavement has the deep sympathy of the whole community.

Cornelius Turner

After a long illness, one of the oldest residents of North Marysburgh Township, Cornelius Turner, passed away at the home of his son, John Turner, on Wednesday, August 21st. He was eighty-five years of age. Rev. Jas. Gray of Cressey United Church conducted the funeral service at his late residence on Friday afternoon and many neighbors and relatives gathered for the sad occasion. Interment was made in the Ross burying ground, Wallbridge.

"IRON 2ND" BATT. HOLDS REUNION

Dinner Will Be Held on Saturday in This City

Expected to be attended by the largest turnout since the first reunion, held right after the war, by reason of the centralized position of this city, chosen as the convention site, arrangements for the annual reunion of the "Iron 2nd Battalion" which will be held here in Belleville on Saturday, August 31, have now been almost completed, according to Wm. C. Jack, of this city, chairman of the committee in charge of the convention.

Saturday will be devoted to the reunion proper in Belleville and on the following day, Sunday, the veterans will parade to Bowmanville for the annual memorial service in St. Paul's United Church where the colors of the unit are deposited. Principal speaker at the reunion dinner will be General Sir Archibald C. Macdonnell, K.C.B., former Commander of the 1st Canadian Division.

The 2nd Battalion is perpetuated in the non permanent active militia by the Governor General's Foot-guards of Ottawa and the Peterborough Rangers, the former association is affiliated with the 2nd Australian Infantry Regiment Association of Sydney, N.S.W.

One of the original units of the First Contingent the 2nd Battalion had a distinguished war record. In 1915 it served at Ypres, Festubert and Givenchy. Its campaigns of 1916 included Hill 60, Sanctuary Wood, Poelcra and Regina Trench. The year 1917 saw the unit in action at Passchendaele and in 1918 it took part in stemming the German advance north of the Somme in the Battle of Amiens; the second engagement at Arras, the Drocourt-Queant fighting, the Canal Du Nord and the pursuit to Mons. The Battalion remained in Germany in the army of occupation and garrisoned there until Brigaded for several weeks.

Branches of the association are active in this city, Ottawa, Montreal, Kingston, Toronto and Windsor, where the unit, which has veterans will attend the local reunions.

HAVE MORE FUN ON MOTOR TRIPS

It's pretty hard to beat a motor trip for sheer fun—if you're well. But you have to feel good to enjoy play, as well as work.

Keep fit as a fiddle when you travel, whether by train or by motor car. Take along a bottle of Eno's "Fruit Salt." Wherever you get thirsty, or tired, or when you have to feel the effects of change of cooking and lack of exercise, take a dash of Eno in a glass of water. Eno is the travellers' best friend. It makes a pleasant-tasting, thirst-quenching, refreshing drink.

Eno is alkaline. It neutralizes the acids in other foods . . . gives sweetness a short shrift. Exercises the bowels and promotes them, cools the blood, gives regularity on the entire inner system. Keeps free from constipation and enjoy life, both at home and on the road. Eno does the trick. The action is gentle—natural. Every effect of Eno's "Fruit Salt" is pleasant and beneficial. Get a bottle at once! Handy; size 50c; Household size $1.00.

REDUCTION OF IMPRISONMENT

"The fairer system of fines payment" which has been adopted in England with the third meeting of the Money Payments Bill, is discussed by the Montreal Gazette from the standpoint of its merits. The matter has to do with the imprisonment for failure to pay. The Montreal Gazette says:

"Sir John Simon, Home Secretary, in explaining the provisions of the bill, pointed out that there were about 53,000 cases of imprisonment in a year, of which more than one-third were due to failure to pay fines or some other money payment ordered by a court of summary jurisdiction. The ordinary daily total was 500. Over 97 per cent. of the fines imposed were paid, he stated, but the remaining three per cent. accounted for the large number of cases sent to prison. The real mischief of the present system, maintained Sir John, was that imprisonment followed almost automatically on failure to pay a fine. The Money Payments Bill provides the specific case in order to decide what is the fair thing to do in the circumstances. If a satisfactory explanation of the failure to pay is given, then imprisonment ought not to follow automatically. In the bill there is a provision to cover such a situation. The person will not be convicted and fined, and who needs time for payment, is to be placed under supervision until he has fulfilled the legal obligation. No person under the age of 21 is to be committed to jail unless this method of supervision is tried. Judging by newspaper comment, this part of the bill is meeting with general approval. It is a social act that may save a very considerable number of persons from going to prison for minor offences, while at the same time they will be compelled to pay the penalty for whatever folly they may have committed. As for the state, it will be saved the expense of paying for the keep of those committed over varying periods of time. In short, a fairer system is to be established and imprisonment is to be reduced."

LEADING AGRICULTURIST PASSES

Agriculture loses an outstanding figure in the late Robert James Garbutt, who died on Saturday morning after a long illness. Belleville Fair and other fairs in this part of Ontario will miss him for he was one of the strongest advocates of the annual fall exhibitions. He was a breeder of sheep and swine and at one time a judge at international shows.

Belleville Fair owes him a debt which he cheerfully forgives. It was he who was the prime mover for the bringing of the fair from Thrasher's Corners to Belleville. He became the president of the fair and was always an exhibitor. He believed in supporting the fair with his own efforts and in taking his own advice to support the fair.

Personally Mr. Garbutt was one of the most likable of men. Even up to his latest days he preserved that kindliness and consideration which made him friends everywhere. He lived to a great age, being in his 88th year at the time of his death, was a model farmer and left his mark upon his day and generation.

He will be missed in the countryside, in the church, and in many circles. His wise counsels have brought fruit and he will continue to exert an influence, even though he has passed from the earthly scene.

MONKEYS TAKE THE STAGE

In a world eye-sore looking towards Dark Africa where Emperor Haile Sellassie lives with some millions of compatriots and where Mussolini's legions may thunder along in a way resembling the progress of the legions of Caius Julius Caesar twenty centuries ago in what is now North Europe, there has been a playful little interlude to make the world laugh and the eyes lose their strain. It is the capers of 'Al Capone', not the U. S. prisoner, but the fugitive monkey who led 175 Rhesus simians away in one of the funniest zoo episodes in recent news history. His fancy trick of allowing himself to be caught long enough to get a feed of bananas and then escaping from the "string-on-backs-liver" hunters made millions laugh. Not all of "Al's" followers have been caught yet.

In the antics of these monkeys mankind has forgot all about the monkey business of Kentucky or the descent of man, or evolution thinking more of the escape of monkeys. A wave of feeling has gone out for the lively little fellows who to the average man do not resemble humans very much.

Man got a real thrill out of the Massapequa, N.Y. hegira or escape. What the monkeys got out of it is hard to say as no scientist will claim to know all about that animal's psychology. But on the average those who have survived even if caught appear to have had a real thrill also. It was a novelty to be loose, without having men and women looking at them on the other side of the cage wire.

It was pleasanter to think of the monkeys at large than of the roaming lions and other wild beasts and the dogs of war which may be loosed in the near future.

THOSE LITTLE THINGS

Oh, it's just the little homely things,
The unobtrusive, friendly things,
The "won't-you-let-me-help-you" things,
That make our pathway light.

And it's just the jolly joking things,
The "never-mind-the-trouble" things,
The "laugh-with-me-it's-funny" things
That make the world seem bright.

For all the countless famous things,
The wondrous record-making things,
Those never-can-be-equalled things
That all the papers cite,

Are not like little human things,
The every-day-encountered things,
The "just-because-I-like-you" things,
That make us happy quite.

So here's to all the little things,
The done-and then-forgotten things,
Those "oh-it's-simply-nothing" things,
That make life worth the fight.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT
by T. E. LAWRENCE

The Turks had at least nine machines. We were camped twelve miles from their aerodromes, in the open desert, about the only possible water-supply, with great herds of camels and many horse necessarily grazing round us. The Turks beginning of bombing had been enough to disquiet the Irregulars who were our eyes and ears. Soon they would break up and go home, and our campaign be ended. Talpike, took that first village which covered us from Deras—it lay defenceless and deserting under repeated attack. If we were to remain in Umtaiye, Talpike must be content with us.

Clearly our first duty was to get air reinforcement from Allenby, who had arranged to send a newer machine to Azrak on the day after tomorrow. I judged it more profitable for me to go across and talk with him, I could be back on the twenty-second. Umtaiye would be quiet enough if we were to remain in Umtaiye, Talpike must be content with us.

Clearly our first duty was to get air reinforcement from Allenby, who had arranged to send a newer machine to Azrak on the day after tomorrow. I judged it more profitable for me to go across and talk with him, I could be back on the twenty-second. Umtaiye would be quiet enough if we were to remain in Umtaiye, Talpike must be content with us.

Whether ah Umtaiye or Um el Surab, to be safe we must keep the initiative. The Deras side was comparatively clear, by the evacuation of the peasants; there remained the Ridge Hill. The bridge at Kilo 160 was nearly mended. We must smash it again, and smash another to the south, to prevent the enemy trains access to it. An effort by Winterton reported August 11 Dallas the first was a matter for troops and guns. The second was objective for a raid.

So I suggested to Joyce that the Sarpiens and Gurkhas should march to Akaie; proposing further that he lend me an armoured car to go down with them to the railway, their first stage, and do what could be done. We went up to Nouaisi and Nuri Said, and told them I would be back in two days, meanwhile the fighting machines, to deliver us from air scouts and bombing. Meanwhile we would make Talpike with money for the Turkish damage, and Joyce would make landing grounds, here and at Um el Surab, against my return with our air reinforcement.

The demolition of that night was a fantastic muddle. We moved at 8 o'clock in an open valley, three cars miles from the railway. Aircraft might threaten from Mafrak station. My armoured car, with Junior attendant in his Ford, would protect that side against hostile advance. The Sarpiens would move direct on to the line, and fire their charges.

My guiding hill through. We reached it, and a man came in who said the mass of valleys, not able to find the railway, nor the Sarpiens, nor their starting-point. At last we saw a light and drove for it, to find ourselves in front of a Turkish camp. We turned to get into place, and heard the clank of an engine running northward out of the station. We chased its intermittent flame, hoping to catch it between us and the broken bridge, but before we overtook it there came flashes and explosions from up, as Peake fired his thirty charges.

Some moonlight was gathered by breaking past us southward. We fired at them, and then the patrolling train returned, backing at its best speed from Peake's danger. We ran alongside and opened on the engine with our Vickers, with unison sent a green shower of tracer bullets from his Lewis across the dark. Above our shooting and the noise of the engine we heard the Turks howling with terror of this luminous attack. They fired back wildly, but as they drew it by, the car suddenly sneezed and stood still. A bullet had pierced the radiator and of the petrol tank, the only unarmoured spot of all our cars. In took us half an hour to plug the leak.

Then we drove along the silent line in the twisted rails and gaping culverts, but could not find our bridge. So we drew a mile back, and there at last I had my sleep out, three perfect hours of it before the dawn. Then we went on and reconnoitred our place. Probably it was only the fifth sleepless night which had made my wits woolly. We pushed forward with the Egyptians and the Ghurkas, and reached Azrak in the early afternoon. There were Feisal and Nuri Shaalan, eager to hear our news. We explained particularly to Feisal that Marshall, in the temporary hospital. He had all our Arab wounded, the Arab care; but they were fewer than he had expected, so we were able to spare a stretcher for one.

At dawn Joyce unexpectedly arrived. He had given up his mind that in this lull it was his duty to go own to Azrak to see Feisal and Nuri Said and Jaafar before Mann, and to press forward Mombay among the Beni Sakhr. Young Peake came from Palestine arrived, and we heard the amazing first chronicle of Allenby's victory. He had smashed and burst through and driven the Turks headlong, inevitably. The face of our war was changed, and we were hurried word of the bomb with counsels of the general revolt to take profit of the situation. Allenby was safely in Palestine.

From Ramleh the Air Force gave us the first real literature we had there I found the great man unmoved except for the light in his eyes and his bolt unsettled in every fifteen minutes, with news of some wide success. Allenby had been so much before he started, that to him the victory was little boredom, but to the general, however scientific, could see his intricate plan carried out and not know an inward gladness; especially when he felt in the next breath and judgment which made the victory, and in the next movements; and break up the proper book of the administrative services to help them; and support them by every moral and material asset, military, political, within his grasp.

He sketched to me his next intentions. Historic Palestine was his, and the broken Turks, in spite of the expected a shadow of the pursuit. Not at all. Bartholomew and Evans were prepared to threaten three more thrusts, one across Jordan to Deras, to be done by Barrow and Chauvel, another across Jordan to Kunetira, to be done by Shea and Chaytor, and a third which would rest at Amman; Barrow and Chauvel on attaining the first objective, would push on from Deraa to Amman. We were to assist the three, and I was not to carry out the many threat to take Damascus, till we were all together.

I explained our prospects, and how everything was being wrecked by anti-bombing. He pressed it and in a few minutes Salmond and Borton were conferring with us. Borton was then taken an indispensable part in Allenby's scheme; the perfection of this man who could use infantry and cavalry, artillery and air, armoured cars, receptions and irregulars, each in its best fashion!) and had fulfilled it to the letter, more Turks in the sky—except on our side, as I hurriedly interpolated—than on the better, said Salmond; they would send two machines to Azrak tomorrow to sit with us while we needed them. And we must have fuel. Was a drop? How was it to be got there? Only by air! An air-contained fighting unit? Borton asked.

However, Salmond and Borton were quite sure, after a hurried consorted out loads for D.H.9. and Handley-Page, which could land in Azrak, and, starting, sure it would be done. The co-operation of the Handley-Page had already been so ready and elastic, the liaison so complete, the understanding so telephone and telegraph connections, had shortened very-considerably the infantry and cavalry, the whole Arab regular units. Salmond and Borton departed, full of confidence in Allenby's tactical work, but in his very strategy. Till now, admittedly, only Jaafar Afuleh in turn were air-contained so drastically that their war was independent for hours before any of our ground troops drew level.

But the climax of air attack, and the holocaust of the retreating Turks, fell in the valley by which Sedrasion drained to the Jordan opposite Jericho. Here another line of telephone and telegraph communications, had shortened very-considerably scattered their infantry units. Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Wager of Camaiconce spent the week-end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Wager, Gerald and Jack their two sons, who have been visiting in Tweed for some time, returned home with them.

Mr. Harvey Ketcheson of London, England, is spending some time the guest of his brother, Mr. W. L. Ketcheson and other relatives. Mr. Ketcheson, who is of London, England, who accompanied the returned to England, sailed from Montreal on Saturday.

Tweed Fire Department now has an up-to-date motor truck, fully equipped to carry five hose, ladders and fire fighters. The local council purchased a second-hand truck at a reasonable figure and converted it into a piece of fire-fighting equipment which will make it possible for the local brigade to reach the scene of a fire in a few minutes. Formerly the hose reels have been hauled to the scene by willing hands either with considerable difficulty. The work of remodelling was done by Mr. Geo. Bradshaw. The truck is painted bright red with aluminum trim. The local council is to be commended for their action.

At the regular session of the Police Court held in Tweed on Friday, several cases were tried before Magistrate Lloyd of North brook. Albert Matthews, 22 of Brantford, was charged with theft before Magistrate Lloyd of North-brook on Thursday morning. It appears that he left school at the wheat and the road that he was injuring his mother and sister as well as himself. He pleaded guilty to the charge and the court imposed a minimum fine of ten dollars and costs and had the driver's license suspended for four months.

The second case was that of Richard Sawyer of Bolsover who was charged with assaulting his wife occasioning actual bodily harm. He pleaded guilty to the charge and on payment of the costs of the court was given one year's suspended sentence. Magistrate Lloyd severely reprimanded the accused for his behaviour. Mr. H. J. Carty of Sulphide, superintendent of Hinde Chemical Company Plant years character evidence on behalf of the accused who was represented by J. D. Corcoran. Crown Attorney Duncan K. C. of Belleville represented the Crown.

A. B. Stewart of Actinolite and Morton T. Graham of Trenton were charged with speeding on highway No. 37, about 1 1-2 miles south of Tweed. The charge was the aftermath of a fatal accident which occurred at the time, the parties coming to an agreement before the court assembled. The accused were assessed the costs of $4.00 each.

A. C. Leeves, Toronto paid the minimum fine for an offence against the Highway Traffic Act as did Victor Reuben of Windsor.

The charges against Alfred Wellman of Madoc for operating a motor car without a driver's license was dismissed on instructions of the Crown Attorney as Wellman produced the necessary driver's license when he appeared in court. Several other minor offences against the Highway Traffic Act came up and were settled on pleas of guilty. The minimum fine was paid in each case.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Locke of New York held a tennis clinic last week and performed the various operations for the removal of tonsils. All his patients are making favorable recoveries.

Tweed Horseshoe pitchers went down to ignominious defeat at the hands of their Stirling rivals at the latter place on Thursday night.

Mrs. and Mrs. Drinkwater spent the week end at Sam Lake's friends.

Miss Vera Drinkwater, who had spent the week...there returned home with them.

Some slight frosts are reported in certain districts around Tweed on Friday night but no damage of any account resulted.

A case of reckless driving against Thane Glenn of Toronto was enlarged until Sept. 3rd, when the guest of his counsel, Mr. John Thomson of Toronto, when it came before Magistrate Lloyd at the regular session of Police court held in Tweed on Friday.

Provincial Legislator on Highway No. 7 near Actinolite is rapidly becoming known among other things as a first-aid station. A number of motorists who during the past summer have been injured while motoring near this point have been brought to the Log Cabin where they have received very kind attention at the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy. The latest party to be given attention was composed of Mrs. Lillian Mathews of Brantford her son Albert, and daughter Muriel, all of whom were cut by broken glass when their motor car left the highway at 3.30 on Thursday morning. They remained at the Log Cabin until Saturday afternoon, when they were able to proceed to Ottawa.

Miss Lois Joan Richardson while holidaying at Greenhurst near Lindsay narrowly escaped serious injury in a motor mishap a few days ago. Accompanied by two other young ladies they were motoring to Peterboro when they were struck by a truck and trailer owned which had broken loose from a motor transport. The accident occurred on a 90° curve and the trailer breaking loose just at the moment Miss Richardson's car had passed the transport and narrowly missing it, struck the motor car causing considerable damage. Fortunately the young ladies were not injured beyond a severe shaking up and serious shock to their nerves. Miss Richardson motored to Tweed and assumed full responsibility for the accident.

Conrad Fridlisen who was fatally injured at Gordon Mines on Monday was known locally where he was employed by the Campbell Construction Company while they were engaged in building a section of Highway No. 7 near Actinolite. Mr. and Mrs. Fridlisen motored to Moffat, a son, Sunday, August 25th.

Tweed seems to be in the direct line for airway traffic to judge by the number of aeroplanes that have passed over during the past few days going in both easterly and westerly directions. On Saturday the drone of aeroplane motors was heard at several different times during the day.

LIFE STORY of WILL ROGERS

By Scott Cunningham

Third Installment!

Will Goes to Another School

Will Rogers may not have remembered much in his life learned from books at Drumgoul school, near Chelsea, Indian Territory, but he began his real education at the age of eight, but he learned from his full-blooded Cherokee schoolmates a sure cure for hiccoughs. It was to swallow the oil of cloves.

He developed an appetite for the delicacies served at Harrell institute for Girls at Muskogee, Indian Territory, the school was headed by the Rev. T. F. Brewer, who had a son Will's age. Glad he was going to get out of going to school, he was mistaken. He was soon placed in the Brookes seminary at Chelsea, Okla. He was a reputation there for being a great singer, a clog dancer, and always a cut-up.

Coddled Sim Rogers, at Rab's Creek, saw Will when in Tahlequah on a trip for freight, and reported to the boy's mother about him. "Tas'in, he sat up on a box and read 'Tas. Ever time I seen him he was goin' about quiet-like. I never seen him in no devilry."

This news pleased Mary Schoyer Rogers very much, for enough for her boy would be a Methodist preacher, and he was growing studious he might yet become one. Will was not quite young enough to attend, she was still religious in thought and deed. Not a Christian herself but she gave generously to the poor. If neighbors were ill, Mrs. Rogers was always the first to get in a buggy and go to see them.

It will be easy, then, to understand how concerned were all who knew Mary Schoyer Rogers when she fell ill.

The family physician, Dr. Lane, was in Vinita and could not be reached, so a good country physician. He diagnosed the case as dysentery, and went to work to lower the fever. She failed. Her pain became so great that only morphine would ease it.

It was more than a week before the favored Dr. Lane arrived. "It's no use, lads, doctor," the stricken woman told him.

"No," objected the other; "you'll get all right."

It was the evening of the twenty-seventh. The next morning the mother of Will Rogers was dead.

(WEDNESDAY: Will welcomes Dr. Wodgis.)

Weddings

BONISTEEL—GAY

On Saturday, August 24th, Rev. J. D. Turner of 39 Bridge Street West, City of Belleville, united in marriage Mr. Harder Eric Bonisteel of the 4th Concession of Sidney and Miss Helen Cordelia Gay, daughter, Mrs. Dafoe of Frankford and the late Mr. Herbert Gay of Sidney.

The young couple were attended by Mr. Harold Shower and Miss Annie Keller of Belleville. After a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Bonisteel will take up residence on their farm in Sidney.

Still the Star in the fashion firmament is satin—especially white satin—when it comes to gala evenings. A charming frock of white satin has its high-waisted skirt entirely pleated; its matching bolero cape is entirely pleated except for a brief round shoulderd yoke. A good in-between seasons dress.

It doesn't matter if the ostrich feather we'll use his fashions just the same. A cute little low-brimmed hat with a forward rising brim uses a tuft of naked ostrich flaring out over the right eye.

Coe Hill Defeats Marmora In Third Game of Playoffs

Marmora—Still smarting from a 12-5 defeat handed them by Coe Hill on Wednesday, the "Marmora and Deloro Combines" again bowed their heads to Ormsby, High School notorious gang from Coe Hill. This makes the second win in succession for the northerners and unless Marmora-sit up and pay attention they may find that glowing up for this year. Cliff Robertson opened the game for Marmore on the mound. Although this was his initial appearance as a pitcher, he showed great form for the first five innings against the heavy, hitting crew from the north.

The Marmora infield certainly showed lack of practice in these innings and was responsible for all of the 5 runs scored while Robertson was on the mound. Robertson had 3 strike-outs while Hewitt who replaced him in the sixth, had 7. Warwick, Coe Hill's veteran catcher-all right through the whole nine innings, but allowing 6 hits and gathering in 6 strike-outs.

First Innings

In the first innings with Coe Hill at bat, Reid grounded to third. Watt was thrown out at first. H. Giles bunted for a safety and stole second. Dory grounded to the pitcher, retiring the side. Robertson (Marmora) singled and was forced out at second by Phillips. Hewitt safe on pitcher's error. Phillips caught out at second. Boudreau doubled, scoring Robertson. Hewitt safe at first on pitcher's error. Stewart filed to right field.

Second Innings

Harry Watson struck out. Rollins was singled, Murfitt sighed and stole second on shortstop's error. Harold Watson grounded to shortstop. Murfitt stole third. McTavish safe at first on error by Hewitt. Reid filed to third. Callery grounded to Pitcher; Brown and Brady thrown out at first.

Third Innings

Watt (with Martin as runner) struck out. H. Giles struck out. Watt stole 2nd. Dory doubled. Martin being tagged at the plate. Harry Watson struck out. Robertson and Phillips grounded to third. Hewitt struck out.

Fourth Innings

Rollins struck out. Murfitt singled Harold Watson safe on error by Hewitt. McTavish singled (forcing Watson at second. Murfitt scoring on wild throw to home. McTavish stealing third. Reid grounded to shortstop. In Marmora's half Boudreau walked and was forced at second by Campion. Stewart struck out. Callery hit into a double at shortstop.

Fifth Innings

Watt to first on a hit ball. H. Giles walked. Both advanced on Dory struck out. Harry Watson singled, scoring Watt. H. Giles out at home. Dory stole third. Harry Watson stole second. Rollins walked. Murfitt struck out. Harry Watson scored at third by Harold Watson. Brown grounded to pitcher. Brady and Robertson thrown out at first.

Sixth Innings

Hewitt in box replacing Robertson. McTavish singled. Reid struck out. McTavish tagged at second. Watt struck out. Phillips out to Hewitt struck out Boudreau, thrown out at first.

Seventh Innings

H. Giles struck out. Dory struck out. Watson filed to right field. Campion struck out. Stewart doubled to centre field and stole third. Callery walked and stole second. Stewart scored on Brown's sacrifice. Callery out stealing home.

Eighth Innings

Rollins struck out. Murfitt singled, Harold Watson doubled. McTavish singled, scoring Murfitt tagged at plate. Reid safe at first. Watt doubled, scoring Harold Watson. McTavish and Reid also struck home. McCrodan grounded to second. Robertson singled. Phillips walked. Hewitt doubled, scoring Robertson. Boudreau and Campion struck out.

Ninth Innings

Dory grounded to third. Harry Watson singled and stole second. Rollins struck out. Murfitt singled scoring Harry Watson. Harold Watson struck out at first. Stewart singled, Callery filed to centre field. Brown fled to second. Stewart stole second and reached third on a wild throw. McCrodan struck out ending the game.

The line-ups:

Coe Hill—Watt, c; McTavish, p; Harold Watson, 1b; Dory, 2b; Reid 3b; Harry Watson, ss; H. Giles, rf; Rollins, cf; Harold Watson, lf.

Marmora—Boudreau, c; Robertson (Hewitt), p; Brady (McDonald) 1b; Brown, 2b; Hewitt (Robertson); Stewart, ss; Campion, rf; Callery, cf; F. F. Phillips, lf.

Crystal Shower For Bride-to-be

Mrs. Clayton Eggleton and Miss Anne Brown were hostesses at a miscellaneous crystal shower at the former's home in honor of Miss Martha Benedict, bride-to-be.

The gifts were all in a most unique way. The bride-to-be was presented with a Bridal Bouquet from which hung showers of ribbon with verses telling the bridelect where the gifts were to be found around the room.

The house was a profusion of flowers, the color scheme being carried out in pink and white.

The tea table was most attractive with its centre of pink and white sweet peas and lighted tapers. Miss Viola Handley and Mrs. R. W. Brown poured tea, while the Misses Eva Casey, Reta Clarke and Shirley Phillips assisted in serving.

Mailed Fist Substituted For Kid Glove as Giants Try to Recover Lost Ground

Jobs Depend on Calibre of Ball Played Till Season's End

NO CHANGES

Both Yankees And Tigers Split Double Headers

By ANDY CLARKE

(Associated From Sports Writer)

The mailed fist had been substituted for the kid glove in the Giants' camp today.

Bill Terry sat down to consider the situation after the Cards had wrested the lead from the New Yorkers. He remembered his own prophecies of May, that the Giants would wind up about 30 games ahead of the second place club, and he began to wonder.* If the turbulence of the St. Louis beat boys hadn't something to do with their baseball success; if the honey and roses atmosphere he tried to maintain his own dugout wasn't conducive to defeat.

And in resolution he strode into the clubhouse to lay down the law.

"If I'm going to lose I'm going to lose with nine men as well as 22. From now on the team isn't the pennant. It's your jobs. If you play winning ball, the pennant will take care of itself. If you don't, not many of you will be here for another chance next year."

Glenn Drew Another

The boys apparently understood but they went out yesterday and dropped another to Pittsburgh Pirates 10-3. Manager Pie Traynor led a 15-hit attack on four pitchers, collecting a homer with the bases loaded to send the Bucs away in the initial frame and then added four singles. He drove in six runs while Tom Padden and Forest Jensen accounted for one each with circuit drives.

It was the Giants' opportunity to slip back into the favored niche too, for the Cards were defeated at Philadelphia 6-3. Orville Jorgens who was knocked out of the box by Cincinnati the Sunday came back to hold the Cards to nine scattered hits but Bill Walker, on the mound for the champs, found the road rocky and after the Phillies had gathered nine hits in six innings he gave way to Jesse Haines who held the St. Louis thumpers at bay for the remaining two innings.

The Reds defeated Brooklyn Dodgers 3-2 in the first of a four-game series. Babe Herman's ninth inning homer provided the winning margin.

LAWN
BOWLERS
by McElheran & Watkis

In a game of doubles between Bob Wray, Bob Dwyer and Mr. Mitchell and Walter Belair-the Wray rink won by 3 shots.

In the married couples' doubles John Houston won from John Shaw and H. McElheran won from H. Thompson.

In a game doubles on Saturday afternoon C. Sulman and Geo. Watkin won from Herb. Holland and Herb. Middleton by a score of 25-18.

The Ladies will not hold their regular game on Thursday on account of the Jitney at night.

We would ask all members to kindly remember that the Club House for the four days of the Fair is entirely at the disposal of the Fair Board with the exception of Thursday night.

Kingston hold their annual ladies' tournament on Friday so will be unable to bring many ladies on Thursday. We hope Belleville will be represented there on that day.

Brighton are sending down some bowlers for Thursday night.

Mr. Allen of Ferry Sound paid us a visit on Saturday afternoon.

We would advise all players to give their names to us soon as possible for Thursday night's game. Phone the Club House or Geo. Watkin. Thursday night rink games, 7.45 sharp; three 3-end games. Lunch will be served.

Only about fifteen teams have paired for Labour Day we should have at least twenty-five. Get busy please.

On Friday night about thirty of our members journeyed to Stirling to take part in a tournament. Two were successful — Messrs. Sleeth, Shaw and Bob Dewar. A real good time was had by all.

Stirling held their annual mixed rink tournament on Wednesday. We should send at least two rinks.

If any of our members want extra bowlers for Labour Day get in touch with your President right away.

Our first annual banquet will be held early in October. It is our intention to put on a programme with our own members. If we have four men who could form a quartette get to work with Herb Newton. Newt will be the chairman of the Programme Committee.

How about forming a league on the Alleys this winter. We have some noted bowlers in our club now.

We notice Walter Belair going around with his arm in a sling. Seems one said he injured it trying to pull down the price of coal. However we hope it will soon be O.K. It is hard to get around the golf course that way.

Ted Jones from Kingston won three straight games in Toronto last week playing singles. Ted got back in good form and was glad to show them how to roll them.

Our ex-President will be down on Labour Day too with a partner from Toronto. He will need watching no doubt. We will all be glad to see him in any case.

LEAGUE TITLE WON BY LATTA OVER FOXBORO

Score 7-1 With Whmers Being Best Team on Day's Play

TIMELY HITTING

Vance Pitches Masterful Ball After The First Frame

New champions were crowned in the South Hastings baseball league yesterday when Latta defeated the Foxboro entry in the final game of the league finals by the score of 7 to 1 at Foxboro. Defeat in the rather one-sided aggregance of the score the game was a torrid pitchers' battle between "Steamer" Vance, ace fireball hurler of the victorious Latta team, and Ken Ashley, labouring on the hillstop for the homesters, with the visiting hurler receiving slightly better support both offensively and defensively throughout.

With the two squads at a deadlock, each having won two games and tied a fifth, they entered in upon the decisive battle of the season, to decide the league championship at Foxboro before a capacity crowd yesterday afternoon. The homesters garnered in their lone counter in the initial frame when errors entered materially into the scoring, but from that point forward "Steamy" Vance, Latta's chunky right-hander, assumed control of the situation and blanked the home team for the remaining eight frames. After collecting three safe blows in the initial frame the Foxboro nine were held scoreless and garnered but four hits, all, to the time hitting the deliveries of the diminutive Vance for extra base blows. Ken Ashley, labouring on the hilltop for the home team, received a better fate than he was forced to accept, but failure to solve the pitcheries of Vance's deliveries left Ashley holding the bag as he issued seven Latta batters, scored his team's only run and made a hit.

Timely Hit by Gowe

After the home team had scored a run on three hits, coupled with a brace of errors in the initial frame, they never threatened again. Latta was retired practically in order until the fourth, when Gowe stepped to the plate and delivered the million dollar hit, that broke a perfectly good ball game and assured the victors of victory. Three, with two out and the bases well populated, stepped into one of Ashley's slants for a triple, scoring three, subsequently crossing the plate on Hall's pop fly. Vance, the last man in command of the situation the Latta nine added insult to injury, when they bagged three in the ninth, two crossing the plate on Marsh's timely double.

To the victors belong the spoils and the Latta team not only won the championship of the South Hastings League, the Tunmon trophy but also ended the reign of the ex-champions, the Foxboro nine, who had won the league for two consecutive years previous. In victory the entire Latta line played errorless ball and well deserved the honors which today they enjoy.

Vance, the victorious pitcher, pitched a masterful game, his control being perfect and to him goes the lion's share of the day's honors. Young held down the initial sack like a veteran, while Marsh handled six chances in big league order, accepting his pick-up in the eighth of Ketcheson's hard drive and then his running catch of Seeley's Texas league in the fifth also materially assisted the winning cause. To Art Hall, veteran member and third baseman of the Latta nine went the honors of making the last put-out, when he raced far back into left field to take Longwell's lifter.

There is plenty of joy in Latta! It's the home team won."

So far as their league positions were concerned, Chicago took the first game 9-3 but the McCarthymen came back to cop the nightcap 14-5. The first game saw Lon Warneke with Zeke Bonura stealing home with the run, that won a hectic game. Lon Gehrig hit two for the circuit in the first game to run his season total up to 36. Dahlgren halled the second game after seven innings had been played.

Philadelphia Athletics broke even with the league-leading Detroit Tigers, the champions taking the first game 13-7 and Philadelphia taking the second 2-1. Tommy Bridges, leading Detroit moundsman, allowed but four hits in the second game but errors by Owen and Rogell in the ninth let in two Philadelphia runs after Bridges had had his 26th homer of the season with the seventh inning. Pearl had clouted his 27th in the opening stanza of the first game.

It was Hal Trosky's 32nd home run 17th cabled Cleveland Indians to defeat the Red Sox 4-3.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Louis Bennett, Eastern Ontario's veteran horseman arrived in Belleville yesterday with three crack harness horses and ready for action during the race meet at the Belleville Fair. Louis arrived in town with Tramp Abbe, Ottawa Grattan, and Fellow. Louis informed that Ottawa was going to be tough, especially in the fastest heats at the Fair. Tomorrow the special three year old colt race will be one of the features while the 2.30 class has already been filled. The track is as smooth as a billiard ball and as soft as goose down, attendants having been employed grooming the track for the past four weeks or more. Local horses have been working out with regularity with Billie Smith, Belleville's veteran driver, still in the harness and proud owner of a three year bear old, from which he expects much this fall.

President Charlie Meagher of the Quinte-Ontario-Warner combination that the semi-finals of the O.B.L. between Peterboro and Belleville, will commence on the Civic Holiday City on Saturday next. This decision was arrived at following a meeting between the executive of the Rodeo and Secretary Newt. Thomas of the league. This conclave was in communication with President Swanson and requested the latter to play the return game here on Labor Day morning. Satisfactory arrangements by the locals desired to have the second game played in Belleville on Wednesday, Sept. 4th. Doubtlessly the Pets will accept the latter date, as the Bobby Gears was to have been played in the morning, making it necessary for them to arise at 5.30 a.m. Resident Swanson, at the request of both clubs, named Messrs. Woodley of Peterboro and Woodley of Belleville as the two official arbiters for the semi-finals.

Bill Little, the professional at the Bay of Quinte Golf Club, slipt an 80 during qualifying professional golf tournament at Montreal Bill will again tee off today for his second round.

With a runner on first base, batter hits a home run. After both runners have tallied the batter is thrown to second base and the first runner is declared out for not touching the bag. Does second run count or must runner return to first base? N.K. asks.

Second run counts, as failure of preceding runner to touch a base does not affect the status of a scoring runner, unless two were already out.

Congratulations are today due the Latta team of the South Hastings League. Not only did they win the championship pennant of the loop, but they ended the lengthened reign of the Foxboro club, who had won the league honors for two consecutive years and advanced to the finals this year. Although the Latta baseball nine six games to win the league championship, were down in front at Foxboro yesterday in a clean-cut and championship manner. All of the countryside for miles around turned out and after the game both victors and vanquished were entertained by the patrons for the sportsman-like manner in which both victor and defeat were accepted. Before we would like to say a word in relationship to the two pitchers of yesterday's game, Stewart Vance of Latta and Ken Ashley of Foxboro, both hurlers gave all in their Foxboro yesterday in a clean-cut and championship manner. All of the countryside for miles around turned out and after the game both victors and vanquished were entertained by the patrons for the sportsman-like manner in which both victor and defeat were accepted. Before we would like to say a word in relationship to the two pitchers of yesterday's game, Stewart Vance of Latta and Ken Ashley of Foxboro, both hurlers gave all in their Vance just seemed to carry, that little extra reserve strength, that was needed in the dying frames. Vance pitched masterful ball from the start and should have been afforded a shut-out, errors materially entering into the scoring of the initial frame. Gowe's three base hit in the fourth forced the side of battle and from then forward it was all Latta and Vance. The Foxboro nine were to be congratulated for their play-off in the South Hastings League series and for their sportsmanship, but to the victors go the spoils and today all say congratulations Latta champs.

Belleville's intermediate O. R. F. U. entry this fall will be the best dressed and best equipped squad in the Lake Shore loop if nothing else. Skipper Bill Fry has been negotiating with Lionel Conacher in regard to the purchase of the Arrow-minis' football equipment and on Saturday closed the deal for the entire Arrowmini paraphernalia, lock, stock and barrel. The deal was completed Toronto's professional football entry has purchased the latter's complete rugby equipment. Skipper Fry yesterday received a consignment of playing equipment from Lionel Conacher, which included 40 pairs of silken rugby pants, 40 pairs of shoulder pads, shin guards, 21 scarlet jackets, pigskin helmets, shoes to supply the players needing football shoes and other sundries too numerous to mention. Incidentally a number of influential citizens have given C. R. F. U. football their moral and financial backing and providing the playing material that is placed at the disposal of Coach Dr. "Kewpie" Kennedy, ex-Western University luminary who is as good as their outfits, well, rugby football is in for an elevation in league leading Montreal Royals.

Judging on the ground Belleville's way are quite getting baseball conscious. On the street corners, in the restaurants and in the homes they are talking of the Bisons chances of overwhelming the Canadian championship home a winner.

Last night 13,000 fans packed the ex to see the Bisons decisively outpoint the Royals 8-1 to open their crucial series. It left the Bisons just 1 1-2 games behind Montreal and they are confident that when the series is over there will be a new club in the driver's seat. It was the third successive victory for the Herd and the 15th win in the last 18 starts.

In the fifth inning three Bisons—Olson, Carnegie and Fitzgerald hit home runs off Ray Crite, sewing up the game then and there. It was Carnegie's 35th of the season and one of his longest. Bob Elmer in winning his 16th game of the season held the Royals to four hits, two of them of the scratch variety.

Rochester Red Wings got into the win column in the only other game on yesterday's schedule, another night affair.

The Wings rode behind the pitching of Bob Weiland to a 5-1 victory over Toronto Leafs. Rochester scored all its five runs in the first inning against the offerings of Jimmy Ripple. The Leafs scored their lone run in this inning also.

Weiland allowed 7 hits but he pitched tight ball in the pinches. He fanned 11 batters.

After weeks of ballyhoo in which nasty remarks were passed back and forth, George Young, erstwhile champion marathon swimmer, and Marvin Nelson, formerly of Fort Dodge, Iowa and now of Toronto, Canada champion, have agreed to meet each other in a five-mile race, starting at 5.00 p.m. All are welcome.

Local softball fans picked up their ears today, when they learned the Bisons had stepped right into Kingston and downed the Army baby nine, champions of Kingston and District, to the tune of 20 to 11. The local nine in the Limestone City materially elevates the calibre of softball played locally and gives the Bisons a well deserved win over the Limestone City nine, as the second game of the O.A.A.A. play-downs is slated for Central Park on Thursday night. Incidentally the Army nine miss the services of their regular catcher, Andy Grey, who is at present in the local hospital suffering from an infection, that developed into blood poisoning. Andy cut his hand during the Woolen-Belleville series and the infection spread. "Kewpie" Kennedy has rushed into the breach and not only brought a beautiful game to the mound, but came through at bat. Eye witnesses inform us that spectators are entertained to a real night's game in Kingston, the Aajmaas playing a stellar game defensively behind Bawden's hurling.

The usual weekly punt races off Victoria Park will be held on Wednesday afternoon under the auspices of the Belleville Yachting and Athletic Club, with their annual aquatic and athletic meet for Labor Day is attracting more than the usual quantum of attention among local sportsmen. Incidentally there are to be two more challenge races with Maurice Callaghan's After U challenging Duke Smith's Joke and Ed Rousseau's Dorothy sending in a challenge to Ed. Kellaway's Let's Go Rob. All these races should be thrillers, local pastimes say.

AAJMAAS WIN FIRST TUSSLE

Defeat Arrow Delivery in Play-off Series 20 to 11

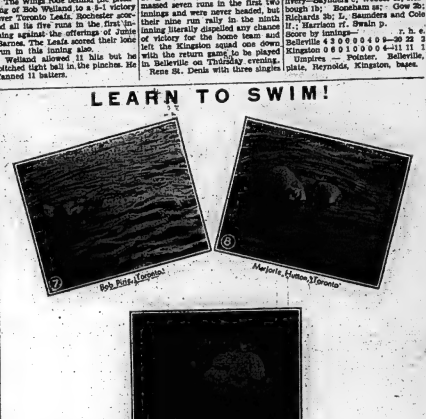
Applying the hickory with a vengeance the Belleville Aajmaas defeated the Arrow Delivery Softball team, champions of Kingston City, in the first game of the second round O.A.A.A. by the score of 20 to 11 at Kingston last evening. The Bowler-leaf purple clad crew from Belleville collected a total of 22 base hits, the majority of which were of the extra base nature, every member of the locals collecting at least two safe blows to his credit.

While the Aajmaas were making merry at the bat Johnnie Bawden was pitching 11 hit ball to coop down in front. The Aajmaas summassed seven runs in the first two innings and never headed, but their nine run rally in the ninth inning literally dispelled any chance of victory for the home team and left the Kingston squad on down the return game to be played in Belleville on Thursday evening.



Reno St. Denis with three singles and a triple to his credit led the hitters of the day, while to Carman Cook, local sportsman, went the long distance hitting honors as he cuffed the spherical for a home run and a triple. Ken Sinnie, Bonny Tuttle hit two doubles and a single as the Aajmaas went on their season's greatest batting rampage, every Belleville batter clamouring for at least one extra base hit and not less than two safe blows during the batting orgy. Webber with a home run and a double led the homesters with the willow, while pitcher Swain added to his prowess with two safe blows.

LEARN TO SWIM!

Elementary Crawl Stroke - - - Continued

SPECIAL NOTE:—Always learn to swim in shallow water.

LESSON I

Arms and Legs Combined

Start combination of arms and legs from floating position, Figure 2. Thrash legs up and down and add arm action. Roll legs up and down and left side to clear enough of both right and left side to clear arms during recovery. Figure 7. During pull, keep arms fairly straight, also upon recovery. Pull steady under water towards centre line of body.

LESSON II

Breathing

This important step may be practiced at the beginning of the lesson, before floating, although you will find it best to add arms and legs are fairly well mastered. Stand in water waist deep. Assume position, Figure 8, left turn of head. Fill lungs with air through the mouth. Immediately turn face into water and exhale through nose, or blow bubbles. See Figure 9. A little practice is all that is necessary to acquire this exercise. Exhale three or four times slower than the inhale.

Always breath in through mouth, exhale through nose.

LESSON III.

Combining Breathing With Complete Strokes

Follow instructions per Lesson 4. As left arm is finishing pull, per Figure 10, turn head to left, inhale, and as left arm starts forward turn face into water. Then exhale, Figure 11. Repeat when left arm again finishes pull. (Reserve position of arms if you wish to breath on the right side.) It will be wise to go over the lessons very carefully, and with practice you should be able to master the elementary Crawl Stroke.

LEARN LIFE-SAVING!

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"And I'll help you," he said. "Don't blame me if when I've finished, you don't like it. Question who fired that shot. And what cause of it? Now you can stop me as one of help. You'd do just as well as one of my flatties. Step along here."

He led her a little way down the slope, and stopped her with her back towards the shed.

"Stand there, if you don't mind. We of the police, when we're making a wide search, are a bit apt to overlook the truth, that's under our noses. That's our danger . . . Stand still, and keep your eye on mine."

He backed a few yards away from her, while he faced towards the shed.

"Bit more to the right, please. Now back a little. That's it . . . Fine! You don't see what I'm getting?"

Sonia felt a swift tingle of excitement.

"Of course! Simple matter of direction. You're getting the location and stance of the man who fired that shot. I must be just about where the man stood who was shot at, assuming he stood upright. If you fired from where you are, the shot would hit that shed exactly where it did hit—if you aimed a bit high and missed me, of course."

"Or even if I didn't miss you," said Howe. "These guns have a lot of penetration of point-blank range." His eyes had the cold calculation of the professional; he was concentrating solely on his job, Sonia, for the nothing mattered more to him than a dummy figure. "That 45 would drill through both the arm, if your arm was raised, or even through the skull, and have force enough left to make a fair blanking of the shed, though it'd be deflected a little by the impact. I mean it would hit the shed a trifle wide of you. Stop a moment . . ."

He picked up a stick, about 15 inches long, stuck one into the ground between his feet, and stepped forward inserting the other close to Sonia's.

"That'll do. On the night of Bannister Coote's death, two men stood here where you now are. Neither of them was Coote, for when they met Coote was lying dead across the metals three hundred yards away.

"It was after Coote's death, these two men met. I'll leave their names out. The meeting was a big surprise to one of them—the one who was shot at. One shot hit the other A; the man with the gun—What happened?

"There are three answers. Either it was missed—which would be pretty bad shooting—or passed by the dark. Or he was wounded. Or he was killed. If he was killed, he dropped just where you're standing." Howe glanced at Sonia's face. "This is rather a shock to you to be over a lady."

"I wish you wouldn't keep apologising!" said Sonia. "I'm here to be made use of. Please get on with it. If he was killed—"

"Just so. Where is his body? Not even a trace of him. Howe stooped short. "One slip I've made. I said 'man,' but that's unnecessary. There was no meeting. Let's be accurate. Turn round, will you, Miss Nell? I like that door back to me. That's how it was. That shot was fired at him from behind. Do you follow? Do you see why that was so?"

"I expect you're right."

"I am right. Now, if he was killed, there's nothing left but to find his body; and of course it couldn't be far of. That's altogether unlikely! But say he was stunned or wounded only, not disabled. What would he do? Warn and go for the man who shot him? Not he! He'd run for it—run off into the darkness like blazes! I think that's what he did. That's as far as we get. Final question, who fired that shot? Not Barber, because of the third man? The third factor—Unknown, whom we haven't noticed yet!"

He slipped the bullet into his pocket.

"Safety! By the living Christmas! I were sure of that I'd have the Bannister Coote case taped and tied up by dry."

He reflected a few moments rapidly and his face cleared. He turned to Sonia, and his smile was a compliment—or a challenge.

"What do you make if it, Miss Nell? We've done quite a bit of work together, and we're getting there— you and I."

Sonia's eyes were sparkling. He waited, but she shook her head.

"I leave it to you, partner," she said. "How's the case for? You don't really want my opinion. I've finished here. I'll be glad to get away. Do you want me any more?"

"Not just now."

"I'm going up to the house." She glanced at her wristwatch. "Mr. Chalmers will be there by now, and I mustn't miss him."

Howe frowned.

"King's Elm House! I'll be along myself later. I've an idea there may be some funny doings up there to-day. If Mr Chalmers hasn't arrived, you keep out. Don't go into that house alone."

Sonia laughed.

"Is that meant to frighten me? I'm too interested to be scared. The house is big enough to me."

Howe watched her go with reluctant admiration.

"No," he said to himself. "You're not easily scared. But you're a lot to lose, a damned ugly business, but the light's showing through. There's only one thing left that beats me—WHERE'S Selby?"

Sonia got down on to the line and took the short cut back. Not the way she had come, but along the railway embankment, to the place where, on the night when Bannister met his death, she had crouched by the ditch, holding Brian in her arms.

She paused only a moment here, to make sure of the position, and glanced at the sloped face of the cutting. He had fallen, he said—climbing down in a hurry, in the dark. It seemed a fairly easy descent. . . . A pity he had not come through the mine gully, or also a few hundred yards farther, along where there was no difficulty at all. It looked as if he had been in such furious haste that every moment counted.

Here that dim figure had passed in the gloom—the Unknown. Selby? Until she knew for sure, Brian's fate hung in the balance. Could not the police produce Selby—alive or dead?

She went straight up the hill to the park wall. The small iron gate stood open invitingly. All entrances ought surely to have been closed at a time like this. . . . But to make things easier for her; she was able to walk straight across the park and approach King's Elm House from the back.

The great building, standing on a height, watching over broad acres in the full daylight, looked far more than ever Centuries old, massive and dignified, a stronghold in resistance. . . . The men—as since vanished there was wealth and power. Yet there was something sinister about it now; it was a place of abandonment.

Reaching the front entrance, Sonia rang the bell to ring. . . . Sonia opened the doors and headed in. King's Elm House was Brian's and What was Brian's was hers. Up the staircase to the library door.

It was not finished that had her. Even from the hall below, she heard voices. A man's voice, a woman's voice, fierce and throbbing; the last that answered it was Brian's.

"I think I said both to myself, "that this is where Brian needs his partner!"

She pushed the door open and walked in.

Brian came to life in the great room—however had Brian felt? Terrified aghast to find it was eleven-thirty in the forenoon. He had nearly slept the clock round. His bewilder call to find on the carpet a note that had been slipped under the door.

"Darling.

"I've given orders you're not to be waked. . . . After yesterday you need a month's sleep if you can get it. I'm off on my own on the interests of the firm. See you at the House later.

"Sonia".

Despite his belief in Sonia, he had a qualm of uneasiness. . . . What was she doing? She ought not to be starting alone, in a deadly business like this.

He had a date at King's Elm House at twelve which could not be missed. He rang and ordered breakfast—a famished man, once his face a murder case empty—bathed and dressed in record time, descending to find the morning paper by his plate. The head-lines were a shock. He had not, in his fatigue, heard the news would be broadcaster so soon.

DIAMOND MAGNATE MURDERED

Tragedy of A Railway Cutting. Search for "Sam the Sailor"

The account brought relief. There was a full account of the finding of the body, and suggestions of the manner of how the victim had been flung on to the track. The line was only centering on Sam (the Barber—alias Sam Riordan, also) Brought to convict. The disappearance of Selby, unlike to the dead man, was mentioned but got little prominence. There was a good deal about Bannister Coote and his wealth, but scarcely a word more of Brian himself, and of Sonia none at all.

Far from reassuring Brian, that dispirited him. He was devoutly thankful Sonia was left out, but the fact that he was omitted showed that there was something behind it —police direction. It was intended to lull him to a sense of security.

Sergeant Howe and his superiors had inspired this news; they were keeping back the other factors of the case till they were ready. And it was cleverly done. Howe had abandoned his insistence on complete secrecy. Brian guessed that the editor of the local newspaper in Northeater had first got on to the case; and shared it with the big provincial daily he was now reading . . . likely only a breath of the scoop had reached other great London papers—when it did there would be a rush. The police were working the press, and they'd do it their own way.

Brian scanned the account between mouthfuls of ham; it seemed strange he should be reading this at breakfast while Bannister lay dead. Ten minutes later he was in the car, speeding for King's Elm House. He was fighting for himself and for Sonia, and he had immediate work on hand. He arrived at the iron gates; his own now—all this was his. But, or how long? The obsequious lodge-keeper opened them.

"Lesve these gates wide today," said Brian, "don't delay anybody who wants to come through . . . ot that!"

The young footman, Jacob Grant, unlocked and opened the doors for him directly he rang.

"Grant," said Brian, "I'm expecting a visitor—Jame Lakin, to be shown to the library immediately. And any one else who calls, bring me their cards . . . first. Except journalists. You're a bright lad—know a pressman when you see one?"

"Certainly, sir. I hope you'll be keeping me on," said the young man.

—MUSSOLINI, MODERN CAESAR—
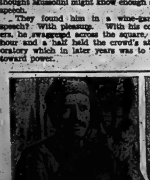
MUSSOLINI IN ELEVEN PRISONS, OFTEN A BEGGAR, IN LONG SEARCH FOR POLITICAL FAVOR

First Found Means of Power in Fiery Writings for Socialist Newspaper

In this, the second of 13 articles, a distinguished writer of foreign affairs continues the life story of Benito Mussolini whose career is brought to sharp relief by the Ninth African adventure which may prove to be the zenith of his career. The nation's hero-in the days of the World War-Mussolini has, at the height of Mussolini and his association have been established freely. The story set down and followed by few Fascists either per-or can but to set forth the facts of the blacksmith's son who has become Italy's modern Caesar.

By J. G. OBSTFELDER



Written for, and Copyright by The Daily Ontario Intelligencer and Central Press Canadian.

Benito Mussolini was 19 years old when he tasted first the bitter fruit of political defeat. He was rejected in Predappio for the post of Communal Scribener, and decided that the time had come to leave his father's hearth for larger and fairer fields.

A recently-acquired diploma won him a teachership at Gualtiere in the district of Reggio Emilia. With the excellence of youth and good health, his belief stay here was a joyous one—with card-playing, wine-drinking and dancing with the pretty girls of the town providing nocturnal interludes from the drudgery of daytime.

But with his singular flair for political rows, he early entered into an altercation with the mayor. The latter, a bookbinder in the time away from official duties, had made a stumbling address at a local political gathering. Someone called for the black-haired young schoolteacher. The occasion was a tribute to Garibaldi and his sponsor thought Mussolini might know enough about the country's hero to make a speech.

They found him in a wine-garden, dancing and drinking. A speech? With pleasure. With his coat slung over his broad shoulders, he swaggered across the square, mounted the rostrum and for an hour and a half held the crowd's attention by his fiery attack on the corrupt oratory which in later years was to be his chief lance in the struggle toward power.

Benito Mussolini as a young revolutionary Socialist, and as a soldier in Italian army.

But when it was over, the mayor took occasion to publicly reprimand for his undignified behavior in the town. Benito listened, then still drunk with the thrill of power over his audience, he curtly told the mayor to go back to his bookmaking, packed his few belongings and started out again into the world.

This time he headed for Switzerland—then, as now, the haven for political exiles. But, meanwhile, the friendly discussions on the bank in Predappio had burgeoned into full-blooded arguments. Socialists and Liberals had taken to sticks and stones and the police were called in hours to sway the progress of elections.

Had No Money

In almost every great man's life there is a tragic chapter. Mussolini's was written in Lausanne in 1902, when for months there was no money, no work. He was reduced to penury, thus, begrary, to learned the lessons of silence. His in this pocalse of homage—that a single frame given in the pockets is immunity from arrest. Less than this beckons vagrancy. Men have starved to death rather than part with this silver coin which means freedom at last from the bars of a cell.

But there was a day when Benito had not even this franc and wound up in a prison—first of the long series—of short and long jail terms that served on his way to power. Mussolini has written himself that this essential experience in the life of a public man. He was jailed in all 11 prisons all told, and while he fought bitterly against each successive imprisonment, accepted them philosophically when finally he was cast and sentence pronounced.

But from the first hardships of Lausanne Mussolini emerged with the carrier at tiny pay and at length as commissarius for a little grocery entrance which at least ensured him three meals a day and a warm garret. He worked also as errand-boy for a winehop. In his free hours, he studied at Geneva—languages and history for the most part, but he found time also to delve into mysteries of eastern religion. His early incursions into Buddhism were to be his undoing.

In a short time, the circulation of the newspaper swung up from 40,000 to 100,000. Workers all over Italy, engaged in the first struggles of the class war that was to come, continue unabated even during the war and until Mussolini forged the nation into totalitarian Fascism, began to regard him as their spokesman.

The after day, his prolific pen filled the pages of Avanti with Socialistic sermons. He lifted his hand at the the windmill of Freemasonry and won his battle. The Congress of Ancona proclaimed that in the future Socialists must no longer be Freemasons.

This struggle won, he launched full tilt at the ruling classes and the institutions. He was in the bureaucratic monarchial system that was pre-war Italy a hand of death throttling the common people. He rebelled against a system that was a prison of fear, hunger and luxuries for a few and, at length, publicly approved a violent anti-government demonstration at Rossa. Many were killed and wounded—both government troops and the people. The mob had first overpowered the Italian troops, soldiers before they could fire. The Italian battleship, called it a "massacre." Mussolini and his associates on the Avanti hailed it as a signal of the need for social reform. They demanded repetitions—more sacrifice of life if need be to show clearly that rulers that reforms had to be had "Headed Godly."

They were placed on trial at Milan for subversive activities. Mussolini pleaded his own case, demanded acquittal not because he was innocent but because he was guilty.

"I wish to say to you," he roared, "that you ought to acquit us, not because you have not committed the offence, but because we have committed and because we promise to commit it again. Imagine an Italy in which 36 millions of citizens should think in the same way as though their brains were cast in the same shape. Why, you would have a madhouse or rather a realm of utter boredom and impovility. It is necessary that side by side with those who cry 'No! No!' there should be those who cry 'Yes! Yes!'—side by side with those who cry 'Left!' those who cry 'Right!'—side by side with those who acclaim our bourgeois society, those who would like demolish it."

"What we stand in need of are discordant elements of reality. Unanimity, uniformity, spell brain-lessness and death."

Thist was in 1913. To-day, who dares to say "No! No!" to Benito Mussolini? He has a nation of almost 100 per cent unanimity and uniformity. Freedom is not to be a moment tolerated. Freedom of thought and action are banned in his totalitarian state.

Here again is the essence of Mussolini—contradiction. The consistency of detail on one straight, clear path is absent. He allows his one viewpoint—Mussolini's. In externalities, he can say that so far as Italy is concerned, he is always right. He has made it a first-class power and of its people a proud people.

How and why Mussolini's original Socialist reformer broke away from him is told in the fourth article of this series tomorrow.

Bronfman Snatch Foiled by Woman Police Recount

(By D. E. Burrill)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Ont., Aug. 28.—(CP)—Revelation plans had been made to kidnap Bronfman back in 1931 was made in court Monday by Michael McCardell, confessed kidnapper of John Labatt.

Details of the well-formulated plans, however, were disclosed from an official source only today.

It was back in 1931, when a group of seven Detroit men, disclosed sometime was seeking to stage a kidnapping in Canada, John Labatt, London brewer, and Bronfman were decided on as the victims. Labatt was ill and plans for a second plan were abandoned.

The seven men, two of whom are now dead from police and gangster bullets, while two others are serving prison terms in the United States, proceeded on the Bronfman kidnap in two cars. With them they carried a heavy arsenal, including sub-machine guns.

At Toronto three of them were taken into custody as suspects and were photographed and fingerprinted. The second car, containing the guns, had been left in a parking lot and one of the men held by police carried the parking ticket. If, the police were to question ownership of the suspects they found the ticket in the same name.

Chewed Parking Ticket

But police never found it. The man holding it folded it in his pocket and placed it in his mouth with a stick of gum. He digested the cardboard.

Police had only their suspicions, though. They were unaware of the second car.

The men were released. They visited their accomplices and the gang continued to Montreal.

For a couple of days they sought the distillate and watched his home. They were getting ready to seize him and force an ransom.

But they celebrating at night. In their hotel they drank heavily. One of the ring leaders sought companionship of a woman in another room. He pretended he was a plainclothesman and forced his way to her room.

He had only left her room a few minutes, when police pounced on him and charged him with impersonating an officer. But he was free on the time. The rest of the gang, afraid he would talk, fled.

But he did not. Details of details of the story were disclosed by one of the gang in connection with a police officer, who had trailed part of the gang half way across the continent.

64 TAKEN OFF FERRY HIBOU ON RIVERBED

Spent Night on Vessel Aground on River Bottom

IN NO DANGER

Ferry Boat Hibou Operates Between "Cape" And Kingston

Cape Vincent, N.Y., Aug. 28 (AP)—Sixty-four passengers were taken off the ferryboat Hibou which ran aground in the St. Lawrence River about 4.30 p.m. last night while trying to dodge the full force of a storm.

The passengers spent the night on the vessel but were reported not to have been in danger at any time. The Hibou was still grounded today.

The ferryboat operates between Cape Vincent where Lake Ontario flows into the St. Lawrence River and Kingston Ont. She ran aground on the rocky bottom of a channel between Wolfe Island and Simcoe Island.

The passengers were taken off at 6 a.m. by a boat operated by the Clayton Boat Company.

2 MEN ARRAIGNED AS WHITE SLAVERS

Bail Declined in Alleged Kidnap and Procuring Case

Montreal, Aug. 28 (CP)—Alleged members of a white slave ring working between Montreal and the northern regions of Northern Ontario, Alexandre Brabant, 32, and Henri Trudeau, 30, of Montreal were arraigned in Police Court today to day on charges of kidnapping and procuring. They pleaded not guilty and were remanded for trial Sept. 3. Bail was declined.

Complaint was made by Alida Tremblay, 19, who claimed she and a friend, Jeanne Beauchamp, 21, were kidnapped and imprisoned in a cabin in the woods. She said the said lump sums based on their ability to pay their own way and on the number of relief recipients. Mr. Croll said last night and added that lump sum relief is not popular with municipal councils.

Coming after an interview Mr. Croll had had with Premier Hepburn of Ontario Welfare Commissioner, the plan would not help Mayor Simpson of Toronto to "put a premium on poor municipal administration." The Premier declared that the matter was a matter today at the annual meeting of the Ontario Municipal Association.

Earlier in the day Mr. Croll met representatives of municipal officials in the Toronto Area. He said afterwards the Government would help the municipalities in financing but did not elaborate on the statement.

The municipalities made plans afterwards for an emergency conference next Wednesday in the York County Building plans to discuss the relief situation.

If the municipalities decide they will not take over the relief, the government will have to do, somebody declared, said Mayor A. D. Norris of Mimico.

Town Crier to Attend Costume Ball Despite Frowns of Town Fathers

Provincetown, Mass., Aug. 28 (AP)—Amos Kubik, Provincetown's 65-year-old town crier, has worked hard all summer upholding the dignity of his office—and he thinks he's entitled to a night off.

Amos announced he would attend the artists' and writers' Portuguese Ball Friday attired in loin cloth, feather and war paint, a plan the town fathers frowned upon as "lowering the dignity of his office."

Ralph A. Gilman, Executive Secretary of the Provincetown Board of Trade, threatened to "fire" friend to the artists' ball.

Amos if he attended the ball in any such undignified costume.

But Amos just snapped his fingers at the threat.

"I'm free, white and 65 and a private citizen as well as a town crier," Amos contended, "and I can wear any costume I choose."

And furthermore, he said belligerently:

My contract ends next week and I've got a good job for the winter.

Gh. ya—he's taking a lady friend to the artists' ball.

Bear Stories As Well as Fish

Tales of fish of record-breaking size, and other vacation stories aided into indignification following the return of Mr. J. E. Peart, of Hamilton and Clerk of the County of Wentworth, who has been vacationing for the past few days in the district of Mattawa.

"Fish," retorted Mr. Peart upon his return to Hamilton, "Fish nothing. We saw a big black bear—that close. It came right up to the camp and several of us managed to get a good look."

But, besides the bear, reports indicated that fishing was good. Included in the party was Mr. E. Bruce Harvey, superintendent of the Hastings County House of Refuge with whom Mr. Peart stayed for a day or so.

236 LICENCES ARE TURNED IN

Those Taken Up Belong to Persons On Relief

Ottawa, Aug. 28.—(CP)—As the result of an investigation by the Public Welfare Department in cooperation with the Ontario Department of Highways, 236 automobile permits held by persons on relief have been turned in to the office of the Provincial Secretary.

Permits may be retained only where they enable sufficient earnings on part to make relief unnecessary, reducing the cost of relief and on the account for pleasure purposes, it was said.

RELIEF SCHEDULE DUE ON THURSDAY

Municipalities Will Likely Be Given a Lump Sum

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—(CP)—Relief schedules will be announced tomorrow — Ontario Municipalities will learn the schedule of the Government's share in relief grants when the meantime Welfare Minister Croll has formulated the principle of the payments.

From the government, which has decreed the municipalities must look after relief administration after Sept first, the municipalities will receive said lump sums based on their ability to pay their own way and on the number of relief recipients. Mr. Croll said last night and added that lump sum relief is not popular with municipal councils.

Coming after an interview Mr. Croll had had with Premier Hepburn of Ontario Welfare Commissioner, the plan would not help Mayor Simpson of Toronto to "put a premium on poor municipal administration." The Premier declared that the matter today at the annual meeting of the Ontario Municipal Association.

Six Buildings Destroyed And Once Whole Business Section Threatened

Plattsville, Ont., Aug. 28—(CP)—Danger over, the 700 inhabitants of this village twelve miles northeast of Woodstock breathed easier today as the ruins of six buildings destroyed in a $35,000 fire which at one time had threatened the entire business section smouldered in the early morning sun.

Most occupants of the ruined buildings got out safely but their possessions were a total loss. At the height of the blaze Sunday on Main street were in danger. The fire, fanned by a west wind, swept through the frame buildings in Centre block. Firemen brought the fire under control before it spread further.

Mr. Scott who operates a grocery store and bakery shop gave the alarm, when he saw flames in the bakeware store of J. E. Ferguson on the westerly end of the block. Ferguson's Hardware store went up in flames and Scott's place of business and the apartment where he lived with his wife adjoining caught on fire shortly after.

Then in rapid order, the home of a man named Kennedy, school teacher who resided with his mother; harness shop of Cecil Alan, an unoccupied dwelling and the home of Earl Ferguson were destroyed. Brown, his wife and two children, left the house immediately, as did the others.

Thought It Monkey But Just Squirrel

Birch Cliff, Ont., Aug. 28.—(CP)—It was a case of mistaken identity police revealed today as they told of answering a call last night from a woman who said she thought she had seen a large monkey climb from the roof of her house to a tree. Police investigated but all they could find in the tree was a squirrel but grouped around the bottom were some small boys.

City and District News

MILL WHISTLES ARE BLOWING

Lumber mill whistles are blowing at regular hours, the pulp wood industry is moving and more men are finding work in the northern part of Hastings county. Encouraging statements from local residents returning to the city from various points in the district of Coe Hill, Bancroft and other villages through that section actively, a particularly marked, it was stated.

TOMMY PEDDER COMPLETED RACE

Tommy Pedder, Belleville's lone entry in the C.N.E. five mile professional swim in Toronto yesterday finished inside of the first fifteen, according to reliable information received in Belleville today. With a field of 104 entries this makes Tommy Pedder's finishing of the race more outstanding, as he was pitted against the best swimmers in the world with Olazmi Gambi of Italy winning the day's honors.

According to Pedder's handlers, Tommy received many praises from the examining physicians prior to the race, his physical condition being regarded as excellent, especially his heart condition. Pedder was forced to swim the first three miles without the services of his escort boat, the handlers in the boat being unable to locate him until he was well on his fourth mile. It was following this that Pedder started to make headway and overtook some of the leaders. Immediately upon Pedder was one of the few to finish the five mile splash and was received with a great ovation when he pulled himself up on the finishing raft.

SUDDEN SHOWERS DAMPEN DISTRICT

Tuesday evening's brief rainfall was registered at the city pumping station at just 0.25 inches. A fairly extensive display accompanied the shower.

CHILDREN BRING YOUR PET DOGS

In connection with the closing exercises of Bible School, playground grounds next Friday afternoon a Pet Show is planned at which prizes will be given for the best looking dog in the world looking pets with the longest tail and pets with the shortest tails or no tail at all. For all of the owners of birth and servitude will be shown and the names will be given on—in fact there will be a prize for each of the entrants whether winners or losers. Local business men are sponsoring the Pet Show, and the judges will be Miss Jessie Irwin, internationally known judge of thoroughbred dogs, and Bandmaster Jeffree will not be insisted upon at this show.

Obituary

LATE ROBERT J. GARBUTT

The funeral of Robert James Garbutt took place Tuesday afternoon from his late residence, Kingston Road, Thurlow Township, and was very largely attended by friends and acquaintances who desired to pay their last tribute of respect. An impressive service was conducted in the home by the Rev. Mr. Hall, pastor of the Trinity United Church, Point Anne Circuit, assisted by the Rev. R. Farncomb. Interment was made in Belleville cemetery, the service at the graveside being taken by Rev. Wm. T. Keough. The floral tributes were beautiful and many in number.

The funeral was under Masonic auspices the late Mr. Garbutt having been a Mason of very long standing, and a member of the Belleville Lodge No. 122, A.F. & A.M. The Masonic rites in the home and at the graveside were performed by J. Noakes, W.M., Rt. Wor. Bro. J. J. Clarke, and Wor. Bro. Fred Chapman.

The bearers were members of the Masonic order and were as follows: Messrs. R. J. Clarke, R. R. Colling, T. Tall, H. Hoskins, George King and W. Morrow.

The honorary bearers were Messrs. C. Graft, O. Anderson, A. Hagerty, R. Purdy, J. Parnell and G. Grass, Jr.

The late Mr. Garoutt had been in years past prominent at the Belleville Fair and a director, and the Belleville Fair Board was largely represented at the funeral.

MRS. R. T. PORTER—Thursday

Thomasburg, Aug. —The funeral service was held on Saturday afternoon August 27th., at her late residence in the village of Thomasburg, well-known and highly respected resident in the person of Matilda Jane Coulter rollick of the late Richard T. Porter (at one time reeve of Rawdon), and the late Mr. Porter in Belleville for some time.

The late Mrs. Porter was born in the 6th Concession of Huntingdon seventy-five years ago and all her life was spent in that community, being a daughter of the late Andrew and Isabella Coulter and in 1885 she was united in marriage to the late Richard Porter.

The deceased was an active member of Christ Church and Christ Church Women's Auxiliary taking a keen interest in all work in connection with the church when health would permit. She will long be remembered for her kind and unassuming disposition.

Surviving to mourn the loss of a loving mother, are three daughters, and three sons, namely, Miss Eugenia Porter at home, Mrs. William A. Morton of Thomasburg, Mrs. Percy H. L. Cheney of Alexandria, Mr. Albert Porter of Thomasburg, Mr. Richard Porter of Toronto and Mr. Clayton Porter of Detroit, also one sister and one brother, Emma Coulter and Mr. Fred Coulter both of Thomasburg.

PROGRESS OF FIRE HALTED BY RAIN

Local Fire Department Assist in Checking Blaze

Rain, coming just as the wind changed, materially help to extinguish the raging fire, that threatened the destruction of Sidney's second concession of Sidney bush yesterday afternoon. Hours volunteer firemen had combatted and finally succeeded in checking the flames, which Bailey's barn, and all of its contents, two drive sheds and two granaries. Many stacks, fences and fields of grain as the fire, which was allegedly started by a burning outfit at Mr. Bailey's on the Second of Sidney, and resulted in the worst fire in the history of the township.

Breaking out in a shed near Mr. Bailey's barn, the raging inferno spread with a wave over fields and fences until it threatened the entire countryside for a distance of eight miles. The wind, which was blowing and fanned the blaze into a fiery holocaust, caused frantic efforts of volunteer firemen and a detachment of the local fire department. For hours the battle of fire was stopped slightly, but with the increasing wind it was feared that it assured the anxious neighbours of hailing any possible spread of the night fire. They don't expect any more trouble as there was just enough rain to dampen the ground and halt further spreading of the fire with dawn all the way down the avenue. Tender of clephanis he was on the job, and Bandmaster Jeffree Blanche would think of that.

He had to wait at the hospital even after he had signed a card examining himself her best friend. She was the first to swap over the old gray quadrangle. Made him think of Bridgeport—and of Bridgeport—of Blanche, eighteen, just from girlhood, and of the big green circular act on the rings. Little wisp of a girl. They had married when she was but five years of five years, until she missed one night in Buffalo.

Dope to stop the pain, hoping to keep on as long as something went wrong with her back. Left behind in New York to be treated while he went on to the Coast. Telegraphed finally to his letters, even money orders returned unopened. Last word from the police that she was missing from the hospital house on Twenty-ninth East where he had left her.

He glanced at his watch and started for the addict ward. Blanche lay back on the pillows with her face to the sun. Jade amulet on the red silk cord about her throat. Charlie waited while the doctor examined her; the purple shadowed long nails, her shrunken arms, the wasted body.

When he left, the nurse set a four-fold screen around the bed. Any time at all, she told Charlie. On his way to the hospital the old patrol wagon she had taken an overdose of something hidden in her long satin shoe.

The elephants up in Madison Square garden were trumpeting their usual admirations while Charlie Blanche sat there beside the bed. He held one of her hands in his. Her other one clung to the jade amulet on the silk cord. She talked to her, trying to penetrate the mist that had come over her. She was wanted him around when she did her act, he thought. He used to wait for her while she took her final bows to wrap her blue velvet cape about her. She revived with sweatdown edging. Blue eyes, blond curly hair. Pale face with a pale blue satin blouse—little bit of a thing she was. He hummed the old entrance music to himself half consciously—the "Skater's Waltz."

He thought he felt her fingers close tighter over his hands. "Listen, Kiddie!" he whispered as her eyelids lifted. "You look great. Your act was fine, honey. You're all right, kid—and I'm Charlie telling you—Charlie. I'm right here with you."

She gazed up at him as she made her entrance into the world. Mrs. Blanche McCarter, beloved wife of Charles M. McCarter in the "Clipper and Billboard." Some of the old-timers would see it. He'd take a day off and run up to Bridgeport to bury her. Their last trouping together. And Wallis Fleury. She liked them. He turned his cool cheek up against her hot forehead, rest wind and started briskly over toward Third Avenue to hunt a good pawnshop for diamonds.

Entrance Music
ITOLA FORRESTER

DIAMOND CHARLIE had followed the crowd into Chinatown to get a look at the fire dance that was going on the cobblestones at the corner of Pell and Mott.

The police were shooting the bottle into a patrol wagon. Charlie stood at the curb looking at the drying rust colored spots on the gray cobblestones. That had China-man—more Americanized than the rest—no pigtail, eyes glazed, lips half open. The rich merchant, Li Sung Moy.

Charlie watched the second patrol wagon back up to a three-story frame house at the corner of Doyers street. In the last room they found Li Sung Moy's white wife.

In the flickering light she had looked pale and unreal. Her hair was heavy, golden, coiled about her head, banded by a triple corona jeweled headdress. Pendants of pink coral and pearl hung down her shoulders; pearls twined with jade ornaments hung in a fringe over her wide, blank, blue eyes. She smiled at the police as they entered the room. They wrapped gray blankets about the fragile body, and carried her down the stairs past the room where she had lived for sixteen years.

Charlie edged his way to the curb to get a look at her. Her eyes were closed. She was still smiling. Light. She hid them with her long embroidered sleeve. Then began moaning as they lifted her to the long seat in the wagon. Sobbing sounded, the crowd and policemen scattered together. Charlie poked a cigarette into his mouth, starting after the wagon with a scowl. Then he lit it with a match struck politely on his low-crowned derby lower over his eyes and started for the Bowery hostelry.

He stopped in a saloon for a drink and looked at himself in the mirror over the bar. She'd never know him—not the smallest recognition, that the greatest pleasure was to watch the fish and allow them their freedom, taking only those, that can be consumed by one family.

HOW TO FISH IS TOLD BY SPEAKER

Rev. A. S. McConnell of Stirling Addresses Kiwanis Club

In order to stimulate attendance at the Kiwanis Club from September till the end of the year so that Belleville Club will make a good showing on the contest being launched, Kiwanian Cliff Barton has offered a Goodyear tire to the highest member. In case of a tie, it is understood, the record of attendance from January to September will be taken into consideration. This was the announcement made at the luncheon on Tuesday when Rev. A. S. McConnell of Stirling was the principal speaker.

The club has accepted the invitation of the Kinsmen to play them a game of donkey baseball under the floodlights some time next week and there is no doubt there will be plenty of fun. George Lee gave a report of the recent series of the Junior Kiwanis Baseball team with Oshawa, the team being eliminated only through lack of a season's schedule. This will be remedied next summer and it was almost agreed to continue on with the team. George Hoey reported on the advertising for the Kiwanis Carnival to be held in Belleville next year, stating he was keen on carry during the progress of the fun that night. The club has secured a tent on the grounds and on exhibit are the prizes valued at $1,000 which will be awarded at this affair.

Rev. Mr. McConnell was introduced to the club by the president and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by J. G. Hughes, speaker being a lover of the out-of-doors spoke on the subject, "Fishing as life", which was most interesting and instructive. He compared fishing to the four stages of fishing, "expectation, equipment, sportsmanship and memories" and in this way related to the club how fishing is like the grander things of life. He described the fish hog, who delighted to fill a boat with fish to some-one being allowed to rot, explaining, that the greatest pleasure was in watching the fish and allow them their freedom, taking only those, that can be consumed by one family.

MUSIC, STUNTING, DANCE, TUMBLE THRILL - CROWDS

Grand Stand Performance At Belleville Fair of High Class

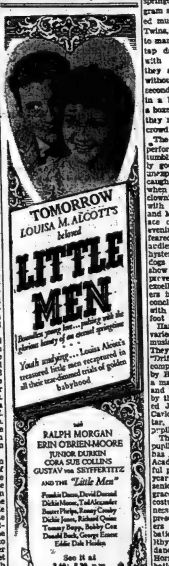
HIGH MERRIMENT

With melodic introduction by Belleville Municipal Band, the program before the grandstand, a featured attraction of Belleville Fair, presented a series of varied and very pleasing acts for the entertainment of visitors yesterday afternoon and evening. Groups of talented local artists and vaudeville acts filled by George A. Hammond, Inc., New York City, provided an evening of keen enjoyment.

The sudden downpour of rain in the early evening made the crowd smaller than was expected, but the dampness was a considerable handicap to certain of the acts, the lightning performance and the sportsmanship of the performers who completed their numbers in spite of slipped footing overcome by difficulties and as the program continued the enjoyment of the crowd mounted, until it reached its climax with the antics of the Gandinski Brothers and their dogs.

Belleville Municipal Band, under Bandmaster Lieutenant Fred Jobson contributed a splendid musical interlude, their numbers drawing from the audience hearty applause.

Included in their program were the marches "Gloria" (Losey) and "The Thunderer" (Sousa), the overture "The Bohemian Girl" and a particularly pleasing number, the medley of Victor Herbert.



The Four Freddies in a novelty springboard act opened the program and their clever stunts received hearty applause. Comedians Fred Dobson and Curly Dud Twins, radio entertainers familiar to many fans, presented an unusual tap dance number, winding up with a "running" tap in which they appeared almost to gallop without moving an inch from their respective spots, they engaged in a boxing bout that looked like a boxer's nightmare. Clever dancers, they made a decided hit with the crowd.

The Speed Demons, the fastest motorcycle act ever seen here, gave thrilling acts that were especially good since they were done at night. Comedy was provided by Bobby Gandinski, who caught unawares with a clever bit of clowning. The Gandinski Brothers with their dogs, Bobby, Jackie and Major however, were really the show's comedy entertainers of the evening and as an act it may be feared that certain members of the audience were about to get fatal hysterics. The amazing intelligent dogs seemed to be enjoying their act as much as anybody and proved themselves comedians par excellence as the Gandinski Brothers introduced many original acts, comedy boxing with Major and with one poodle perched on one foot and atop the two, tug-of-war between the dogs and their trainers, splendidly played. They included, "Old Faithful" and "Dixieland Band." Overseeing the company; a banjo and guitar duet by Harry Wagner and Ralph Morgan and "Now It's Time to Say Aloha," a Hawaiian novelty by Ralph Morgan of Jean Miller, guitar, Phil Ferguson, guitar, Tony Di Pietro, guitar, Jack Edmunds, guitar, all pupils of Harry Wagner.

The debut of the Dancing Dolls, pupils of Miss Mary Forster who has studied under Miss Ida Morton Academy, Toronto, was a delightful part of the program. The pretty, 8-year old Frances Perdyce to the senior standard. The dancers were successful and talented and their gay costumes added to the attractiveness of the acts. Those who participated were Frances Perdyce, Sailors Hornpipe, Ruth Hagerman, Acrobatic Dance, Marion Adams, Colleen Hamilton, Frances Perdyce, Sailors Hornpipe, Ruth Hagerman, Acrobatic Dance, Marion Adams, Colleen Hamilton, Frances Perdyce, Sailors Dance, Mary Forster, Tap Dance, Miss Dorothy Croft was accompanist.

Music for the other acts was provided by the Belleville Municipal Band. Climaxing the evening's entertainment, the daring performance of the Aerial Ladders when "the greatest thrill of the day" "the greatest of ease" at a height of one hundred feet, with a total of one hundred and fifty exhibition of strength and courage. They performed without nets or rails and the act is said to be the aerial is the tallest in the world. They provided an exhibition of the series of thrills and crowned an ovation when they took their bows on the last act.

The Attractions' Committee, of which G. J. Symons is chairman, and L. F. Walmsley and H. E. Fairfield are members and the Music Committee, L. K. Walmsley, chairman and H. DeShane, are to be complimented on the thoroughly enjoyable program provided for the Belleville Fair. An added attraction Wednesday night will be selections by Belleville Men's Chorus.

ALWAYS SCHUSTER for QUALITY

A successful coal business must be built on PERMANENT customer satisfaction. This cannot be done with fuel of uncertain quality, bought to sell at a price. Nor by selling many diverse brands, of widely varying degrees of purity and value. Permanent tonnage can only be acquired and kept, by selling consistently year in year out with the excellent quality of the fuel supplied, that they will never have to explain disappointingly "We expect it to be good fuel—because they bought it from ——"

We point with pride to the high grade fuels we handle—with which we have built up over the years, coupled with a day-to-day courteous and unvarying service, a large permanent list of satisfied customers.

The best ware is passing, the realities of cold Fall nights, and Winter, will soon be upon us.

This is certain: you can't get heat without fuel, and you are equally as positive that you must have fuel the next winter to keep the house warm. Here is a splendid quality of coal that we contribute for us to enable us to make summer deliveries throughout the city, and save money for our customers. It will pay you to see us about yours now.

WEST LAKE

West Lake, Aug. 28.—Mr. and Mrs. George Rankin of Toronto, with their children, Alma and Donnie, are holidaying among relatives in the county. They spent part of last week with Mr. Alvin Rankin and with Mrs. Ken Hyatt, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Jackson and family of Detroit are spending holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Furse and other relatives in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley McConnell spent a recent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. D. May and Mrs. Ellis at Melville, it being Mrs. Ryans' eighty-third birthday.

A number from here attended the social on Willis Sills' lawn, East Lake road on Wednesday evening.

The showers on Wednesday, followed by decidedly cooler weather, will be a great relief from the intense heat.

Quite a number from here took in the band excursion to Rochester on Thursday, getting a splendid day for it. Friday morning, Although the day was cold, a real good time is reported.

Mrs. D. Maitland is enjoying a visit with sisters, who have come from Toronto and New York for a short holiday. On Sunday they motored up and visited friends in Stirling.

Our pastor is expected to return at the week-end and will resume his duties in the church here and at Bloomfield, next Sabbath.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Crawford have been spending a few days in Toronto.

POLICE BLOTTER

Of all the bicycles stolen in Belleville during the city year, all have been recovered except eight, local police divulged today. Of recovered bicycles these eight may have been recovered and not reported to the police station, it is stated.

Mrs. Laurie Lewis 34 Dumbar street reported the theft of a bicycle, the property of a small "tike" was removed from the verandah of the Lewis home some time yesterday.

A Rotary Sarnia pump was reported stolen from Rohloff's boathouse yesterday .The marine pump was valued at $10.00. No clue as to who, or where it disappeared to could be unearthed, police say.

Any increase in the number of transients to appear at the police station in search of a night's lodging was noted last night when one even dozen, twelve, weary travelers of the road, slumbered peacefully in the cell block free from the addition drop in temperature and wet, damp ground.

Local police have been checking up on speeders inside of the city limits of late. During the four days of the Belleville Fair numerous complaints are received annually by the force in relationship to speeding on the local streets. Three speeders and one motorist failing to stop at a stop sign were seen today, all received summonses into court during past twenty-four hours. Fortunately no major motor accidents were reported locally during the past few days.

PLEASING ARRAY OF EXHIBITS SEEN AT FAIR

Display Buildings House Products of Factory, Home Fields Arranged Tastefully

One of The Features of Fair And Many Take View

COURTEOUS SERVICE

Those in Charge of The Booths at Service to Public

A sudden shower drenched the Belleville Fair ground early last evening. Along the midway the exposed effects of the various booths disappeared like magic, swept under their protecting canvas shelter before the first drops fell, and which splashed to the dusty ground had soaked in. A leisurely crowd which had already entered the grounds through the four gates, and adding to their number, dashed for cover in the nearby buildings. The rain, after a brief downfall, swept off to the east, leaving little muddy pools of water on walks and driveways, and the grass fresh and invigorated on the grounds.

But the crowds who had entered the various buildings, the Manufacturers' Display Building, the Agricultural Building and other buildings where the products of the forest and field and factories — many of them from Belleville's own workshops — stayed to look and admire. And in these two main buildings on the local grounds Belleville manufacturers and shop owners enlisted services of those in the art of display and variety of products offered.

Sleek, glistening cars, the last word in motordom, with the newest, most scientific aids and appliances to make motoring more comfortable, more convenient, with safety on the road were there, formed up in ahny array for the inspection of local and district citizens. Latest models from the humming factories of Canada filled the showrooms of the largest cities in this country were lined in dignified ranks, standing out prominently against their perfect background of decorations.

J. B. Pepco

Most pretentious was the display of General Motors Autos arranged by the local salesmanager, Mr. J. B. Boyce Company. Trim passenger cars in every model and design vied with the more rugged commercial vehicles also on exhibition. Mr. Whitcher, Oldsmobile De Luxe Coach stood beside a shiny Pontiac 6 Standard Coach. To the left an Oldsmobile 8-cylinder De Luxe sedan. Chevrolet passenger De Luxe sedan, a 5 passenger Corvelet DeLuxe coach and finished in a rich maroon, a Buick Sedan, beaming in chromium and new paint, took deep places in the exhibition.

On another stand arranged by the same local company were the commercial vehicles, a Buick 1½ tractor and trailer, a Chevrolet one and one half ton truck, dual equipped, a Pontiac Sedan Delivery, bewildering parts display section, where there is room for every type of General Motors vehicle were listed. Not least the interesting exhibits was a motorcycle piloted by a display of varied subjects shown on the wall of the building, and holding a large interested audience.

Trudeau Salon

Trudeau Motor Sales of this city with its display of the new Plymouth Sedan, the Standard Tudor and Fordor Sedan, the new De Luxe Ford Coupe and Rumble Model 500 vied with other exhibits in its lively atmosphere. A new compact Ford labratory on wheels for portable service, a full line of complete system of gauges and dials, could, it was proudly pointed out by the covering attendants take the ordinary Ford car and reveal its inner-most secrets of carburation, ignition, gasoline consumption, and other factors in the performance of motor service. Installed in any model Ford car of late vintage for the mere price of $75.00 attracted the attention of the motor wise citizens. Many have the diagnosis taken down for casual or careful inspection, proved an illustrated lesson in the operation of the modern internal combustion engine.

J. R. Warren

The booth of J. R. Warren, local Plymouth and Chrysler dealer featured the latest Plymouth and Chrysler models. Standard Sedans Plymouth DeLuxe sedans, the Standard Plymouth coupe and the Chrysler touring sedan. People seem to be getting back to nature more than ever, with the demand for touring sedan cars more noticeable than ever before, it was remarked. "Of course, in these new models there is no necessity for all weather machine, which may explain it."

But not all the attention of the visitors to the Manufacturers' Building was focussed on automobiles.

Bird Institute

At the Canadian Institute for the Blind some some marvellous examples of sightless handicraft were shown. Here, Mrs. Kenneth Taylor learned that upwards of 4,500 individuals of this province alone were doomed to perpetual darkness. Hundreds of them are under the care of the institute. From hundreds of homes come the shining examples of all that creative effort displayed by these sightless citizens, to be offered for sale at various points throughout Ontario. Not all manual workers are inmates of the Institution.

"Look at this" — requested a lady at the booth. A truly remarkable tea tray, designed in contrasting colors of gold and brown was held up for inspection. Then a skilled worker with better than average eyesight would have been proud of this creation. "Greetings" was the word printed in contrasting effects. Then lacquered, with a fine finish — explained the booth proprietor. Need work, basketry, pottery hundreds of other individual articles made by the sightless were on display. "We have all classes of trades and practically all seasonal workers on our rolls", it was explained. Stenographers, telephone operators, switchboard girls, stenographers and almost any other office job you can mention being held down by some of these sightless citizens, and not least of all was the souvenir being distributed by the institute, printed in Braille — free to all visitors.

Another booth featuring particular appeal to the housewife or the head of the house who delights in the cooking was that where furniture was offered by the Rt Mott Company. "Housewives always prefer this unfinished furniture in the kitchen, because of the painless kind", it was explained.

Oliphant Electric

All the comforts of the up-to-date home were to be seen in the booth arranged by the Oliphant Electric and Sales Company, Bleecker street with the newest stoves, ranges and ranges, electric ranges and home heating and cooking equipment guaranteed to work throughout the winter without further attention on the part of the owner, once set in and put into operation. Not least of all the booth featured a large array of paint and varnishes for the home decorator.

In the familiar green and white booth Canada Steel Motor oils together with their equipment for compressure grease guns and lubrication systems were displayed in an adjoining booth.

Purity Flour

Just as an example of what can be done with the finest flour and kindred ingredients, mouth watering confections from the bakery exhibit were arranged amidst towering sacks of flour in the Purity Bakery exhibit at the end of the building. Delicious cakes, cookies and other fancy confections were displayed side by side with an ample display of homemade bread.

"I don't know how many samples of our stuff we have given away today, quality flour, quality bakery products", said the manager of the Canadian National Exhibition, "but we are getting Gold Medal Products. "But this is just the start. We expect to give away hundreds more during the rest of the week." it was added that the booth was the centre of prominent display contrasted with the exhibit in charge of Mrs. Kitchen. They ranged from spices to sauces, all tastefully exhibited, and with pleasant girl attendants in charge to explain every feature of the company's product.

Entomological Bureau

Japanese Beetle, the scourge of the eastern states and which has been watched for in this country by government officials to prevent its entrance of the corn borer, the destroyer of farmers of the Belleville district. Animated little fuss of a specimen saw fly and peach moth, all helpful and harmful to the country, were displayed from central European points of modern interest. Contents of the local plant were being exhibited by the local Dominion Entomological Laboratory in a practical manner. Farmers and city folk alike crowded the booth where the display of dramatic life history of the tiger swallowtail butterfly and the Radish Maggot exhibited to them by the willing entomologists. Even the mosquito was there in the booth to catch the peach moth in the Niagara district, was on display.

Walker Hardware

Demonstrating through actual practice, with the aid of unpainted boards and paint and varnish, the representative of the Imperial Paint and Varnish Company, made the most of the opportunity. Showing a paper ridiculously simple to housewives and others who stopped at the booth of the local Walker Hardware, how to apply the new lead in the paint brush and the can of Floglaze in any color to do as good work as the professional. Pointed out Mr. F. B. Jones, demonstrator. Together with the paint exhibit was a fine array of Coleman Lamp Company products, featuring lamps and stoves made by that company.

Bowra Electric

One of the largest booths in the Manufacturers' Building was that of the Bowra Electric and Hardware Company who displayed Hoston refrigerators, one of the most popular lines; General Electric Washers, Ironers and Sweepers; General Electric Hotpoint Ranges in every style and model and Princess Pat coal and wood stoves. Not least of all was the exhibit of Locomotive Washers, one of the old reliables of busy housewives. Nightly at this booth a drawing will be made determine the next three days of the fair, and the holder of the winning ticket will be given a beautiful floor lamp each night.

Stewart Warner Alemite

Stretching almost half the length of one side of the building was the display of the Stewart Warner Alemite Corporation arranged by the sales and service office of the local line Mr. Campbell, Stewart Warner radios of the latest models, from tiny manual sets to the massive and impressive concert type instruments in miniature type were offered for general inspection. At this booth, too, were to be found the latest and best in the radio builder and the short wave amateur. Every type of radio transmitter section was reproduced. Circuits and parts, the catalog of Alemite lubrication needs featured Pennsylvania Oils and Temperite Anti-freeze. High pressure grease and oiling systems of every type were also displayed.

Frigidaire Sales and Service

Frigidaire refrigerators in five models against a pleasing background of gold and blue. Five models in all, ranging from the most serviceable for inspection, in either the booth or the building, not less than all was the souvenir being distributed by the attendants, printed in Braille — free to all visitors.

Another booth appealing particular appeal to the housewife or the head of the house who delights in the cooking was that where furniture was offered by the Rt Mott Company. "Housewives always prefer this unfinished furniture in the kitchen, because of the painless kind", it was explained.

Oliphant Electric

All the comforts of the up-to-date home were to be seen in the booth arranged by the Oliphant Electric and Sales Company, Bleecker street with the newest stoves, ranges and ranges, electric ranges and home heating and cooking equipment guaranteed to work throughout the winter without further attention on the part of the owner, once set in and put into operation. Not least of all the booth featured a large array of paint and varnishes for the home decorator.

In the familiar green and white booth Canada Steel Motor oils together with their equipment for compressure grease guns and lubrication systems were displayed in an adjoining booth.

Purity Flour

Just as an example of what can be done with the finest flour and kindred ingredients, mouth watering confections from the bakery exhibit were arranged amidst towering sacks of flour in the Purity Bakery exhibit at the end of the building. Delicious cakes, cookies and other fancy confections were displayed side by side with an ample display of homemade bread.

"I don't know how many samples of our stuff we have given away today, quality flour, quality bakery products", said the manager of the Canadian National Exhibition, "but we are getting Gold Medal Products. "But this is just the start. We expect to give away hundreds more during the rest of the week." it was added that the booth was the centre of prominent display contrasted with the exhibit in charge of Mrs. Kitchen. They ranged from spices to sauces, all tastefully exhibited, and with pleasant girl attendants in charge to explain every feature of the company's product.

Entomological Bureau

Japanese Beetle, the scourge of the eastern states and which has been watched for in this country by government officials to prevent its entrance of the corn borer, the destroyer of farmers of the Belleville district. Animated little fuss of a specimen saw fly and peach moth, all helpful and harmful to the country, were displayed from central European points of modern interest. Contents of the local plant were being exhibited by the local Dominion Entomological Laboratory in a practical manner. Farmers and city folk alike crowded the booth where the display of dramatic life history of the tiger swallowtail butterfly and the Radish Maggot exhibited to them by the willing entomologists. Even the mosquito was there in the booth to catch the peach moth in the Niagara district, was on display.

Walker Hardware

Demonstrating through actual practice, with the aid of unpainted boards and paint and varnish, the representative of the Imperial Paint and Varnish Company, made the most of the opportunity. Showing a paper ridiculously simple to housewives and others who stopped at the booth of the local Walker Hardware, how to apply the new lead in the paint brush and the can of Floglaze in any color to do as good work as the professional. Pointed out Mr. F. B. Jones, demonstrator. Together with the paint exhibit was a fine array of Coleman Lamp Company products, featuring lamps and stoves made by that company.

Bowra Electric

One of the largest booths in the Manufacturers' Building was that of the Bowra Electric and Hardware Company who displayed Hoston refrigerators, one of the most popular lines; General Electric Washers, Ironers and Sweepers; General Electric Hotpoint Ranges in every style and model and Princess Pat coal and wood stoves. Not least of all was the exhibit of Locomotive Washers, one of the old reliables of busy housewives. Nightly at this booth a drawing will be made determine the next three days of the fair, and the holder of the winning ticket will be given a beautiful floor lamp each night.

Stewart Warner Alemite

Stretching almost half the length of one side of the building was the display of the Stewart Warner Alemite Corporation arranged by the sales and service office of the local line Mr. Campbell, Stewart Warner radios of the latest models, from tiny manual sets to the massive and impressive concert type instruments in miniature type were offered for general inspection. Frigidaire refrigerators in five models against a pleasing background of gold and blue. Five models in all, ranging from the most serviceable for inspection, in either the booth or the building, not less than all was the souvenir being distributed by the attendants, printed in Braille — free to all visitors.

Smith Hardware

Beach coal and wood ranges and McClary furnaceries, both well-known household names were in evidence today at the Smith Hardware booth. Also, the latest in air conditioning furnaces and Fuss oil burners, which keep the house cool and keep the home warm at all times, outside temperatures. Not least of the attractions to be discussed on the 91-year-old stove was the display of the P. E. Wills. Solidly cast and with beautiful graceful moulding and trim, the stove, in good repair, even yet looked capable of efficient heating, but contrasted oddly with the newer, more modern heating equipment.

Belleville Hydro

Declared to be the only exhibit of its kind on the grounds, the fully furnished room arranged by the local Hydro-Electric Commission through indirect lighting was visited by scores of citizens during the DAY. Only by the switching on of the three-degrees of lighting contained in the single switch provided a test and pleasing effect in the concrete work. A tiny but efficient light for the kitchen demonstrated clearly the exact amount of illumination needed for the kitchen work and this was part of the exhibit. "We intend entertaining local homes during the coming winter offering the services of this gauge free", explained one attendant. The display of a Moffat electric ranges ever seen in Belleville for the first time, was included in the booth, together with refrigerators, Royal vacuum cleaners and Electrolux. Not there, besides all the well known appliances in use in the modern home. One of the interesting features was the display of the Moffat oven consisting of a Moffat range oven door, and about about 40,000 cakes were good for ten times that figure, it was declared.

Insul Brick Siding, asphalt shingles and Insulbrick, Insulwood flooring was amply demonstrated in an adjoining booth.

Beauty Washers

Two different types of Beauty Brothers washers, of both the gas and electric type were shown by the local Beauty Washer store, the exhibit also contained both floor and table models of the Beauty washers with daily exhibits of actual ironing and demonstrations by a skilled attendant. Beauty floor polishers and washing machines were included in the large exhibit of modern appliances.

Leslie Shoe Store

Seventeen years in business in this city, the Leslie Shoe store year by year has increased its display at fair floor exhibit until today it is the largest one in any of the buildings demonstrating the Canadian-made trunks, suitcases and the newer replace, bags, birds go to make a balcidescope seldom witnessed in the period of autumn classics or exhibitions.

LIVE STOCK, BEST EXHIBIT SEEN AT BELLEVILLE FAIR

Over 150 Head of Cattle on View For The Patrons

FINE HORSES

Sheep And Swine Quality Also Above Previous Years

That farmers in this immediate district are again relying on the horse to bear the brunt of agricultural work on the farm instead of the tractor, can be seen in the exhibit at the Belleville Fair, which will be in progress for the next two days. A large number of teams with foals at side are noticed, showing that the farmer is home-conscious and that in the long run will pay as high a dividend as the mechanical devices. The increase shown since a larger showing of all types of horses has been seen and the quality appears to be of the highest order. Many teams are on the grounds, ranging from the Shetland pony to the heavy draught but the agricultural type is still predominant. There is also a larger showing of the roadster and carriage type again demonstrating that the younger members of the rising generation are taking a keener interest in the raising of horses and that the horse barns will be of a necessity for many during the fair. Quality of the animals on exhibitor in explaining the breeding and type will go to show that the farmers in the good fellowship that exists between the rural and urban dweller. Not only is there a large exhibit of horses but the cattle, sheep and swine pens are full in significance. The Holstein is the most prevalent type of cattle around these parts, especially in Prince Edward County, yet there are sleek herds of Jersey, the lordly Ayrshire and the famous Shorthorns noted for their beef and milk producing characteristics. The competition will be exceptionally keen in the Holstein classes, four herds being on exhibition. Ivanhoe Pontier of Bloomfield has ten head in the Holstein. Mannings, of Bloomfield, eleven head. James Maithie of Bloomfield, five head, and Edna Ketcheson of Belleville, nine head.

39 Head Ayrshires

F. M. Rutherford of Carisbrooke Farm at Bonarlaw has the only herd of Ayrshires on the fair, but it has 39 head on exhibit so that one can form an opinion as to type and quality. Bonarlaw is the centre of Jerseys, which include A. E. Hubbell and Son, Frankford, Harold Irwin, W. Collins and Son, of Plainfield, with fourteen head and Wilfred Irwin of Trenton with twelve head. Ben Bleecker of Halloway is exhibiting Jersey cattle and Shorthorns and Norton Grigg of Roseneath, the same number.

Passed on to the sheep pens on the top end of the fair grounds, A. Ayre and Sons, Campbellford, have 30 of W. Ralson and Sons, of Hampton, have 20 head of Oxford Downs, Hunt of Tyrone with twelve head, the brey Southdowns, Orford Dowse of Consecon with fourteen head and Corbyville has 13 head of Shropshires and Cotswolds. Hope Northshire hogs, while Percy Caverley of Halloway has eight Yorkshires and Berkshires. The exhibit all through is high class and quality good and will be worth the time to make a trip through the barns.

PRESENT PLAY AT THOMASBURG

Thomasburg, Aug. 26—On Thursday evening last the Young People of Fuller United Church presented a splendid play in the church mark the opening of the new garage and church sign. Rev. Archie Reid, pastor.

Rev. H. B. Herrington acted as chairman, and the play was ably introduced by Mr. Lloyd Mc-Canley director of the play as follows:

Jakey Talman, a miser, Mr. F. Palmer.

Virginia Talman, commonly known as "Wild Ginger", Mrs. F. Palmer.

Miss Rachel Lee (Mrs. Talman), Mrs. Ralph Hubbs.

Mrs. Walker, a friend, Mrs. V. Hall.

Wizzy Walker, a chiropractor, Mr. Martin Lakey, a well educated boy, Mr. George Brough.

Mr. Peterson, a suburban grocery-man, Mr. Gordon Mitts.

Martin Lakey, a well educated boy, Mr. George Brough.

Sanford Stonewall Lakey, his father, Mr. Hedley Hubbs.

Miss Honita Lakey, a lady, Miss Mabel Green.

The play proved very interesting and well enacted by the cast.

ELECTRIC RATES

Interesting data has been given in the press since the electric rates in the United States have been to the fore with the Public Utility Bill. Even in the same state there is a great difference of rates. The top rates compare unfavorably with the H. E. rates in Ontario. According to the New York Times figures for New York State, recently surveyed "show a wide spread between minimum and maximum charges. Thus the Jamestown public plant sells the housewife 25 kilowatts of electric energy for 88 cents, while the Auburn private plant bills her $2.50 for the same amount. The householder who is able to finance an electric refrigerator in addition to his lights, and consequently manages to run his monthly consumption up to 100 kilowatt-hours, can get it for $3.06 if he lives in Buffalo or Niagara Falls, but will have to pay $7.31 for it if he happens to live in Mount Vernon or New Rochelle (rates as of Jan. 1, 1935). He would be compelled to pay $4.20 even in spite of differential if he were in the 250-kilowatt class, chiefly reserved for those who like to cook with electricity.

"Out of sixteen to nineteen cities with population of 25,000 and over reporting different schedules in these three consumption classes taken as typical, 25 kilowatt-hours, 100 kilowatt-hours and 250 kilowatt-hours, New York city ranks seventh from the "top" (the community enjoying the lowest rates) in the first, fourth in the second and seventeenth in the third."

Explanation of some of the differential is ascribed to such factors as "accessibility of water power, physical, and economic conditions, density of population, seasonal requirements, industrial demand, variation in purchasing power, and difference in the cost of living." The survey report adds, that these variables taken altogether, in the judgment of the Commission "do not of explaining the range of charges from minimum to maximum, which in many cases exceeds 100 per cent."

Rates in such a municipality as Belleville at 3 cents and 1 cent per kilowatt hour are much than any cited in the New York newspaper's reference.

IN NEW YORK CHURCHES

Christianity should control the destinies of mankind, but the voice of the church is too weak, said the Rev. Frederick W. Goldstein, rector of St. George's, preaching in St. George's P. E. Church, New York. "There is so much good and so much evil today apparently from a natural impulse upon which from revelation," he said, "gives us instrumentalities for great good. The desire for wealth leads to oppression, war, destruction. From the people we get unprecedented kindness, generosity and service; seething discontent, violence, and bitterness. The voice of the church is silent and its power enfeebled when its voice should be heard in unmistakable tones and its power felt with a gripping force. The body of Christianity expresses itself in worship, yet seemingly lacking in a vitality to move the world to a feeling of awe when it ought to reverberate around the world. It might and could control the destinies of nations and empires, but it is hampered in its feebleness. The features of Christ must now, bear that emigmatic baffled and baffling expression that the painters in the middle ages have endowed us to see."

"There is perhaps more talk about peace today than there is about anything else—peace conferences, pacifism, disarmament. Our Lord would probably weep over the conferences. With the usual human blindness we do not seem to know very much about "the real things which belong unto our peace," said the Rev. Dr. Feringa in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. "A great many have however found peace and are still finding peace, even in the worst turmoil and under the greatest stress, by kneeling in the presence of their Savior before the altar of God."

"Knowledge of the omnipresence of God should make us aware of our human limitations and restrictions and this should have a decided bearing on our lives," said Rev. Walter Kellenberg of St. Patrick's Cathedral. "Look about you, wherever you go. God is with you."

"Religion is an inmate desire for God. It does not matter where man lives or to what he subscribes. The urge of religion is undeniable. Whether a man calls himself an atheist or an infidel he cannot free himself from that desire," declared Rev. Philip Clifford at Broadway Presbyterian Church. "Christianity is the answer out of God's fullness" to man's cry out of his emptiness.

Rev. Ralph Long of the Lutheran Council asserted at St. James Lutheran Church, and that it was not fantastic to see, even in the United States, a time when because of persecution, some persons might have to die for their faith. "True believing entails high cost. A person must have complete faith, not a historical or intellectual faith." Three costs of faith were listed, renunciation of self and the world, subordination of the will to God, unselfish service and sacrifice.

People who venerate and esteem some of the modern idols of nationalism, materialism, science or gold, are apt to forget that men tend to become like whatever they most truly revere or worship, noted the Dr. Victor C. Mills of Montclair, N.J., at St. Paul's M. E. Church. "There is a vital connection between the worshipper and the object of worship. The thought that God has made man in his own image sheds no light on the true nature of the eternal but does indicate the fact that we worship different conceptions of God."

HEAVEN ON EARTH

Always have dreamers sought a plan
To fashion heaven on earth for man;
Their fancies, strange and intricate,
Seemed of some other orb's estate.
The worldly folk have only smiled
As at the whimsies of a child.
Yet, if they would but pause to see
The problem is for you, for me.
Within man is the power to scheme lies,
No complex system to devise,
But just by giving of our best
And meeting squarely every test
With honest deed and honest thought
Our bright Utopia could be wrought.
The virtues favored most by fame
May have a more resounding name;
But still in simple honesty
Lies each man's hope of being free

From all the shackles life can weave,
The force that bind him and deceive.
For honor is the finest thing
Without it all life's joys take wing.

SOUNDS LIKE AN OLD FRIEND RETURNED FROM THE WILDS, or somefin —said a citizen of years and his discretion, referring to the fact that the old clock on City Hall tower is again ringing out the hours, and making a good job of it. For a clock which has kept working in sunshine and shadow, in snow, sleet and rain for sixty years, or thereabout, the old Town Clock certainly deserved its holiday rest. And so, the Town Clock's striking again, all's well with the world.

IN THE SOUP

During some Army manoeuvres a parachutist dropped through the roof of the dining tent whilst a meal was in progress. After being assisted to his feet he was asked if he was hurt.

"No," he said, ruefully looking round, "but I seem to have landed myself in a mess."

REVOLT IN THE DESERT
by T. E. LAWRENCE

Allenby's headquarters was a perfect place; a cool, airy, whitewashed house, proofed against flies, and made musical by the snoring of the wind in the trees outside. I felt immoral, enjoying white table-cloths, and coffee, and soldier servants, while our people at Umtaiya lay like lizards amongst the stones, eating unleavened bread and waiting for the next plane to bomb them. I felt restless as the dusky sunlight which spashed a diaper over the paths, through chinks in the leaves; because, after a long spell of the restrained decent, flowers and grass seemed to fidget, and the everywhere-burgeoning green of filth became vulgar, in its fecundity.

However, Clayton and Deedes and Dawnay were friendliness itself, and also the Air Force staff; while the good cheer and conscious strength of the Commander-in-Chief was a balm of comfort to a weary person after our long desert days. Bartholomew moved maps about, explaining what they would do, I added to his knowledge of the enemy, I was the Intelligence officer, and in return his perspective showed me the victory sure, whatever happened to our strained little army during the next there. Yet it seemed to me that in the Arab hands lay an option, whether to let this victory be just one more victory, or, by risking themselves once more, to make it final. Not that, so stated, it was a conscious option, but, when body and spirit were as wearily sick as mine, almost instinctively sought a plausible avenue of the way of danger.

Before dawn on the Australian sector Chauvel stood two Britons and a D.H. 9. In one was Ross Smith, my old pilot, who had been picked out to fly the new Handley-Page, the single machine then in Egypt, the apple of Salmond's eye. His lending it to fly over the enemy line on a low air errand as baggage carrying, was a measure of the good-will toward us.

We reached Umtaiye in an hour, and saw that the army had gone, so I waved ourselves back to Um el Surab; and there they were, the camels dispersed singly over the plain, sitting themselves with the wonderful grumbling noise which we say our marriings, put a landing signal and smoke signal on the roof of the hut which we gave and Nuri Said's had swept clear of stones.

Ross Smith dismally paced the length and breadth of the preparted space, and plodded his imperfections, but rejoined us, where the drivers were making breakfast, with a clear face. The ground was O.K. for the Handley-Page. Young told us of repeated bombings yesterday and the day before, which had killed some regulars and Turkish Arab infantry, and shaken the life out of every one, so that they moved in the night from Um el Surab. The idiot Turks were still bombing Umtaiye though men and animals in the neighborhood and nights to draw water.

After I heard of Winterton's last blowing up of the railway, an amusing night, in which he had met Nuri Shalan's camel corps, explained to him in broken Arabic how well they were getting on. He answered with thankful God for his mercies, and disappeared in the dark; whereupon the Lewis machine-gun fire opened from left and right of the bivouac. Nuri Said, first all his charges, and withdrawn in good order without loss. Nasir came in with the last man from the rear, and that killed, this clan getting ready to attack, whereupon the Arabs, who lauded the British, and Nuri Shalan's camel corps indicated, while I told them the scarce-credible epic of Aaronsohn's escape from Afule. Aftuh taken, Beisan and Semakh and Haifa. My hearers' interest was intense. Then Nuri Said's Talbot took fire, boasting; while the Rualla abandon for Intaiah carried off the treasure. A shiver of self-assertion and confidences ran through the camp. Nuri Said considering up Feisal and Nuri Shalan for the northern front.

Meanwhile it was breakfast time with a smell of sausage in the air. We had grown very ready, but the watcher on the broken tower yelled, "Aeroplane coming," and coming over from Deraa. Our Australians, scrambling wildly to their yet-hot machines, started them in a moment. Ross Smith, with his observer, leaped into ours, and climbed like a cat up the sky. After them two more, while the third pilot stood beside the D.H.9, and looked hard at us.

I seemed not to understand him. Levels guns, sights, aeroplanes, sights, which turned, vanes, knobs which rose and fell on swinging pedestals, shoot, crosslimed with this side of the ring or with that, according to the varied speed and direction of onesself and the enemy, I had been shown the theory, could repeat some of it, but it was in my head, and rules of action were simply empty. I decided till they had run out of the empty head into the hands, by one. No, I was not going up for air-fight, no matter what caste I lost with the pilot. He was an Australian, of a race delighting in additional risks, not an Arab to whose gallery I must put.

He was too respectful to speak; only he looked reproach at me while we watched the battle in the air. There were one enemy, two scalar and three scouts. Ross Smith fastened on the big one, and, after Smith machine-gun rattle, the German dived suddenly towards the ground. As it flashed behind the low ridge, there broke out a pennon of smoke, and from its falling place a soft, dark cloud. An "Ah-" came from the pilot's throat. Five minutes later Ross Smith was back, and jumped gally out of his machine, swearing that the Arab infantry had fired on it.

Our sausages were still hot; we ate them, and drank tea (our last English store, broached for the visitors), but were hardly at the end of the meal when Young, who had climbed behind the low ridge, there broke out a pennon of smoke, and from its falling place a soft, dark cloud. An "Ah-" came from the pilot's throat. Five minutes later Ross Smith was back, and jumped gally out of his machine, swearing that the Arab infantry had fired on it.

Our sausages were still hot; we ate them, and drank tea (our last English store, broached for the visitors), but were hardly at the end of the meal when Young, when again the watchman tossed up his cloak and screamed. "A plane!" This time Peters won the race, Ross Smith second, with Pyrall, Salmond third. "Reprisals," but the sky enemy turned back so soon that Peters did not quite get there. Then the great machine rose into the early dusk, for Ramleh, with a agreed quantity of night bombing against Deraa and Mafrak, to complete destruction of the railway inside which our gunnodion had begun.

We, for our share, would keep up the gunnodion pressure. Allenby had assigned us the Turkish Fourth Army, to harass and contain till Chaytor forced them out of Amman, and afterwards to cut up, on their retreat. This retreat was as certain as things could be in war that we should raise the plains between us and Damascus next week. So Feisal decided to add to our columns Nuri Shalan's Rualla camel-men from Azrak. It would increase us to about four thousand strong, more than three-fifths irregular; but reliably so, for Nuri, the hard, silent, cynical old head behind the tribe between his fingers like a tool.

He was that partly in the desert, a man without sense of argument. He would or would not, and there was no more to it. When others finished talking he would say his piece in a few flat phrases and wait calmly for obedience, while tussle his hair-cord (he was old and wise, which meant tired and disappointed), so old that he was ridding wonder he should link himself to our enthusiasm.

Kenmore N. Y. Rotary Club Makes Inter-City Visit

Trenton Rotarians Presented With Silken, Union Jack

TRENTON, August 28.—(Special) —The third international Inter-City meeting of the Kenmore N.Y., Rotary Club and the Trenton Rotary Club was held at the Bay of Quinte Country Club on Monday evening. It was a gala gathering for the two clubs and members and the visitors thoroughly enjoyed the entire programme. Rotarian George Shoniker president of the Trenton Club was the chairman of the night. Music was supplied during the dinner by the Connemeover Orchestra and also for the dancing that topped off a perfect meeting.

The local club presented Harry Bury, President of the Kenmore Club, with a beautiful Union Jack. The Stars and Stripes that were given the local club at a previous meeting in Kenmore, adorned the wall back of the head table. It was a lively meeting filled with the friendly spirit of Rotary International. Past President John Meeks of the local club and Bill Kinmonths of the Kenmore club, delivered short addresses.

Toasts to "The King and the President, the National Anthem of the two countries were sung.

Past President Ed. Simmons, in a short address of welcome to the visiting club and the other visitors, told of the great friendship that has prevailed between the two clubs during the series of these Inter-City meetings. Harry Bury of Kenmore eloquently responded and told of pleasure that the visit had given and desired in the meetings. Sgt.-Major A. Wheberley delighted those present with a song. Mayor Harry Ketcheson officially welcomed the visitors from the land of Thrift and Prosperity.

Two minute speeches were delivered by Frank Mann, honorary member of the visiting club, Bill House, charter member of the Trenton Rotary Club and Morris Thomas sr., Past President of the Kenmore Club. Community singing was enjoyed with everyone giving all that their throats were capable of giving.

Bill Ireland, secretary-manager of the Trenton Club introduced the guest speaker of the evening, Bill Fraser, also an honorary member of the local club. He chose as his subject "International Problems and Notary." His address was most stirring and enlightening and was thoroughly enjoyed by all those who were privileged to be present.

Past President Ken Couch moved hearty vote of thanks to the speaker that was seconded by Jim Orvis.

A silver tray manufactured in Trenton, was presented to each visiting lady to by Bill House, as a token of the memorial gathering of the two clubs.

The following verse accompanied each tray:

"This souvenir we send on To you dear friends of Kenmore, The made in our own Trenton Pointing to the open door.

"When days are long and interesting, When business is rather bad. Just pass this dish with cookies Remembering good times we've had."

WHITEMORE—ADAMS

The Faith Mission was the scene of a pretty wedding at noon on Monday when Evelyn Bernice, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Adams, Trenton, was united in matrimony to Rev. Earl Whitemore, pastor of Faith Mission of the Christian and Missionary Alliance.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white triple sheer with accessories to match. She wore the veil of her aunt, which was trimmed with a bandeau of orange blossoms and lilies-of-the-valley. To the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Mrs. A. F. Finch the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. The bride's sister, Miss Marcella Adams of Toronto, was bridesmaid and the groom's brother, Mr. Clarence Whitemore, of Toronto, was groomsman. Little Miss Lois Deegan, of Toronto, was flower girl. Mr. Walter Goldfarb and Mr. A. F. Finch acted as ushers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. Rahenny of the Free Methodist church of Frankford. During the signing of the register, Miss Agnes Gowland of Toronto, sang "Taylor Let They Sanction Rest".

Following the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served to fifty guests at the home of the bride's parents. Later in the afternoon the bride and groom left by motor for Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara Falls and Buffalo. From their return they will reside in Trenton.

Trenton Court

Magistrate Lloyd presided at the Magistrate's court in Trenton on Monday in the absence of Magistrate Jones, K.C., of Belleville, who is enjoying his vacation. A local trucker was assessed ten and costs for driving in a manner dangerous to the public. He was involved in an accident with three cars. A Gilmour resident was touched twenty-four eighty for a similar offence. He was given one month to pay. One month's suspended sentence and a fine of $100 and costs, including the costs, was given a local motorcycle driver who knocked a boy from a bicycle. Ten and costs was the fine for a verdict of a local resident for allowing drunkenness in his home.

A resident was dismissed when he pleaded guilty to disturbing the peace. The verdict came when sufficient evidence was offered. A lady(?) had a fine of $10 and costs for peace by screaming and swearing dismissed when no evidence was offered.

A local man pleaded not guilty to stealing a pair of runners from Miss Queen's store, was remanded in custody until Sept. 4 when he pleaded not guilty. A Brighton family praises but he did not get the verdict as the Magistrate ordered him to get fined.

LIFE STORY of WILLIE ROGERS

By Scott Cunningham

Fourth Installment

WILL OUTSMARTS DR. WOODS

Young Will Rogers, who had already tried a couple of schools and left because of difficulties with the teachers, at 13 was having trouble again. This time it was in the Cherokee Seminary, at Tahlequah, and it got so bad he quit.

"I saw they wasn't running the school right," he remarked in his public later, "I could have taken it and made something out of it but I just got out.

"That's the way I have always done with schools; the minute I miss and their plans didn't fit in why I would get out, or sometimes they would ask me. I would generally always do it if they did; it was an accommodating way.

His next school was Willie Halsell College, an academy in Vinita, which he entered on Monday, September 3, 1900. Will was placed on the fourth and top floor of the dormitory, and subjected to a discipline that must have irked his independent soul.

Bells, he had to rise at seven, to the sound of a gong. If he stayed longer in bed he was punished fast. At eight, again to the sound of a gong, he was supposed to study.

At nine, to chapel. At nine-fifteen to the classroom where his class sat till ten-thirty, recitation time. Then came a half-hour recess, which Will devoted to roping. When he was not roping at noon or a door-knob, he was tempted to choose girls for tackling dolls. He roped them by the best so much that when in his neighborhood they scraped their feet as they walked so his rope wouldn't slip under their shoes and nab them.

Classes were resumed at eleven, and Will sometimes helped some cord for a lariat with him then. He was at his desk with the eyes intently fixed on a book, but which no girl passed his lariat he'd cast.

He chewed gum in class, too, and got into trouble about that, too.

The teacher who had the strongest and most important influence upon Will at any time was Miss Rose Sappington, of Willie Halsell, who taught elocution and physical culture in the academy career.

Will once was in the chapel program to "speak a piece" into which was a colored person. Stepping out to the center of the stage, he began, "Brethren and sisters.....

He forgot what he was to say next. Nothing could prompt him, but he couldn't have his cheeks wet red, his ears roaring—

"Amos," he stammered, and quit the stage with tears in his eyes.

When chapel was finished, Will told the teacher, "I'm never going back on that stage!"

In his second year at Halsell he moved from dormitory to the annex, a new building, and fell under the care of a matron named Miss Cooper, who at first had to be scrubbed more than he was inclined to scrub himself.

"You can get your hands and face the dirtiest of any boy I ever saw. LOOK at your hands!"

Whereupon she went to Will. Willie took such indignity from the matron, but rebelled under the hands of her daughter, who seemed to sympathize.

"Quit!" he cried.

"Where's just one clean spot on your face," the matron's daughter told him. "That's around your mouth, where your old long tongue can reach out and lick it!"

The only time Will ever was thrilled to draw up was when he had a part in the minnes at one of the school balls. How excited he was to wear a costume of velvet coat, knee trousers, and silk hose and do the figures of the dance!

A growing youngster came home the summer of '93 to find Clem Rogers had married Mary Schiller, housekeeper. The new Mrs. Rogers got along very well with Will, but she did not going her way and letting Will go his.

In addition to a wife, Clem Rogers had got himself a fatherless youth. "Doc" Payne, Sheffling, laughing, the two boys made a great pair. They swam the river on their horses that summer, they raided orchards, collected arrow-heads on Claremore Mound, and contested at roping cattle.

The new town of Colcgah was springing up four miles to the west, where the Missouri Pacific railroad now passed, and was the second summer home from the Willie Halsell school Will would ride into town and perform on a bronco. He could make it rear up, he could ride backward, and pedal the sixteen miles of dirt roads to Chelsea in an hour.

But he went back to his horse soon afterward. In fact, after four years of Willie Halsell he was anxious to have a horse under him all the time, and told his father: "I'm tired of Willie Halsell."

All right, said Clem Rogers. Will was thrilled at the delightful prospect. But his father, continuing, said, "We'll find another school for you."

Will's fourth school was Kemper Military Institute, a Southern Methodist school at Nocsho, Missouri, eighty miles from Kansas. He was now 14.

"I had passed out since," Will wrote long afterward, "and I did all I could while there to hasten it in doing so."

On his first day there, in the fall of 1898, he encountered the girls he had known at Willie Halsell. They were sisters, and with their mother.

"Why," exclaimed the mother, "it looks like you're just following my girls around Willie."

"For-r," agreed Will, his bright eyes twinkling.

"They go, and what they learn, I learn."

He was now called "Jim," and was becoming more gently tutored in girls. His favorite was Annie Price, who lived on top of a hill. Friends of those days still like to recall Will's visits to her when, returning from a call on Annie, he was chased down the hill by a dog which bit him in one or legs to shreds.

For sport, Will played end on the football team and third baseman on the baseball team. He got more fun out of roping.

He and a couple of boys from the Indian territory, like himself, were out roping one day, when Will lassoed a calf belonging to one of the professors and before the owner of the calf had finished his lariat still on it. Dr. Woods, the institute's president, helped in the chase till a clothesline was about him under his bewhiskered chin, and almost choked him.

"Who did it? Who roped the calf?" he demanded of a professor.

"Those Indians from the Territory," the professor replied.

"That's just like the little savages!" Dr. Woods exploded, and as his friends turned the corner of a building in time to hear.

"You're expelled!" the institute's president told them when he had them in his office. "I'll have anything you wish to say before you leave?"

The air was tensely quiet. No one spoke. Then, scratching his head, said to the president, "We think maybe you ought to apologize to us before we leave."

"What!" raged Dr. Woods. "Apologize!"

"You get a lot of students from the Territory," Will began to explain. "You called us 'little savages' while ago, and when that word gets out down there in the Territory, you may not have so many students."

The quivering doctor coughed. "Go to your rooms!" he snapped, and that was the last of that. They stayed.

PLAYOFF SPOT IS A TOSS UP

Three Teams Have Swell Chance To Finish Fourth

(By the Associated Press)

Newark Bears, who not long ago seemed destined to wind up in the second division, have taken a new lease on life today.

With Montreal, Buffalo, and Syracuse looking good for the final three places, the last play-off spot loomed as a toss-up between Baltimore Orioles and Toronto Maple Leafs—that is, until Newark stepped into the picture again. Spurred on by the way the Orioles and the Leafs have been treating games away, the Bears are now practically tied over with Toronto and only a game behind Baltimore.

Newark has drawn a 17-hit barrage in defeating Baltimore last night 9-4; Jack Lazzeri, back in the ranks after a long siege of illness, hit two of them homers by Irvine Jeffries and George Puccinelli.

Montreal Royals squared the series with Buffalo at 11-11 when they gave the Bisons to another night game, the win boosted the Royals' League lead to 3 1-2 games.

Fourteen thousand customers, the largest turnout of the year at Delorimier Downs, with his mates scoring seven runs on Llandeau and Bear relief in the fifth and sixth innings, gain his 19th round victory of the year. He yielded but seven hits.

Albany Senators, trailing by two runs going into the eighth inning, scored five tallies to give them a victory over Syracuse Chiefs 5-4.

The Senators' pitcher, Van Denburg, who had allowed only seven hits in his previous outings, picked him for five hits, plus blows in shutting two triples, a double and two singles, did not see his wild pitch last in the deciding tally.

Toronto handed him in the fifth and sixth frames off Johnny Michaels to defeat Rochester Red Wings 7-1.

P. C. MacLAURIN NAMED HEAD

Football Teams Will Enter O.R.F.U. Group This Fall

P. C. MacLaurin, principal of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Provincial School, was recently elected as President of the newly organized Belleville Rugby Football Club, that is to be entered in the intermediate ranks of the O. R. F. U. this season. Many other well known and influential citizens being named on the board of directors.

Dr. H. G. Kennedy, late star backfield player for Western University and now a practising surgeon in Belleville, has been engaged as coach for the local football squad and already nightly practices are the order of business in the formation of the local grid iron squad. Coach Kennedy has been provided a work of coach Dan Conway, Joe Breen of Western University and a host of other Inter-provincial referees in the matter of elevating the autumn pastime in Belleville. Eight home-and-home fixtures has been played with success in the Intermediate ranks during the last season seeing the innovation of O.R.F.U. football in Belleville.

The executive has purchased all of the equipment used by Lloyd Crowther's Argenteuil provincial football team in Toronto last season enabling the local squad to go at once on the field clad in the very best rugby paraphernalia. Business Manager Ray announced today, that the O. R. F. U. had promised Belleville the honor of appearing in a proposed Lake Shore group embracing Peterboro, Oshawa and Belleville as qualifying starters along with Lindsay and an amalgamated team of players from Port Hope and Cobourg if possible.

The local squad is practicing nightly at the Collegiate campus and upon the purchase of their equipment from Lloyd Crowther, contracted a promise from "The Big Trader" of his appearance as an official at the opening game of the 1936 season. All of the more experienced players on the club have already answered the call along with three seasoned ex-O.R.F.U. senior players now residing at the R.C.A.F. camp—Trevor, Holmes and Hill. Manager Fry stated today that a wealth of material existed at the Airport, any of whom would be eligible to play in Belleville.

The personnel of officers elected by the Belleville Rugby Football Club for 1935 are as follows:

President—C. MacLaurin.

Vice Pres.—Dr. W. O. Morgan.

Executive—R. A. J. Flynn, Geo. Deiros, Frank Dominico, Chas. Dolan, Stewart Thompson, J. B. Boyce, and Frank Tidwell.

'Chief' Williams Gets 4 Shutouts During Season

Kingston, August 28 (CP)—Cy Whatley, catcher-third baseman, of Peterboro, won the batting championship of the Central Ontario Baseball League. The schedule on which concluded on Friday when Kingston finished in first place.

Whatley had been trailing his teammate, Tommy Foley, from the start of the season, but when Whatley cracked out two hits on Friday and Foley went hitless, the centrefielder dropped down and Whatley finished with an average of .379. Clarke of Peterboro won the nominal leadership with .421 but he played in only two games. Foley finished with .367.

Foley led the league in hits, getting 95, including 20 singles, six doubles and three triples, or a total of 47 bases. He was tied with Kerr of Belleville for the most runs scored, 51, and led the loop in singles. Vin McQuaide led in home runs with three. Weir led in triples with four and Whatley had most doubles, eight.

Kearns of Peterboro was easily the best base stealer, pilfering 17 and Peterboro batting star. Alex Weir of Belleville by three thefts. Saboeno of Cobourg, Sandy McIlroy of Belleville were tied for the most sacrifices, with six each.

The league as a whole saw a decline in batting with only Peterboro batting close to normal. In 23 games Peterboro had a team batting average of .274, Cobourg with .221, and Belleville with .214.

Belleville had most stolen bases, 67, and Peterboro led in sacrifices with 36. Peterboro scored the most runs, 121, had most hits, 290, most doubles, 36, and most total bases, 362. Singularly enough, they were the only team to go without home runs. Only eight home runs were hit, Cobourg leading four, Kingston three, and Belleville, one.

Fielding Improves

The fielding of the C.O.B.L. showed a big improvement over last year, with all four teams closely bunched. Only seven points separated the first and the last place team in club fielding. Oshawa led with .963 and were closely followed by Peterboro, with Kingston third with .962 and Belleville last with .956. The Ponies committed most errors, 35, McQuaide of Kingston in 23 games accepted 62 chances in centrefield without an error.

"Brat" Clancy, ace hurler of the Peterboro club, was a shining light among the pitchers of the C.O.B.L. Whitehouse, with one win and one loss, has a fine credit, and Kitchen, with four wins and one defeat, led Clancy in percentages, but the Kingston hurler was by far the most prominent hurler in the circuit. He won nine, lost four and tied three games.

Clancy pitched in most games and most innings. He allowed most runs and most hits, was the strike-out leader and hit more than any of other hurler. He won nine games, one more than Kitchen's Whitehouse of Belleville.

The steadiest hurling in the league was given by "Tammy" Jamieson, who in 84 innings issued only 19 bases on balls. Best short 1-inning game. Ogden of Cobourg was the wildest, issuing 31 walks.

Twelve shutouts were registered, Williams getting four of them, Clancy two, Kitchen two, Calhoun two, Jamieson and Ogden one each.

C.N.E. SWIM TO GIANNI GAMBI

Finishes 100 Yards Ahead of Pritchard in Fast Time

Toronto, Aug. 28.—(CP)—Gianni Gambi, a Fascist and naturally an ardent supporter of Mussolini, broke up the world professional five-mile swimming championship, along with the rest of his luggage, when he arrived shortly for Italy en route to Ethiopia as a member of the Italian army to a possible war.

Gambi, who made up his admiration for the Fascist cause and Il Duce, last night, when he stepped up on the finishing stand, victor in the professional event at the Canadian National Exhibition, after a thrilling struggle with Frank Pritchard of Buffalo, New York, behind when the four mile mark was reached. The two hit record pace and were far in the first three miles when Gambi, although his thrashing arms grew weak, gradually pulled away from his speedy American rival. Gambi's time for the grind was two hours, eight minutes and 55 seconds. Pritchard came in almost three minutes later apparently all-in. Gambi, native of Ravenna, Italy, sided by the warm water, made fast time for the five mile swim.

In third place was a comparative unknown Chester Bell, Bill Nolan, from Chelsea, Mass., followed by Sam Shields, veteran marathoner, from the way from Louisville, Ky. Then came the speed merchant, Clarence Ross of Mattamoreck, New York, with Wilson Padgett of Marion, Ark., sixth. The bald-headed veteran Bill Goll of New York took seventh place and completed the final prize-money award. George Blagdon of Memphis Tenn., a previous marathon winner, finished eighth, just out of the prize money.

TWEED NINE WIN SNAPPY GAME FROM OMEMEE

Gordon Steel Works' Team On Top of a 2 to 1 Score

Tweed, Aug. 28—In the snappiest pitchers' battle seen on Tweed diamond in many a moon, Gordon Steel Works defeated Omemee in the opening engagement of their series by the score of 2 to 1. The pitchers were on top of the batters all the way and for the most part were accorded sensational support by their teammates. Only one run was recorded against the locals, and with it was tallied the only run registered by the visitors. With two down in the first inning T. Parsons was safe on a Texas leaguer over the infield. Brooks bunted and both were safe when Steel at second dropped Simpson's throw to get Parsons. McQuade's single scored Parsons. Laffman pitching for Omemee, struck out Brooks and Bell, retiring the side. Laffman struck out Steel and Doubleday Potts off second as he had started for third at the crack of the bat.

Sinclair's playing in the sixth was a feature, as he retired Brooks and McQuade on two sparkling catches. The latter was one of the spectacular variety and drew a hand from the crowd. Orr at short played through the game with a split finger on his left hand sustained in the first inning. In spite of this handicap his playing was excellent particularly his leaping catch for the final out.

Simpson, the dynamite catcher for the locals, played one of the best games of his career. His throwing to second was very effective, getting Reihll in the second and Pritchie in the third when they attempted to pilfer second base. An unfortunate accident occurred in the seventh when the visitors filled the bases with none down. Orr took Adgate's drive for the first out and Simpson in making the catch of Prince's foul back of the plate stepped on a bat and suffered a severe sprain of his right ankle. After a delay of ten minutes he gamely continued. It is doubtful if he will be able to make the trip to Omemee on Wednesday as the sprain is serious.

Merraw and T. Parsons rival third baremen were the leading batters, with two hits apiece, the former batching a triple.

Shine, pitching for Omemee, was good enough to win most games but his teammates failed to get him sufficient runs. He allowed but five hits and struck out six, including the side in the seventh. He retired the side in order in five innings. McQuade in centre gave his pitcher sensational support. Weir, Reihll and F. Parsons featured with several fine plays. Laffman struck out seven and allowed seven hits.

After Merraw had tripled in the sixth with one out, Simpson brought him home with a well placed hit. Gowsell and Tummon followed with hits, Simpson registering what proved to be the winning run on Tummon's drive.

The latter executed two sparkling double plays T. Parsons to Reihll in the first inning, and Prince to Weir in the fourth.

Umpires: R. Bailey, Omemee, at the plate; C. Wallbridge, Madoc, on bases.

Summer: Prince 2b, Weir ss, T. Parsons rf, Brooks c, McQuade cf, F. Parsons 3b, Reihll 1b, Bell lf, Adams rf.

Gordon Steel: Broad 2b, Merraw 3b, Simpson c, Gowsell lf, Quinn lf, Tummon cf, Orr ss, Laffman p, Sinclair 1b.

Score by innings:

Omemee ..... 100 000 000—1 7 3

Tweed ..... 000 003 00x—3 5 1

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

President Charlie Meagher announced today that the second game of the semi-final play-offs in the C.O.B.L. would be definitely played in Belleville on Sept. 4th with the first game being played in Peterboro on Saturday of this week. Incidentally if a third game is needed it will have to be played in Peterboro on the second of September, with the winner of the Belleville-Peterboro series then continuing into the Central League finals versus the league leading Kingston Ponies. Due to the Belleville Fair being in progress this week the Radios will be unable to practice on the home diamond, but to off-set this Coach Mills has called for batting practice nightly at the Alemite Field. The ground is not rough for fielding practice at this point, so it looks as though the "Loud-speakers" will have to play to the field on Saturday minus defensive practice this week. On the season's play during the regular playing schedule the Peters only defeated the Radios on two occasions in eight starts, so the Radios are naturally quite optimistic in relationship to the final results of the semi-finals.

The fishing in and around the Ontario district has been extremely good this season, ardent anglers inform us. Yesterday we met old time fisherman Jack Wandless in on one of his old-time bass fishing secrets. "Young fellows think bass are on the rise, try using a grasshopper as a sinker and if you want some real sport. The hopper should be attached to the shank of a light bass sinker, and cast out and then thrawed around the body of the boat, taking care, of course, to leave the wings and legs free, so that its natural action will be retained. To work the hopper back to the windward side of the water, cast your lure lightly and let it drift breeze carry the hopper across the water. You don't have to play it out to give him action for he will be on through his own exertions and you may be sure a hungry bass will snap the old fellow up in short order", stated our fishing pal "old timer" says it's sure-fire.

When the local Asjmaas downed the Arrow Delivery, champions of the Kingston City softball league, the locals' stocks raised considerably, as Kingston always can be depended upon to send out a stellar softball representative. Understand that this Kingston team is plenty tough and the only reason we beat them so badly was that the best our team could do nothing wrong. They were hitting behind in the bases and fielded in big league fashion, but we will have to be just as good to win the second game at Central Park, on Thursday night," Manager Clem Bowler informed us this morning. In Swain, the Kingston nine have a right smart hurler, who may make it mere than interesting for the Asjmaas tomorrow eve. Incidentally Frank Parrow, who successfully twirled against Wooler here last week, will get the local pitching assignment, it was announced today.

Despite rumours to the effect, that only a limited number of fans would start at the races during the Belleville Fair, all these tales were dispelled with this morning, when a good field was selected for today's two races, the three year old colts class and the 2.20 class. Incidentally we understand, that Gil Litt of Goderich, will be here with a string of high class horses tomorrow along with a number of other horsemen who have been racing at Kingston all week. Incidentally, Secretary Bennett went down to Kingston for the 2.14 class today, but will be back this evening. In the meantime, we understand that Tramp Abbe in the three year old class today, last night's card settled the dust on the track and plenty of fast going is looked for tomorrow, when the 2.14 class is on the Belleville Fair. Incidentally some fantastical difficulty arose between the horsemen and the local board but they were amicably settled and a real three days' racing is positively assured, stated President Wm. Gordon today.

This donkey baseball business that is taking United States by storm is played under floodlights. Local baseball clubs have now contracted a travelling company, that supplies the donkeys and the lights—the system to appear in Belleville, on Sept. 9th and 10th. On the ninth the Elwards will play the Lake Kissmere Club while on the following night Belleville's champion policemen are to battle it out. Soms fun folks, it's a wow and don't miss it. The system has been asked to umpire the first game.

Today the local intermediates play the second game of the play-off series of Quinte's district play-offs in Picton. A week ago the Fanning-led aggregation copped the initial game of the series, but hope for better results this afternoon. Manager Fanning, ultimated today, that Phil Loft would start on the hilltop for the locals, but he is taking no chances on Bowen and Johnnie Bawden for relief duty. Allen and Walker being the mainstays of the Riwanis Juniors. Doubtlessly the Pictonites will have Vern "Lefty" Rose back right back at the Belleville "kids", in hopes of winning the series in one straight, but time alone will tell that tale. The Prince Edward County ballsters manage to win the league honors today there is a possibility, that the play-off series will start between Napanee and Picton will start right smartly. These two clubs will play off for the Knox Trophy after the regular schedule is over.

Our key-pounding contemporary Jack Sheppard wishes to think that no other ball player in the C.O.B.L. can play left field except Bert Burton, but personally I feel he is a sweet young fellow but we can think of a few in the C.O.B.L. who could spot Burton cards and speaks and then some, her home in a canter to gain a place on any all-star team. A good outfielder can play any position in the outer gardens.

Catherine Gratian, oily going pacer, owned by the Quinte Stables in this city, won the 2.17 class at Kingston race on Tuesday and her first winning mile in 2.06. Kane was in the Pilot House. The mare took into camp much good pacers as Dominion Gratian, Guy Pointer, Russell Gratian and Bella Patch. The chestnut mare is just rounding into form.

—MUSSOLINI, MODERN CAESAR—

MUSSOLINI'S CHANGE FROM PACIFIST TO WAR ADVOCATE MAKES HIM FIGHT A DUEL

Socialist Followers Break Away Before Italy Enters Conflict

Not only a powerful writer, Benito Mussolini, dictator of Italy, Caesar's modern counterpart, is one of the most masterful orators heard

In this, the third of 13 articles, a distinguished writer of foreign affairs continues the life story of Benito Mussolini whose career is brought in sharp relief by the North African disasters which may prove to be the zenith of his career. The material herein has been drawn largely from original sources, but the writings of Mussolini and his associates have been consulted freely. The story does not attempt to view Fascism either pro or con, but to set forth the facts of the blacksmith's son who has become Italy's modern Caesar.

By J. C. OBETTHEUCHER

Written for and Copyright by The Daily Ontario Intelligencer and Canadian Central Press

For 50 years prior to August, 1914, Italy had seethed with popular unrest. It was a passive uprising directed not particularly against the monarchy or even the parliamentary system which had proved a definite failure, but against the entire "laissez-faire" scheme of government which left vast sections of the people dissatisfied with their lot in life.

For ten years of these two decades and a half, Benito Mussolini, together with his colleagues among the Socialists, had called upon the people by word of mouth and the printed page to rise and express their loss of patience with a regime that allowed things to slide.

The complaints were multitudinous. Huge northern provinces were held under the thrall of Hapsburg's double eagle. The house of Austria, with its centuries old motto; "Divide and Rule," attempted to make of Trent and Plume and Trieste integral parts of the Dual Empire. The muttering of an Italian-born people weaned away from their king and empire by sheer force, went unheeded.

In the agrarian regions the farmers ruled against taxation, the oppression of the paid military, and the alleged abuses of an elected parliament. In the industrial areas, strikes and disorders were frequent. The situation was shaping for a climax.

It came in the form of an abortive revolution. In August, 1914, Milan, Turin and Bologna, and to some extent in Florence and Rome, the workers launched a prolonged general strike. In the "revolutionary arrays"—Ancona, Rimini, Forli, Ravenna and the other cities where Mussolini and his colleagues had long preached the doctrine of Socialism, it took a more violent form. Garrisons were raided and troops disarmed; farms burnt, churches sacked, and military and civil authorities seized as hostages.

Called Off Strike

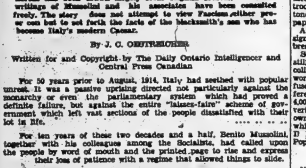
Mussolini, then editor of Avanti and spokesman for the Socialist party in the nation, called for a truce. He saw on the horizon a more menacing rebellion — the revolt of all Europe against the doors of peace—and could vision no lasting success from the insurrection in Italy itself. Perhaps not alone at his bidding, the workers none the less called off the strike, and with resumption of work the uprising collapsed.



As the same moment, the fateful shot was fired at Sarajevo.

Socialist and other thoughts turned instantaneously from unrest at home to the greater, more perilous conception of a United Italy.

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"Sure. You're promoted to Selby's place. Take your orders from me.

He poised across the hall, and found himself facing Deborah Selby and her mother. There was nothing of the pachyderm about Deborah now. Her hands were clenched, she glared at Brian threateningly. Mrs. Selby looked subdued and worrowful, but equally hostile.

"Are you coming back to this house?" exclaimed Deborah in fury. "You're to be master here?"

"Of course I am," said Brian. "I'm taking hold."

"If you stay here, I don't!" cried she girl. "Now you listen to me—!"

"Shut up Deb, for mercy's sake," said her mother. She turned to Brian, her face very white. "Mr. Chalmers, if that's so I can't stay in your service even a day—we're serving at once."

"As you please," said Brian. "Your husband's still minding. I understand. I shouldn't have turned you out. But if that's your attitude the sooner you're off the better. You've an hour to pack and leave the house; come to my room for any pay that's due to you."

"We'll accept nothing from you, sir. Not a cent—not even what's due to us!" said Mrs. Selby, almost in tears. She shepherded her daughter hurriedly out.

Brian went upstairs thoughtfully. He was surprised to find the Selby's contemptuous about the little matter of wages; money could have been more unlike them. He wondered how they were fixed for money, and guessed that they were better fixed than he had any notion of. Though that gave him food for thought, he was relieved. . . He considered himself expert at tackling any man who walked in number ten boots, but he felt an embarrassment in dealing with women, particularly the Selby women.

He unlocked a desk in the library with the key Sergeant Lee had delivered to him, and busied himself with Coote's accounts. There was something distasteful in thus prying after the dead man's money, but he did not let that disturb him. All that was his but due he would claim and hold tight. On Sunday account no less than his own. And there was that matter of the missing bank-notes, that had disappeared.

Half an hour's work reassured him. Coote's private accounts were in order. Brian began to see a light but he found no reference to the bank-notes, nor any entry of their numbers. While he was at work the footman entered with a card inscribed "Mr. Ernest Lakin".

"Show him in" said Brian grimly.

Mr. Lakin was a chief Trustee, legally appointed as a guardian of the Coote inheritance. Brian had visited him in London the day before and had administered a shock to him. But Mr. Lakin was vastly more shaken, now. He came in, a pathetic elderly gentleman with white hair, and a plump face that was perspiring freely. He was a rich man, but the fact was giving him no comfort. His hands were shaking as he collapsed into a chair.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

"Mr. Chalmers!" he gasped. "This is an awful business! I never dreamed when we were together yesterday—I only learned of it from a paper; I got on the train at Derby, Mr. Coote . . . murdered—"

"A tragic business," put in Brian briefly. "I've nothing to say about that beyond what's in the papers; for details apply to the police. You will be wanting to see me, I think!"

"Me?" groaned Mr. Lakin. "What can I do? I may have been remiss—"

"You have," said Brian grimly. "You and your co-Trustee have been as slack as chewed string. You're responsible. Bannister Coote was a crook, who has been skinning the Coote estate while you slept. And thought it wasn't easy, most of the funds being tied up, as a skinner he was in Chess A."

Mr. Lakin was visibly shaken "I'm afraid there's no doubt about it, Mr. Chalmers. I believed he was a wealthy man, apart from the estate; I believed in his integrity. But I don't think things are as bad as—"

"Bad! Why man, if he'd had another year the estate would have been a sucked orange. He's only just got started—"

"Why did his death was providential!" gasped Mr. Lakin, and checked himself.

"Providential!" said Brian dryly. "Yes—for you! It might have cost you and the other Rip Van Winkle who was looking after this trust, a cool eighty thousand. Incidentally, do you know that the chief heirloom of the family, the Coote diamond, is gone—cut up! All that's left of it is a fake worth about ten pounds, now in the hands of the police!"

Mr. Lakin gasped, and collapsed in his chair. His first impression was that, however the Law might regard it, a man like the late Bannister Coote deserved murdering at any one ever did.

"Mr. Chalmers," he said broken-ly. "I—I—if you're suggesting I am liable—"

"You're liable all the way!"

Lakin's gray face was pathetic. His lips drooped, his control was gone; a veritable tear trembled on his cheek. Then Brian's face changed. He dropped a hand on the old gentleman's shoulder.

"Put that out of your mind, sir," he said. "I'm not going to claim on you. On neither of you. But you've got to help me. Get on to it, find out just how the Trust stands, trace up all Coote's doings, and report. Then maybe, we'll cry quits. I've seen trouble myself, and I'm not here to make things hot for you."

Lakin started up, and took Brian's outstretched hand.

"Mr. Chalmers! Do you mean that?"

"I've a habit of meaning what I say. And now, sir, if you'll get on with that—I'm busy."

He cut the old gentleman's reply, shoved him out, a vastly relieved man, and returned to his desk. In a few minutes Grant brought in another card.

"Hugo McGinness!" said Brian, and frowned. "Show him up."

He had met this visitor before, and liked him very little. McGinness was Bannister Coote's private solicitor, living in Norchester. He came in with an impressive tread, a very different type from Lakin. A man of forty-five, heavy but well built, with clever, deep-set eyes and a professional manner.

"Mr. Chalmers!" he said in a flushed voice. "What an appalling affair! Poor Bannister. The police haven't got to the bottom of it oh!"

"It's in their hands" said Brian. "What did you want to see me about?"

McGinness sealed himself.

"A queer turn of fate. All this"—he looked admiringly round the room—"comes to you. And a great deal more. You know, I think, that I was Coote's legal representative. I felt I ought to have a word with you at once, about this Will.

I was left in my care and I've brought it with me. It carries your signature, as one of the two witnesses."

"Bannister's Will!"

Brian remembered that not long ago, he had witnessed a document for Bannister. The gardener had been called in to add his signature. That sort of thing had often happened; generally the witnessing of share transfers.

"I didn't even know he left a will, McGinness."

"Naturally," said the lawyer, drawing a long sealed envelope from a despatch-case and opening it. "this has nothing to do with the Coote inheritance, which was fixed up by old Mrs. Coote. It deals with Bannister Coote's personality, apart from all that —his private fortune."

"Then it's nothing to do with me".

"Pardon me, it has! Not that it benefits you financially; that is impossible, since you're a witness. And there's no reason Bannister should leave you anything, as you came into a very handsome inheritance as his heir-at-law anyway. But following this tragedy it will have to be made public; as your name is on it you ought to know what it contains—"

"Bannister's private fortune!" broke in Brian. "Do you think he had much to leave?"

"Less, I'm afraid, than one would expect," said Mr. McGinness gloomily. "Bannister Coote had a pretty sound business of his own, of which I don't know all the details, and I don't suppose you do either, but latterly as an idea, it must have been going down-hill. He showed me papers a short time ago showing that there should now be cash assets of over 150,000 dollars—at par, thirty thousand pounds. Exchange fluctuates a bit just now, and it's hard to say just how things stand. I'm chief legatee, myself."

"Thirty thousand pounds!"

Brian's brown knitted.

"Read it!" he said. "Who gets this money?"

McGinness adjusted his spectacles, and read:

"I, Bannister Coote of King's Ben House, declare this to be my last Will and testament . . . I bequeath to my servant JAMES SELBY for faithful service at the time of my death the sum of FIVE THOUSAND POUNDS; the same to go to his widow, SARAH SELBY under the same conditions, should she survive him. To DEBORAH SELBY, daughter of the above, FIVE HUNDRED POUNDS unconditionally.

The remainder of my personal estate, real and of nature and whatsoever situated, I bequeath to my old friend and fellow Hugo McGinness of White Hall Norchester, and I appoint him my sole Executor. As witness my hand."

Bannister Coote.

"And that's all," said Hugo McGinness, laying down the will. "Simple enough."

Brian stared at him in amazement.

"And about enough! McGinness, do you claim that "Bannister Coote was an old friend of mine; perhaps I was the only real friend he had; and his legal adviser—not that he ever took advice. A masterful man, and a richer man than I; I've had some business dealings with him. I've even financed him sometimes when he has been temporarily short of what one may call fluid funds."

McCarthy Dismissed On Stock Charge

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 27 (CP) — Charles McCarthy of the defunct firm of Jemmett, McCarthy and Company, stock brokers, today was dismissed on a charge of converting certain stock to his own use. His partner, Bruce G. M. Jemmett, a week ago was convicted on the same charge and sentenced to a year in the Ontario reformatory.

The stocks, property of Raymond F. Johnston of Kingston had been used to cover a loan from a bank. Jemmett swore McCarthy had nothing to do with the finances of the firm as he was merely a wire operator. McCarthy himself claimed he knew nothing to how the finances were handled.

Widow is Gagged And Men Steal

Bracebridge, Ont., Aug. 27.—(CP) — Mrs. Arthur Tiffen, a widow, who operates a horrido station and refreshment stand near here, was recovering today from a beating inflicted by three thugs who robbed her establishment. After being gagged and bound, Mrs. Tiffen was left in her home while the men stole money from the till, oil, gas and cigarettes.

Then! aloud, he read an excerpt from the closely written page. "Today I played a little joke on the English. When Lord Greystoke—known as Tarzan of the Apes—comes home, he'll find his wife's dead body, but he'll only THINK it is his wife. We substituted another body for hers. Put Lady G.'s rings on it, then partly burned it . . . "

"Exranoff was the Red officer who murdered Lady Greystoke." Quickly the ape-man pages, looking for a certain date; the day the horror had been committed—and then he found it he read rapidly. Suddenly a gasp of incredulity burst from his lips. "Can this be true?" exclaimed Tarzan. Listen!"

Ladybird, Ladybird, Where Do You Fly? In Most Thrilling of Races, Kind Sir!

Powder-Puff Speedsters Return to Stage Breath-Taking Events in U. S. National Air Show

By Central Press Canadian

Cleveland, Aug. 27.—Women fliers the "ladybirds of the air, will fly once more in the U. S. national air races to be held at Cleveland's municipal airport, Aug. 30 to Sept. 3.

Banned for two years, the powder-puff speedster will have a series or races all their own to add a special feature to the thrilling Thompson trophy race, the Bendix transcontinental race and the hundreds of other events on the program that each year holds hundreds of thousands of spectators on edge.

Clifford W. Henderson, managing director of the races, drew the ire of the "ladybirds" last year when no provision for their entry into the race program was made. But the women's peers became so down-hearted this year that Henderson has dropped the bars and the women fliers once again are on the program.

Woman Enters Bendix

Probably the most interesting feature of the lifted ban is the entry of one woman in the Bendix transcontinental derby, which hitherto has included only male racers.

Miss Jacqueline Cochran, Los Angeles society flier, has wired in her entry fee to Henderson to compete in the Bendix, appealing to the chivalry of the men pilots to let her compete. Henderson already has obtained permission for her entry from the National Aeronautic association, the sports body governing the races.

Whether Miss Cochran, who plans flying her speedy Northrop Gamma monoplane in the derby, will fly, is still questionable as the men pilots in the race must first waive the rule forbidding women entries.

The two big features on the program are the Bendix derby and the Thompson trophy race. Both events will have increased prize money and both will have most of the outstanding speed pilots in the country on the starting line.

Col. Roscoe Turner, winner of the Thompson trophy race last year in which Doug Davis, winner of the Bendix was killed, Johnny Worth, Lee Wallace, Vance Breese, Earl Ortmann and Cecil Allen are a few of the entries in the Bendix and Thompson races.

Other Events for "Ladybirds"

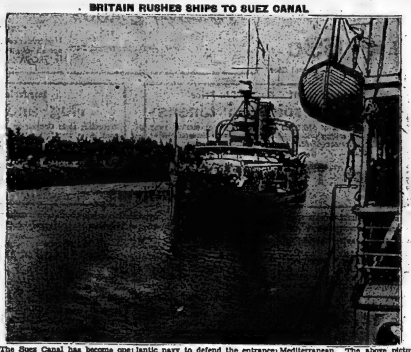
Other events for the "ladybirds" are the Amelia Earhart Putnam trophy race and the Ruth Chatterton transcontinental derby for sportsters-pilots, which is expected to include a number of movie stars.



Among the other events of the program are parachute jumping, army and navy aeroplane manoeuvres stunt flying, air battles and various closed course races. A number of foreign pilots are expected to attend to add an international flavor to the 1936 program.

RED-HEAD?

We can't tell from this new picture of Dixie Lee whether she really has red hair or not, but she is appearing in a new musical movie that concerns bright-haired ladies.

BRITAIN RUSHES SHIPS TO SUEZ CANAL

The Suez Canal has become one of the most strategic points in the African crisis, and Britain is reported rushing sections of her Atlantic navy to defend the entrance to the Red Sea. Malta is also being strengthened to outact Italy' attempt to gain supremacy in the Mediterranean. The above picture shows a British warship in the Suez canal, owned jointly by Britain, France and Holland.

Juggernaut Prepared for World's Record Assault

Ready for long and short speed distance records is this new monster speed car designed by George Eyston, the famous British racing driver, built in great secrecy in London. It will soon be taken to the United States to attack the world's record on famous Daytona Beach. It is powered by a 12 cylinder Rolls-Royce Kestrel aero motor, weighs about two tons, and bristles with novel points in its design.

NEW LAWS PERSECUTE GERMAN JEWS

Official reports from Germany and Catholics being carried with reports that Jews are now not permitted to use the street cars, big signs warning them that "Jews not wanted." Another new law forbids Jews and Aryans from marriage. The campaigning against Jews throng at the Berlin Palace.

ENGLAND'S SHIRLEY?

STIRLING CHURCH HOLDS SUPPER

Program Following Much Enjoyed by Large Gathering.

Stirling—With the weather very favorable for the occasion, a large number of people from near and far attended the chicken supper and social given by St. James' Church, Stirling, at the fair grounds on Monday evening, Aug. 26th. The long beautifully decorated tables directly brought their burden of good things to eat, indicating an enormous quantity of lovely young chicken, appetizing salads and garnishes which made up a supper which was truly a feast. The ladies of St. James Church are quite famous for the manner in which they prepare for such an evening. Shortly after five-thirty a large number of guests found themselves at the very attractive table, which covered the entire east wing of the Agricultural Building. At which time the many good things provided for refreshes began to function with minute precision, there was no waiting as these experienced ladies attended the wants of one and all, and every wish of the guests were very rapidly realized. The provision made through the fine co-operation of the various department heads was equal to the key to the success which crowned their effort. In each attempt, with every member of each carefully chosen committee knowing his or her duty it was carried through without the slightest confusion. Following this sumptuous meal an interesting and varied program was held, the audience in good spirits, the program which was put on by the local Boy Scouts under the capable direction of Scoutmaster Tom Ward, included boxing bouts, members of the troop giving the tumbling acts by some of the senior boys.

At about 8.30 p.m. Scoutmaster Tom Ward introduced the first exhibition in the ring, a boxing match which was a thrilling three round boxing bout between Max Lemmins and Madison Judd for the 75 lb. class, Mr. James Lagrow acted as official referee for the evening. These boys who are still quite young gave an excellent account of their ability in this line of sport. They were well matched and heartily applauded by the audience at the close of each interesting round. The judges were unable to reach the decision and the match declared a draw as the two boys left the ring amid rounds of applause. In the second fixture of the evening Don Ward and Gordon Ward, two of the senior boys of the middle weight class gave an excellent display with speed and cleverness being very pronounced. These lads stirred the crowd to real enthusiasm as they battled with apparent earnestness, but at the close of their strenuous three rounds, from the many shouts turned into smiles as the two shook hands and declared that neither the worse in either case for their efforts. This was a real sport as this being practiced in the gymnasium of the club rooms not only certainly proves to these boys but also their fondness for clean sport but also that the Stirling Boy Scouts have reason to be proud of their fully equipped gymnasium. This group of entertainers are becoming quite famous for the progress made in their exhibitions as this and one much in demand. The remainder of the evening's display of tumbling which embraced several difficult feats climaxed this portion of the program. The Misses Jean of Jimmy and Don Ward carried through their work on the parallel bars, hurdling and hand-springs, etc., and Cliff Rozenes acting as the clown of the act created a great deal of merriment in his awkward attempt to imitate their performance.

Games of chance such as bingo and coin tossing were well patronized by those present with numerous of the many valuable prizes won there, proudly exhibiting them to their friends. Numerous other features on the program included a professional entertainer from Oshawa who is considered a great deal to give to the people of Stirling and district a fine evening of real entertainment. The lake shore of the evening were spent in dancing to the music supplied by the Boy Scout Orchestra, with Stan Rice at the piano.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL
"The Awakening of Jim Burke"
Excellent Feature Picture Billed For Week End

Starting Thursday the Capitol Theatre will show two features that are regarded as one attraction as a single bill. But due to the fact that the management is attempting to inaugurate a New Movie Season during the first week of September, they are combining on the small-scale product—thereby giving patrons twice their money's worth.

With the showing of Jack Holt's latest starring vehicle, "The Awakening of Jim Burke" and the laugh-provoking comedy, "Lady Tubbs." In addition, the Capitol presents one of the most entertaining programs of the season.

Characteristic of Jack Holt's latest movies is the virility and human qualities portrayed by this popular star of the cinema. In "The Awakening of Jim Burke" Jack is the chief engineer in charge of a power project in which he uses his brawn to keep his men in line and to further his job in less constructive ways.

The death of his wife thrusts upon him the care of his twelve-year-old son, whom he has not seen for many years, being a man who thinks in terms of muscle and steam, the manner looks forward to seeing a boy who likes nothing better than playing his harmonica on a playmate's jaw. Instead the child turns out to be a carefully-reared, well-educated young fellow who cares assiduously for his appearance and manners.

A pretty storekeeper's daughter, Mary Astor, who has been the playing girl friend of the father, Kathleen Burke, serve in their own way to win him affection of the boy, with ultimate designs on the father. Jack Holt, with his vast family interesting romance scenes around Boulder Dam.

Amidst exploding mountains, hazardous engineering feats, Jack Holt, Mary Astor and Kathleen Burke are said to do some outstanding work in the picture.

Also on the program is Edgar Kennedy and Ralph Bennly, Hal Roach's latest comedy, "Lady Tubbs," will prove the season's outstanding comedy success, with Alice Brady providing the feature.

There is a rollicking dashing lady about to be introduced in this picture of rare delight.

Alice Brady's most happily cast as the plain-spoken cook in a railroad construction camp, who finds herself suddenly elevated to the spurious title of "Lady Tubbs," in order to help the young engineer in her niece with Montgomery, son of a wealthy contractor, who has been previously locked with disdain on the young girl became the lady she pretended to be.

The story opens in a railroad construction camp, where Alice is a frank, Long Island country bone of contention.

Besides Alice Brady, there is Louis Louise, June Clayworth, Edgar Kennedy, Donald Meek and Alan Mowbray in the cast of fun makers.

A Fox Movietone Newsreel brings the latest world events with world wide pictorial to complete the excellent program.

Starting Friday night at 12.01 the Capitol will conduct a Midnite Preview of their feature film of the day, Aug. 23rd from his late residence in Belleville. He is survived by one uncle of Mr. Harry Foster and Mrs. Fyear.

AT THE BELLE
"Little Men"
Louisa M. Alcott's Greatest Romance Presented on Film.

"Ideal family entertainment" is the term used by more than a score of prominent civic and religious organizations to endorse "Little Men," Maxwell Hunt's film made from Louisa M. Alcott's wholesome best seller and said to be based on fact which comes to the Belle tomorrow and Friday, matinee and evening.

Questionnaires on the film was recently sent to these organizations by the producers of "Little Men" in answer to widespread public demand for clean, yet interesting motion pictures.

The story, which has proven a favorite with children and grown-ups through the past three generations, deals with a charming rural school kept at Plumfield in 1870 New England by kindly "Professor Bhaer" (Edmund Breon) and Mrs. Morgan and his lovable wife "Jo" (Erin O'Brien-Moore) and with their score of "Little Men" and women who are there to love and learn. The strong child romance of the Professor and Jos is a poignant highlight.

Prominent among the youthful stars in the cast are Ralph Forbes, Cora Sue Collins, Phyllis Fraser, and the "little men": Frankie Darro, David Durand, Dickie Moore, Ted Alexander, Buster Phelps, Ronnie Ware, Tommy Mason, Billy Cox, Dickie Jones, Richard Quine, Donald Haines, George Breon and Eddie Dale Holden. Hattie McDaniels, Margaret Mann, Gussie von Seyffertitz, Marcia Mae Jones, Irving Bacon, Finis Barton, Robert Cadwen, and other others are also seen.

Jean Blondell Comedy

Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell and Hugh Herbert have been the source of riotous laughter in their latest pictures including "Travelling Saleslady," "Easy Living" "Reformer and "Havana Widows."

Now they are together again in a brand new comedy of the most hilarious comedy romance of all, "We're In the Money" the Warner Bros. picture which will be the second feature attraction on the same program.

"The Keeper of the Bees"

Gene Stratton Folter's famous novel, "Keeper of the Bees" came to the screen of the Belle yesterday with all Hamilton and Betty Furness in the featured roles, against the colorful background of a six coast California community. The film is a faithful transcription of the Porter novel, and was adapted from the novel which has sold more than 1,500,000 copies in its initial publication. Edmund Love and Rosemary Ames in "The Great Hotel Murder" complete the cast. Interviews were also shown. The entire program will be repeated for the last times tonight.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 29 (CP)—George Dandrea, 36, of Brooklyn, N.Y., suffered a fractured leg in a race track accident and discovered on his way to a hospital that he had lost his pocketbook. Sympathetic friends searched the track without success. The wallet was found, with cash intact, in the pan beneath the engine of the racer, which struck him.

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP)—Mrs. Mary Ellen Lisco, 75, had determined to die but not to relinquish the welfare of others. Her niece, Miss Mary Daley, told the police she found Mrs. Lisco with the tubes in the kitchen door:

"Don't enter. Don't open the door. If you light a match, there will be an explosion. I wanted to do this last week but you wouldn't go out and I didn't have the chance."

Mrs. Lisco was found dead inside. A gas jet was open.

Edmonton, Aug. 29 (CP)—Residents of Lake Isle, popularly "lake H.", They have no intention of moving their townsite to a new location, they declare. And no less an authority on the question was A. Caudell, proprietor of an hotel thru flooded and then destroyed by fire. Caudell's been yesterday, denied the town would be moved.

Estevan, Sask., Aug. 29 (CP)—Railway Avenue and Second Street have been graveled and are now Social Credit roads. Premier Aberhart labelled the roads "graded the gravel, merchants' tax and wages were credited with the money contributed to the scheme, farmers contributed, and the people got the finished job."

The farmers paid his account, the merchants paid theirs and the municipality got the road without a dollar changing hands.

Kamloops, B.C., Aug. 29 (CP)—Kamloops Valley growers and shippers, estimating a provincial commercial apple yield of 2,000,000 boxes, were heartened forward to a profitable season today, following reports of abatement of the severe cold central Canadian markets. The first overseas shipment of the season's apples will be made from Halifax, Sept. 6.

Wallaceburg, Ont., Aug. 29 — (CP)—Max Clifford of Wallaceburg, and a fellow-township farmer, discovered a large copperhead snake coiled beneath a shed. Bill Armitage, a level man, flicked the snake to death with his hoe. Measured, the reptile measured six feet in length and was as big around as a man's wrist.

Belgium Plunged Into Deepest Grief

Brussels, Belgium, Aug. 30.—(AP)—The Belgian nation was plunged in the deepest grief today for the second time in less than two years by reports of the tragic death of Queen Astrid near Lucerne, Switzerland, where she had gone with the King for a holiday.

King Albert, beloved ruler who had heroically led the nation through the darkest days of the Great War, was killed while mountain climbing at Marche Les Dames, Feb. 17, 1934.

Queen Astrid's home life and her addiction for the nation's poor and distressed brought her a wide affection from high and low of the little nation.

She spent many hours with her own hands preparing distribution of relief supplies to economically distressed especially among the distressed of the mining areas.

Brussels' mothers on a number of occasions sent letters to her, pushing a perambulator through the public park during the royal baby's just like any commoner mother in the capital.

The day after she came to Belgium in 1926 as Leopold's bride, Astrid accompanied her husband at the annual ceremony at the tomb of the unknown soldier. This simple gesture endeared her immediately to the Belgians.

So beloved was the Queen the nation even copied her characteristic gesture of greeting—a wave of the hand with the knuckles outward—which has come into popular use throughout the country.

BRITISH TRADERS SEE COUNTRYSIDE AND INDUSTRIES

Twenty-Three Members of Maple Leaf Party Welcomed to City

MANY TOURS MADE

Party Entertained as Guests at Luncheon Served at Belleville Fair

Twenty three members of the British Maple Leaf Tour Party, representing as many leading wholesale importing houses and business concerns in the British Isles, and now engaged in a planned tour of Canada and Quebec provinces, in order to study at first hand Canadian production and marketing methods, entered Belleville early last evening and were guests of the city today during their brief stay here.

The distinguished visitors, many of whom were in the same Tour Party which visited Belleville just one year ago at this time, were met at the North Station by Mayor Geo. O. Tice, members of the local Chamber of Commerce and the City Council. Their special train conveyed the party from Peterborough, their last stop. Official welcome and freedom of the city was given by the Mayor in a few words of welcome after which the visitors were taken by private cars to the Hotel Quinte where previous arrangements for their stopover during the night, and today had been made. The visitors spent the evening at the hotel resting, and during a few turns around some of the principal streets of the city before retiring. A delegation, representing canning companies of Prince Edward County were also entertained as part of the party, who are combining their pleasure tour with the business of buying Canadian goods for orders for Canadian goods.

Welcome Appreciated

Frankly pleased at the civic welcome Belleville extended them on this and the previous occasion, the visitors were loud in their praise of the hospitality that has been shown by their municipality and the leading cities of Ontario and Quebec province they have stopped in.

This morning shortly after nine-thirty o'clock a dozen or more cars headed by members of the city council, of the Chamber of Commerce and by some of the citizens awaited upon the visitors at the hotel, and took them on a brief tour of the district, during which time the agricultural advantages of the section were pointed out. The complimentary interests was the party in the numerous orchards and well kept farms, the well managed cheese factories and other points of interest. The tour ended at the Belleville Fair grounds where the visitors dined at noon with members of the local Fair Board. Previous to luncheon, they were guided through the various buildings on the grounds and examined closely the many agricultural, manufactured and home made exhibits. Keen interests in the dairy products and vegetable exhibits was displayed by the visitors.

KELLOG-BRIAND PACT INVOCATION THOUGHT POSSIBLE

Zero Hour Approaches in North East African Crisis

Premier Laval Says Peace Task "Difficult But Possible"

(By Charles P. Nutter)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Aug. 30.—(AP)—The Kellogg-Briand Peace Pact, signed in Paris amid many enthusiastic declarations it outlawed war, today stands as the final bulwark against Italo-Ethiopian war in the view of the British Government.

It is learned from a source close to the Government that Britain, should all other efforts fail and Mussolini invade Ethiopia, hopes the United States and France will jointly summon for consultation all the signatories of this instrument to bring the full moral force of the world down upon Mussolini's head as an international outlaw and destroyer of world peace.

Opposing Armies

London, Aug. 30.—(CP Cables)—The zero hour approaches in the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel with all its uncertain repercussions.

Mussolini has made it abundantly clear he means to subdue Ethiopians by force. He is placing orders for 100,000 pairs of army boots in Northern Italy and for many overcoats and 300,000 army blankets in Poland.

Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia is moving his bodyguard forces from Addis Ababa to the front, and from Addis Ababa today estimated that Ethiopian troops of 4 rifles armed men of whom only eight per cent. can read or write. That is nonsense. Twenty to thirty per cent. of the remainder have received partial training. The real fighting strength who will fight their own war—their only equipment is fighting spirit.

Outlook Not Promising

Paris, Aug. 30.—(AP)—French officials today despaired of preventing conflict between Italy and Ethiopia and hoped merely to lessen the violence and confine it to Africa.

Premier Laval was expected to ask Premier Laval to proceed with a free hand at the League of Nations Council meeting at Geneva next Wednesday and to place France's safety above Mediterranean and Ethiopian war.

Laval started the final week of his peace search with success "difficult but possible", Success, French officials agree, means only peace in Europe.

THREE WORKERS CRUSHED BY ROCK

Cave-in Occurs in Tunnel Near Oakland

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 29—(AP)—Three workers lay dead today, crushed under tons of rock and dirt, a fourth was seriously hurt and five narrowly escaped last night in a cave-in at a $2,253,000 higher tunnel here near here.

Bodies of the three trapped men were said by Stephen D. Bechtel, head of the Construction Company buying the tunnel, to be under the tons of earth and rock which caved from the north portal.

A crew of 200 men were put to work in short shifts to clear the portal and recover the bodies.

Those killed were—Roy Houchin, 30, of Berkeley; Ernest Davis, 35, of Oakland.

Steven Boljon, 44, Oakland.

Young Farmers of 3 Counties Prove Fine Judges at Fair

37 Girls And 45 Farm Boys Take Part in Junior Program

JUDGING TRIALS

This year, for the first time, a Junior Department was added to the Belleville Fair and so enthusiastic was the response of the youthful farmers of this district that it is expected a similar department will be included each year in the Fair program. Thirty-seven girls and forty-five boys entered the competition, the entrants being from Hastings, Northumberland and Prince Edward Counties.

In the girls' section there was an exhibit of clothing, judging contest in picture requiring the contestant to score dresses, judge the dress parade, sew on a button and work a buttonhole; and an inter-club team demonstration of "Cotton May Be Smart."

Young Judges

The competitions for boys included judging of grain and seed, live stock and cream grading. The live stock showmanship competition was one of the most interesting items on the junior program. Twenty-seven boys entered and were required to show animals in the judging ring. Prizes were awarded to those who handled and showed the animals to best advantage. The majority of the competitions were held yesterday. The cream grading competition for which prizes were donated by the Belleville Creameries, the boys' calf (Continued on Page 6)

One of the most interesting visitors Canada has had in the privilege of entertaining recently is Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, chief economic adviser to the British government. He is shown, above in Vancouver, on his way to China where he will attempt to solve that country's economic tangle. Sir Frederick is frank in his admission that the British government and the British financial interests are worried about conditions in China.

Queen Astrid Hurled Against Tree As King Loses Control of Motor; Dies in Arms of Injured Monarch

Road by Peaceful Lake Scene of Shocking Tragedy

ROYALTY ON HOLIDAY

King Leopold Ordered to Bed by Doctor Who is Called to Scene

Lucerne, Switzerland, Aug. 29.—(AP)—Astrid, beautiful young Queen of the Belgians, was killed today when an automobile driven by her husband, King Leopold, went off the road and hit a tree.

The King suffered cuts and bruises but was not badly injured. He was unable to explain the cause of the accident.

The young royal couple—she was 29 years old, he 32—were driving speedily down the pleasant lakeside road near Kussnacht, under a bright sun. Behind them, in the rear seat, rode their chauffeur.

The speed car was a new one, estimated at between 50 and 55 miles an hour on the smooth concrete highway.

Another car, close behind, rode a gentleman and lady-in-waiting with a chauffeur. They said later they thought they saw the King turn his head to look at the mountains bordering Lake Vier Waldstatter See" near Kussnacht, nine miles east of Lucerne.

Skull Fractured

The Royal car swerved off the road and, with enough ground both the King and Queen were thrown out. The Queen's head struck a tree and her skull was fractured. The car swerved on, and the chauffeur of the royal party was killed when his automobile was suddenly off to the lake.

The King was not crying. He seemed stunned by the blow and stared at his dead wife with his face drawn.

A man and woman who were beside him said they were part of the entourage and introduced me to a doctor from my town who was already there. The man and woman gave me the King's and Queen's joint passport which was in the name of Monsieur and Madame Lambert. . . .

King Seemed as in Trance

The King stood as though he were in a trance beside the body of the Queen until the doctor suggested he ride back to Kussnacht to get his wife's body removed there before going to Lucerne.

The King waited until the ambulance arrived from Lucerne, then climbed into the car and went to Kussnacht from where he followed his wife's body to Lucerne. The chauffeur who also was badly hurt was taken direct to Lucerne.

It was horrible . . . the whole scene was one of shock and amazement.

The doctor just examined the Queen and found she was dead. The King's entourage told me she died in his arms.

Crowd Does Not Disturb King

A crowd of more than five or perhaps ten minutes after the accident happened when the only people there were the King and Queen, the chauffeur, the King, the doctor and the chauffeur but in a few minutes the whole countryside was gathered on the highway.

Most of the farmers were from the neighborhood but all recognized the King and did not disturb him in his grief.

The King must have stood beside the body of his dead wife for an hour before the ambulance arrived. Then after he left with the doctor his injured chauffeur and the two members of the entourage, the crowd gathered until we had to make a lane through the throng.

Gendarme's Story Of Tragic Scene

(By Hugo Hackenbuh)

(Gendarme of Kussnacht)

Kussnacht, Switzerland, Aug. 29—(AP)—The first person I noticed when I arrived first on the scene of the accident was a man standing with torn clothes near a tree by the roadside.

I recognized immediately from photographs he was the King of the Belgians. I addressed him but he said nothing. I looked on the ground and saw the Queen lying dead.

I had been called by a farmer on Lucerne Road, a few miles away, who told me there had been a terrible accident on the highway. I jumped in the car with another gendarme and arrived at the scene where one automobile was sidelong off in the lake.

SWEDISH PEOPLE WEEP IN STREETS FOR QUEEN ASTRID

Prince Carl, Anti Princess Ingeborg Will Fly to Lucerne

Sockholm, Aug. 30 (AP)—Aging Prince Carl and Princess Ingeborg mournfully chartered an airplane today to fly to Lucerne, Switzerland, to join the bereaved royal husband of their daughter, Queen Astrid of the Belgians.

They were almost prostrated by the news of the automobile accident in which their daughter was killed. They regained their composure quickly, however, and it was with grace Ingeborg herself, who asked the plane be chartered.

The news had been broken to them at their country home at Frideham, the scene of many happy family reunions of former years. Princess Ingeborg is staying there with her sisters. Since her marriage to Prince Carl, the Princess' only children there for an annual visit with their grandparents.

Beloved by Swedes

Citizens of Stockholm were openly in the streets of the capital as they learned of the death of their beloved Astrid.

The Belgian Queen had the unbounded popularity in this native land, as the most beloved of Swedish Princesses. Many de-

Taking Look at Map When Car Left Road

Kussnacht, Switzerland, Aug. 29 (AP)—King Leopold told members of his entourage after the accident which claimed the life of Queen Astrid today:

"I leaned over to look at the map (which the Queen was holding). It lasted only a second and when I looked again at the road, the car was almost on top of a tree."

Trouble Europe Forgets War Fears in Presence of Tragedy

QUEEN ACCOMPLISHED

Astrid Truly Queen of Belgian Royal Household

(By The Canadian Press)

Troubled Europe temporarily forgot its war fears today to mourn the sudden death of beautiful young Queen Astrid of the Belgians, killed in a motor car accident in Switzerland in which King Leopold was injured, possibly suffering a fractured jaw.

Adored in Belgium and Sweden, admired elsewhere, the 29-year-old former Swedish princess, mother of three young children, died in the arms of her young husband, who succeeded to the Belgian throne on the death of King Albert—killed while mountain-climbing—18 months ago.

Belgium in Grief

Belgium was plunged into grief. The lovely girl had taken her place as leadership and poise as a Brussels and established herself firmly in the hearts of the citizens of her adopted land.

Sweden mourned her. Britain was shocked and the King and Queen will issue a message tonight. Former Prime Minister Ramsay Macdonald said (9:30 p.m. the King accepted) but for his whole people one can only use the phrase "completely."

In the Netherlands, in France, in Italy and over the whole continent sympathy was extended.

To a large part of the world she was the royal sweetheart whose wedding had drawn multitudes of the world's most glittering names. She had received the names of the Prince of Wales and his unmarried brothers invited with those of other "eligible" bachelors in rumors told and retold.

Democratic Accustomed

When first Princess Astrid was betrothed to the then Prince Leopold of Belgium, the Belgian King and Queen called newspapermen to the palace to announce the event in the democratic, unstilted manner that characters men only of the parents but of the popular Swedish princess.

From her girlhood Queen Astrid was trained to many accomplishments. Slender and of medium height, she was fond of outdoor sports, was a good horsewoman, beautiful dancer and averse to pomp and display. Her dress was always simple. She was a fair musician with a pleasing voice.

Brilliance in Womanly Sphere

But in her domestic accomplishments Queen Astrid shone with the greatest brilliance. She had been trained at a school of nursing and had made a special study of what she considered an art—the business of running a household.

Princess Astrid was married to Prince Leopold of Belgium at Stockholm in a simple ceremony witnessed by few things, you guess, and a host of princes and princesses Nov. 4, 1926, in what was described by the Belgian Queen's mother as a "love match". The bride was given a birthday party for her dance on the eve of the wedding.

The Queen's death in Switzerland left surviving her husband, Princess Charlotte, aged six, Baudouin Prince of Belgium, aged four, the Crown, and Albert, born in June of last year.

Sucks Water Thru Kerchief From Lungs To Resuscitate Boy

Toronto, Aug. 29.—(CP)—When William P. McVarish, 47, saved the life of eight-year-old Bruce Kennedy after he had taken the boy's body from the waters of Don River, yesterday, he used a method unheard of resuscitation, it was learned today.

McVarish placed a handkerchief over the mouth of the boy and slowly sucked the water from his lungs. He continued the operation which he claimed was the most effective method of resuscitation for almost an hour until the boy uttered a cry.

The boy showed every symptom of death, McVarish said. "When I lifted him to the bank he was cold," he stated.

POLICE AID SEARCH FOR LOCAL MAN

Local and Provincial police were yesterday notified of the mysterious disappearance of a well known resident, Mr. John Graham, 10 Everett street, who has not been heard of since early Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Graham, a well known 74-year-old citizen, left his home on Tuesday afternoon and while he was going to attend the Belleville Fair and has not been seen or heard of since. A description of the aged man was issued to the various police departments in hopes that he might be located. He is also a great lover of horses and attended the Fair in order to view the exhibit of race horses. It is expected he may be found in the vicinity where race horses are the centre of attraction.

DEFECTIVE WIRING PROBABLE CAUSE

The local fire department were called to the corner of Foster Ave. and Reid Dundas street, at 11.00 a.m. today where they successfully extinguished a blaze, that was threatening an American tourist automobile. The fire started under the hood of the vehicle, and is believed to have been caused by defective wiring. The department extinguished the blaze by means of chemicals and little damage was reported to have happened to the vehicle.

POLICE BLOTTER

With the emergency brake becoming disengaged in some unknown manner, a driverless Ford automobile crashed down Victoria Ave. crossing the south pavement and crashing into the old Intelligencer building at 10.30 p.m. last evening. Constable Evans and Constable Evans were notified of the incident and upon their arrival at the scene of the accident found the vehicle, bearing license plates number Ont. 201, wedged against the building. Concerted efforts of the police and passersby successfully pushed the automobile back to the street. The vehicle had previously been parked near the intersection of Pinnacle Street and Victoria Ave., but it some unknown manner the emergency brake became disengaged, the car rolling westward until it crossed the avenue and crashed the building. No damage resulted, police stated today.

Mr. M. Adams, Thomasburg, reported the theft of a tire and rim to the authorities today. Mr. Adams informed the police he had parked his motor car at the upper end of Front Street last night, while shopping. During his absence the spare tire and rim were removed from the back of his car. The matter was not reported until today, however.

Arthur Cornell, local iceman, reported the killing of a dog on Catherine Street yesterday afternoon. Mr. Cornell informed the authorities he was driving his truck westward on Catherine Street when a large dog ran out from the curb, directly underneath the rear wheels of the vehicle. The canine was run over and died instantly. Traffic Officer Roe investigated and had the carcass removed by the city scavenger.

Seven tired and weary transients were afforded a night's lodging at the police station last night, after being instructed to vacate the city limits immediately. Two speeders were recipients of summonses and they will appear in police court tomorrow also been issued to motorists relative to the non-stopping of motor vehicles at local stop streets.

Second Annual Maple Leaf Party Welcomed to Exhibition

PROGRESS OF FAIR

President Walter Aselstine Tells of Efforts to Improve Event

At the railway mark of the Belleville Fair today, President Walter Aselstine took the occasion to voice a note of appreciation for the manner in which local and district residents had so far shown their support for the annual event.

"We have the best part of the Fair before us just now, and so far we are pleased with the results. But we will need the continued support of the local citizens and outside visitor to make it the success we hope to; it is upon the general support of the people depends for success," voiced the president.

"We are open for any suggestion from anyone who wishes to help us along and make their fair their's in fact as well as name. We have been hard work whipping this into shape and every one of the directors and members have been hard at work since last January. We have tried to benefit this year through our experience of the past, but there are always some that have overlooked. If we have, we sincerely trust they be pointed out to us. The average fair visitor can be carrying around some idea for betterment, and might mention it to us. It is his or her suggestion we want.

"One of the bright spots of the Fair today was the visit to the grounds of the British Maple Leaf Tour Party who arrived in the city early last evening from Belleville. Conscientiously and capably did Mayor Ellis of the City of Belleville honors of welcoming the visitors at the Exhibition, help in transporting them to the Quinte Hotel where reservation for their overnight stay had been made, and personally did the and members of the local Chamber of Commerce with the assistance also of a few public spirited citizens, call for them at nine-thirty this morning with cars in order to show them the city and district before the Fair opened. Afterward they were piloted to the large 4-H Club grounds where directors of the Fair Board were hosts to the visitors at midday luncheon.

"Business men all were these Maple Leaf Party members, and representatives of some of the largest wholesale importing firms and other concerns in the province. Keenly interested were they in the fruit and dairy exhibits displayed in the centre of attraction, the livestock exhibits on the outside. Carefully did the members note points of this and that, scribbling hastily underneath the rear wheels of the vehicle. The caution was run over and died instantly. Traffic Officer Roe investigated and had the carcass removed by the city scavenger.

It was the Mayor's second experience in piloting the party through the fair grounds and piloting the party through the streets of the district. This is the second year the tour has visited Belleville, and the Mayor was pleased to note they were last year are renewing friendships again. The manner in which we have been received all through Ontario has been marvellous, really," the visitors commented time and again while here. "And while in the City of Belleville we were particularly noticed this friendly welcome they met with. We can only hope that some day we shall be able to return the favor."

Two Bricklayers in Maple Leaf Party Praise Local Product
What was the first and one of the most pleasing impression at the local two members of the Maple Leaf party now in this city receiving on their entry into Belleville?
Not the beautiful tree shaded streets; not the friendly welcome that has met on all sides; and repeatedly commented upon. Not even the busy and lively air of the chief manufacturing plants which were observed.
The thing that struck us most forcibly was the quality of Belleville bread. The Hinds Estate supplied us with the best baker's bread for breakfast this morning that we have tasted since we arrived in Canada," declared Mr. Charles Innes, London England, and head of the large chain of "Purus Bakeries" which stretch the length and breadth of the British Isles.
"This bread, which I found out later was baked by one of your local bakeries—I took pains even to learn the name—has was just bread. It wasn't a mixture of cake flour and sweetening that we have been offered at other places, and we truly enjoyed it for our meal. If I had known of this bread sooner I would have had some sent on to the next stop," stated Mr. Innes.

GRANDSTAND ACTS PLEASE CROWDS

Men's Chorus Feature of Wednesday Night at Fair

Fresh from their recent triumphant radio debut at radio station CFCO during which time their voices were broadcast throughout the continent, over a chain network, Belleville's own Men's Chorus, one of the feature attractions of a sparkling wonderful performance held the spotlight in front of the grandstand at the local fair last evening.

Spontaneous was the ovation accorded them as members of the chorus, under the capable leadership of Mr. Ross Elmiger, faced the hundreds in the packed grandstand, and insistent was the demand for an encore at the last harmonious notes of their blended voices died into silence at the finish of the last song. The effort, so well received and so excellently given, showed the result of diligent training and compared most favorably with any of the better class four choruses yet heard in this city.

To the accompaniment of the piano played by Mr. Alec Gordon, the male voices which hardly needed radio amplification through loudspeakers, sang easily into such old-time favorites as the "Whiting Song," "In the Chestnut Tree" and many others which offered the chorus an excellent chance to reveal the wide range and characterization of the melodies through skilful blending. Particularly apt was the salty rendition of the forecastle chantey "Rolling Down to Rio" delivered with the true fervor of the rolling sea.

Chorus Tonight

To many of the hundreds who listened and enjoyed the splendid program, the Men's Chorus were appearing for the first time. Last night was the initial offering at the local fair, and the program will be repeated again with variations this evening. Judging by the tenor of applause rendered, their appearance was just another triumph delivered in a new setting and with new and novel effects.

Well received were the many other acts of the glittering grandstand performances. Again those super-intelligent poodles, with their comic human male stooges amused and delighted with their repertoire of tricks performed with an ease that belied their skill and effort. The act is the same as that which elicited glowing praise and press mention in the Belleville fair of this country and the United States.

Elmiger Gives Chorus

A riot of rollicking comedy which, blended with some of the best tap dancing and novelty stage acts in this city, earned a rousing welcome for the Elmiger Chorus. Similar-type ebony-hued performers who displayed equal facility with hands and feet, hoofing and playing rattling dominoes.

Startling and intricate were the skilful acrobatics engaged in by The Acrobatic Four, who gave one of the best exhibitions of gymnastics.

Again, while spectators craned their necks and seemingly held their breath for agonizing minutes, the aerial kings, bending and swaying perilously on their flimsy wire, fragile steel tower performed their gravity-defying feats, over one hundred odd ten feet above the ground. Between them and earth there stretched only the tantalizing and jagged wires and stakes. Their spidery platform, shook with the breeze, yet spectators were treated to a first-class circus aerialist performance.

Again tonight it will all be repeated.

ARENA GARDENS TO OPEN DANCE FLOOR

Up-to-Date Centre of Amusement Has Large Floor Space

Belleville's newest and most up-to-date centre of amusement will be officially opened to the public on Saturday evening when the new spacious dance floor at the Belleville Arena Gardens will be thrown open for the first time. Mayor Ellis Mayor Tice has graciously consented to officially open the most up-to-date dancing centre in Eastern Ontario.

For the past month workmen have been busy building a large attractive dance floor in Belleville Arena and today completed the work of polishing the floor. The dancing floor is 60 x 40 and made of the best procurable hardwood. A large stage and dressing rooms for entertainers is being erected in the centre of the Belleville Arena Gardens and potted palms, lighting effects and decorations will all be finally arranged to harmonize with the new attraction before the doors swing open to the public on Saturday night.

Obituary

LATE MRS. JOSEPH GOOSENS

Wednesday afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Joseph Goosens took place from her late residence at Smithfield and many friends were present at the impressive service which was conducted in the house by the Rev. Mr. Siemon, rector of the Church of England at Brighton, who also conducted the committal service at the graveside in Frankford cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. H. T. Miller, W. N. Simmons, M. Barker, Enoch Hoard, Fred Hendricks and Roy Freeman.

Hog Rail Grading Exhibit Attracts

Of considerable interest to farmers who wish to learn the method by which hogs are graded, the Dominion Department of Agriculture exhibit of rail grading at the Belleville Fair is attracting many visitors. The exhibit is in a large tent near the junior farmers' department. Five main grades are demonstrated by live hogs and the carcasses they would produce. In the process of rail grading, these carcasses are weighed on electric automatic scales and graded by a Dominion government grader. It is quite evident from this exhibit that the farmer receives better protection in the sale of his hogs than he does for any other article produced on the farm. Farmers are cordially invited to visit the exhibit and express their views regarding rail grading.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

This new condition made impossible my plan of getting under the bridge, for one thing all the men on the back of the car would have set off our gunnodon and blown us to blazes; for another, the car was helpless against a lobbed shell to side. So we drew off, perplexed to understand this defence lavished on a bit of railway, and much interested, indeed amused, at worthy opposition after so long rest. In our imaginations, Check was a short, compact, furious man, darting glances every way from beneath tangled eye-brows, for an end to his troubles; beside him Thody seemed a lanky, white-skinned, rather languid woman. We must try again after dark.

At Um el Surab we found that Nasir wished to fix camp once more at Umtaiye. It was a first siege of our journey to Damascus, so his wish delighted me, and we agreed; winning thereby good report for doing nothing this night of the hour. Instead, we sat and told stories of experience and waited for midnight, when the Handley-Page was to bomb Mafrak station. It came, and hundredpound bomb after hundred-pound bomb crashed into the packed sidings till they caught fire, and the Turks' shooting stopped.

All night, and next day, the line among the trees burned greater and greater. It was proof of the breakdown of the Turkish rule the Arabs had been rumouring since yesterday. They said the Fourth Army was streaming up from Amman in a loose mob. The Beni Hassan, who were cutting off stragglers and weak detachments, compared them to pigsies on the march.

We held a council. Our work against the Deraa line was finished. Such remnants as avoided out of the hands of the Arabs would reach Deraa as unarmed straggler. Our new endeavour should be to force the Yarmuk junction at Deraa. In order to prevent the Turks there reinforcing the fugitives into a rear-guard. So I proposed that we march north, past Tell Arar, and over the railway at dawn tomorrow, into Sheikh Saad village. It lay in a familiar country with abundant water, perfect observation, and a secure retreat west or north, on even southwest, if we were directly attacked. It cut off Deraa from Damascus and Haifa-Beersh also.

Talal seconded me with fervour. Nuri Shaalan gave his nod; Nasir and Nuri Saad. So we prepared to strike camp. The armoured cars could not come with us. They had better stay in Azrak; till Deraa fell, and we wanted them to help us into Damascus. The Bristol Fighters, likewise, had done good work in clearing the air of Turkish aeroplanes. They might return to Palestine with news of our move to Sheih Saad.

Off they circled. We, watching their line of flight, noticed a great cloud of dust added to the oily smoke from ruined Mafrak. One machine turned back and dropped a scribble that a large body of hostile cavalry were heading out from the railway toward us.

This was unwelcome news, for we were not in trim for a fight. The cars had gone, the aeroplanes had gone, one company of the mounted infantry had marched, Pisani's mules were packed and drawn up in column. I went off to Nuri Saad, standing with Nasir on an ash heap at the head of the hill, and we wavered whether to run or stand. At last it seemed wiser to run, since Sheikh Saad was a more profitable stop-block. So we hurried the regulars away.

Yet things could hardly be left like that. Accordingly Nuri Shaalan and Talal led the Rualla horse and the Nazran horse back to delay the pursuit. They had an unexpected ally, for our cars, on their way to Azrk, had seen the enemy. After all, the Turks were not cavalry coming to attack us, but defeated elements seeking a shorter way home. We took some hundreds of thirsty prisoners and much transport; causing such panic that the armoured rout in the plain cut the tracers of their limbers and rode off on the bare horses. The infection of terror spread down the line and troops miles from any Arab interference threw away all they had, even to their rifles, and made a mad rush towards supposed safety in Deraa.

However, this interruption delayed us: for we could hardly march a khaki-clad body of regular camel corps across Hauran at night without arousing the cavalry to go ball to the suspicious villagers that we were not Turks. So late in the afternoon we halted for Talal and Nasir and Nuri Shaalan to catch up.

They had overshot us in the dark. Our joined forces marched with a heady breeze in the teeth, northward across the plough-lands' fat, happy villages. Over the understeel fields, whose straw had been rather plucked than reaped, grew thistles, tall as a child, but now yellow and dried and dead. The wind snapped them off at the bottom roots and pitch-polled their branchy tops along the level ground, thistle blowing against thistle and interlocking, until in huge balls they careered like runaway hay-cocks across the fallow.

Arab women, out with their donkeys to fetch water, ran to us crying that an aeroplane had landed a while since, nearby. It was the round rings of the machine's flan camel hrand upon its body. Peasants rode across, to find two Australians whose Bristol had been hit in the radiator over Deraa. They were glad, though in captivity, to meet friends. After the leak had been plugged, we divided water from the women to fill them up, and they flew home safely.

Men rode up every minute and joined us, while from each village the adventurous young ran out afoot to enter our ranks. As we moved on, so closely that in the golden sunlight, we were able, in rare chance, to see ourselves as a whole; giddily we became a spectacle, all organism, in whose pride each of us was uplifted. We created bawdy jokes to act off the encompassing beauty.

At noon we entered water-melon fields. The army ran upon them, while we spied out the land. Nuri Shaalan, deserted quivering in the sunlight ahead. As we watched it train lumbered down. The last night had the railway been mended, and this was the third train. Turks, moved without opposition upon the line in the two miles across, and began hastily to blow up bridges, any one who had explosive using it as he handed. Our hundreds of novices were full of zeal and the demolitions, albeit unistructured, were wide.

Clearly our return had surprised the Gaadi enemy; we must extend and improve this chance. So we went to Nuri Shaalan, Auda, and Talal and asked what local effort each would undertake. Talal, the energetic, would attack Deraa, the big grain depot to the north. Auda was for Khirbet el Ghamle the corresponding station southward. Nuri would sweep his men down the plain road, forward Deraa, on chance of Turkish parties.

These were three good ideas. The chiefs went to put them into being while we, pulling our column to its shape again, pursued our road past the ruined colony of Sheikh Miskin, very gaunt in the moonlight. The obstacle of war ditches muddled our thousands, so that we halted on the stubble plain beyond, for dawn. Some made fires against the penetrating mist of this clay Hauran; others slept as they were on the dew-slimy ground. Last men went about calling their friends, in that sharp, full-throated wail of the Arab villager. The moon had set, and the world was black and very cold.

It roused my bodyguard, who rode so briskly that we entered Sheikh Saad with the dawn. As we passed between the rocks into the field behind the trees, the earth sprang to life again with the new sun. The morning air flashed the five-yards to silver, and men from a great goat-hair tent on the right called us to guest with the cry.

The parties of the night returned, full of spoil. Ezra had been feebly held by Abd el Kader, the Algerian, with his retainers, some volunteers, and troops. When Talal came the volunteers joined him, the troops fled, and the retainers were so few that Abd al Kader had to abandon the place without fighting. Our men were too heavy with their great booty to catch him.

Auda came, boasting. He had taken el Ghamle by storm, capturing a derelict train, guns and two hundred men, of whom some were German. Nuri Shaalan reported four hundred prisoners with mules and machine-guns. The rank and file of Turks had been farmed out to remote villages, to earn their keep.

An English aeroplane flew round and round, wondering if we were the Arab force. Young spread out ground signals, and to him they dropped a message that Bulgaria had surrendered to the Allies. We had not known there was an offensive in the Balkans, so the news came orphaned, and as it were insignificant to us. Undoubtedly the end, not only of the great war, but of our war, was near. A sharp effort, and our tribal would be over and every one loosed back to his affairs, forgetting the madness since for most of us it was the first war, and we looked to its end as rest and peace.

The army had arrived. The groves became thronged as each detachment picked out the best vacant place and unsaddled, whether beside fig trees, or under palms, or olives, from which the birds burst out in frightened clouds with a multitudinous crying. Our men took their animals to the stream meandering through green bushes and rich with cultivated fruits, things strange to us during the years of our wearing in the dinty desert.

The people of Sheikh Saad came shyly to look at Feisal's army, which had been a whispered legendary thing, and was now in their village, led by renowned or formidable names—Talal, Nasir, Nuri, Auda, who stared back, in secret envy of their peasant life.

When we had watered the saddle stiffness of riding from their legs, we went up, five or six of us, above the ruins, whence across the southern plain we should see the measure of security in store for us. To our astonishment we perceived, just over the walls, a thin company of regulars in uniform—Turks, Austrians, Germans—with eight machine guns on pack-animals. They were toiling up from the south towards Damascus after their defeat by Allenby; hopeless, but care-free, marching at ease, thinking themselves safe miles from any war.

We did not give an alarm, to spare our tired troops pains, just

Jack Van, 19-year-old Quebec airman, is shown here at Reading England, beside the aeroplane in which he will attempt a non-stop flight from Baldonnel, Ireland to his home town, then on to western Canada. Van obtained his pilot's certificate when he was 16. He was then Canada's youngest pilot.

Dursi ibn Dughmi, with the Khafaji and others of the family, mounted quietly and fell on them from a narrow lane. The officers showed fight and were instantly killed. The men threw down their arms, and in five minutes had been searched and robbed and were being shepherded in file along the water-paths between the gardens to an open ground which seemed fit for our prison. Sheikh Saad was paying soon and well.

Away to the east appeared three or four black knots of people, moving northward. We loosed the Howeitat on them, and after an hour they returned in laughter, each man leading a captured horse; poor, tired, galled brutes, showing all too clearly the straits of the beaten army. These riders had been unarmed soldiers fleeing from the British. The Howeitat disdained to make such prisoners. "We gave them to the boys and the girls of the village for servants," asserted Zaal, with his thin-lipped smile.

News came to us from the west that small companies of Turks were retiring into the local villages from Chauvel's attacks. We sent against peasant tribe which had joined us last night at Sheikh Miskin, as appointed by Nasir to do what they could.

Troubadour Pays Home Town Visit

"Danny boy" is here. That's his name when he broadcasts and travels as a troubadour, and also while he is with the midway at the Belleville fair. Belleville folk he is plain Don Smith, the entertainer, local native product.

Between his visits to the hometown, Don or Danny Boy travels much, travelling mileage as he is his familiar guitar goes with him. Occasionally when the mood is on him he composes songs. When he is not too busy he broadcasts.

Well "Danny Boy" is in a big tent on the north side of the midway and there he sings a la cowboy, to the lilt of his guitar, and his accompaniment of the harmonica. "Danny Boy" is also an actor. To those who do not know, he is also sleight-of-hand artist and now it's out, he is a ventriloquist, his partner being Little Joe.

Her is "Danny Boy" in a composing mood:

"In a humble cottage in the mountains,
A dying child she lay
Waiting for her Dad's return
Before she's gone away . . .
To a better land, where girls and boys
With wings of heavenly white
Would welcome her at the pearly gates
On that cold starry night."

That is the first stanza of Danny Boy's favorite song, "The Cowboy's Dying Daughter." He says this pathetic song is the song's choice.

Don has a word for the people of Belleville. "Well them I love, the old home town."

FIGHTING OVER THE CALENDAR

Whether the calendar is changed or not, Canadians will not battle in the streets over it. But it is different in Rumania where a little town had a 'dog fight' in which no fewer than one thousand people took part, several being killed, and numbers injured. A church festival was being celebrated in accordance with the calendar of Julius Caesar, the people siding with the parish priest in resisting gendarmes who represented the revised calendar of Pope Gergory XIII, now in general use in Western countries. The Julian calendar is thirteen days out of agreement with the reckoning of the astronomers.

Now Emperor Selassie of Ethiopia wants to change the calendar of his country which is more than seven years out of agreement with the Gregorian calendar, the Ethiopian style of reckoning being twelve months of thirty days each with five intercalated days as holidays. Selassie's clergy oppose the change to the Gregorian calendar and also the proposal to change alphabet.

The world is interested in the possibility of modification of the Gregorian calendar to meet the requirements of modern business and scientific progress. Reform suggestions have been various, including a thirteen month year and a twelve month perpetual calendar which is deemed the more desirable.

Time which is for the whole world should have a globe calendar. Though nations may not go to war over a calendar as the Romans went to fight one another in dog fashion, yet there is a real demand for a universal calendar which suits science and business. But time "which consecrates" seeks to keep holy what it touches seems its own enemy in this regard. Still there may be a sane calendar change.

RAIN DOUBLY WELCOMED

Rarely was rain so necessary as it has been of late when the fields and countryside were like tinder. Fires in the country created a real threat as it was impossible with heavy wind prevailing to know how far they might not extend. Fortunately the farmers have ways of fighting such conflagrations by trenching and other methods which are generally effective. Rainfall of Tuesday evening supplied relief in more ways than one, in lowering temperature, in precipitation of moisture and in dampening the ground and starting green growth, which is given a healthy start.

Farmers are able by their own means of fighting to conquer the seemingly impossible task of checking flames. To an inexperienced person the efforts at the start may seem ineffective but the massed result generally tells a tale of success.

ON THE CONSCIENCE

Every now and then, one reads of conscience money being paid. The other day the story was told of a conscience-stricken Ottawan, who paid with interest after thirty four years for failure to pay his way on a horsecar bound for the Canadian Exposition at Buffalo. The cost was ten cents. The ninety cents was interest.

While it may be that some will look upon such cases as pathological rather than sensible, one has only to be sympathetic to realize that some one is in earnest and anxious to pay at any price what will lift a burden from the conscience.

It may be that this sincere person who paid the dollar in compensation now has earned peace of mind and that he hoped so for the money has gone to the traction company.

This person's conscience is more fortunate than some others can be for compensation cannot reach some who have been ill-treated or maligned. Repentance can never reach many who have suffered. But if religion counts, this repentance is availing. One cannot but feel the deepest sympathy with those who with true repentance cannot have the injured one forgive them.

It is not a case of conscience making a coward of man. It takes courage to admit even to one's self that a wrong has been done.

By a divine instinct men's minds distrust ensuing danger, as by proof we see the waters swell before a boisterous storm. —Shakespeare.

Individuals may form communities, but it is institutions alone that can create a nation.—Disraeli.

In the youth of a state, arms do flourish: in the middle age, learning; and then both of them together for a time; in the declining age, mechanical arts and merchandise.—Bacon.

Honest instinct comes a volunteer, sure never to overshoot, but just to hit, while still too wide, or short of human wit.—Pope.

The fate of war is to be exalted in the morning, and low enough at night! There is but one step from triumph to ruin. —Napoleon.

IRON RATIONS

(The body of the average man, we read, contains enough iron to make a packet of tin tacks.)

Whenever a job's to be done in the house
I never fade out of the view,
But come up to scratch like a dutiful spouse
Intent upon seeing it through.
No labor is ever too great to essay,
No trouble is ever too much.
And in every performance I try to display
A truly professional touch.

Of many a trade I have made it my boast
To show that I've mastered the knacks,
And, therefore, when laying the carpet, began
By filling my mouth full of tacks;
And that's why, although in a general way
Vain boasting's a thing that I bar,
I feel I am fully entitled to say
I am not as other men are.

The iron in my body is greater than theirs,
No commonplace ration I keep
Since, puffed by my labor, I took unawares
A breath that was rather too deep;
It may be that I shall develop an ache,
It may be that I shall succumb,
But it can't be denied I've sufficient to make
A packet of tacks—and then some.

ROME CONQUERED THE WORLD including England of the Druids. Benito Mussolini, noblest or holiest Roman of his day, which happens to be today, is bent upon conquering the King of Blackest Africa, and even attempts a threatening attitude toward Great Britain, the Empire where sunrise is perpetual and there is no night on all that patch of red which circles the globe. The England that Rome conquered was not the England of today, and the Roman operations in England of ancient day were the high-peak of Rome's greatness as a conquering nation. The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, as told so well by Gibbons, the historian, began somewhere in England.

ADOLF HITLER, ONE-TIME PLASTERER, now Dictator of what was once Imperial Germany, has been strangely silent of late. It now transpires that a malignant growth on his vocal cords has silenced Germany's strong man. There's a whole bunch of other agitators who keep in the limelight through much tall talking and tall lying who could have similar visitations with great benefit, to themselves and humanity generally.

BELLEVILLE BUSINESS MAN motoring through the New England States made enquiries as to the local relief situation in several communities. He was told that there was no relief situation—everybody working who wanted to work and no one on relief. Looks like this here relief question had more or less degenerated into what might be termed a "Racket". Seems a bit too easy to get on relief.

A demolished cab belonging to Mr. J. Tice, liveryman of this city was brought from over the bay this morning. It has every appearance of having been through a cyclone, but enquiry developed that it had been driven through the Grand Trunk freight sheds. By Mr. J. W. Bradshaw behind his spirited team which became frightened near Mr. Sprague's place and runaway turning the entire party consisting of Mrs. Bradshaw and five ladies into the road. The end of the cab was torn and smashed and one of the ladies sustained a broken leg.

Pinnacle street north of Hotel street, which was in a wretched state a few weeks ago is now the smoothest place for driving in the city. Plenty of stones and gravel produced the change.

QUEEN ASTRID INSTANTLY KILLED

bareheaded members of the household, peasants, villagers and royal armies. Then it was removed by an undertaker.

Chauffeur May Die

The chauffeur, originally reported as only slightly hurt in the accident was later found to be in a serious condition and physicians said they feared he might die.

Knamacht is a popular resort which stands at the head of a small bay of the lake "Vier Waldstatter See" near the spot where the legendary William Tell was reputed to have shot the Tyrant Gessler.

At the villa, the reception room was cleared and the Queen's body in its casket was placed on black-draped trestles. Candles were arranged and the members of the household took up the death watch.

The King Ordered to Bed

The King, suffering not only emotional shock but cuts and bruises, was ordered by Dr. Steinegger, physician, to bed. He rendered him first aid, to go to bed.

A further investigation at the scene of the accident showed a large stone at the roadside may have caused it. The car, driven by King, looked up at the scenery, the car turned to the edge of the road, striking the stone.

At the spot the road is only eight feet from the lake and the car ran down a slight grade to the water.

The Queen with her two small children had been at Lucerne for several weeks. The King had just arrived. Prince Leopold, Count Prince Albert, remained in Brussels.

Astrid would have been three November 17. She had been married almost nine years. The couple had been living at the Villa Hall-born, near here—where they were staying eighteen months ago when King Albert of the Belgians, Leopold's father was killed mountain-climbing in Belgium.

Cabinet Meeting Called

Crowds soon gathered at the streets and public squares discussing in varying tones the nation's grief.

Extras were grabbed from the hands of newsboys. Many Belgians refused to believe the news until they had seen the black type which chronicled it.

Cabinet meeting was definitely set for early afternoon. A committee of the stock exchange voted to close the Bourse until future notice.

Theatres quickly posted notices saying there would be no performances until further advice.

It was expected one of the Cabinet's first actions would be the proclamation of a national period of mourning perhaps for six months.

A huge crowd quickly gathered outside the palace. Women were weeping and some of the bareheaded men had tears on their faces.

Reports Leopold's condition was serious were so insistent that the Chief Cabinet officer issued a statement in which he said:

"The King's condition is not serious at all. He merely suffered bruises but is very depressed and unable yet to make a statement concerning exactly what happened."

Queen Astrid was the second member of the Belgian Royal family to die a violent death within little more than a year and a half.

She took the oath as Queen Feb. 23, 1934, after King Albert, her father-in-law, had fallen to death while climbing a mountain near Namur, Belgium.

The Queen was Princess Astrid of Sweden before she married Leopold, then Crown Prince on Nov. 10, 1926.

When the time came for her enthronement she could not participate in the ceremony because she was expecting her third child.

She is survived by this baby, two named for King Albert and by Princess Josephine Charlotte and Crown Prince Baudouin.

Born in Stockholm

The Queen was 29 years of age, having been born in Stockholm Nov. 17, 1905.

King Leopold and Queen Astrid were touring the Alps at the time King Alberts tragic death occurred. They hastened to Brussels and, taking their thrones after the funeral were given Archbishop for a population, which had loved them.

PLEASING ARRAY OF EXHIBITS SEEN AT FAIR

OLIVER HARVESTER WINS COLT RACE QUITE HANDILY

Competes in Futurity at Toronto on Wednesday Next

PLENTY OF HORSES

Babe Ruth, Smart Trotter, Wins 2.20 Class in 3 Heats

Despite the frigid temperature, the grandstand was completely filled on Wednesday afternoon when starter George O. Tice called the first heat of the colt race. It was rumored about the grounds and on the streets, that there would be no racing at the fair this year due to a misunderstanding between the horsemen and the Fair committee but these fears were dispelled when the race card was run off on schedule and assurance that the card for the last two days of the fair would be completed. There is no dearth of horses and more arrived from Kingston late on Wednesday and early on Thursday, hence races has been filled and as usual some spirited racing will be witnessed during the last two days.

Although the two races carded for Wednesday were run off in straight heats, yet there was keen competition. The three year old colts, that will perform in the Futurities in Toronto next week put on a mile memorial with Oliver Harvester, one favored for the posing Futurity, top at all stages. In the last heat Axe Lee, who will start in the last week to be held for three quarters of a mile but the Harvester horse was let out a notch and he simply coasted to victory with his driver sitting still. Dr. Whitney Gordon looked in the sulky of the colt and he looks like the one to beat for a big purse in Toronto. John R. Gentry a rapid going little fellow was always second but did not have the "class" to head the Goderich pacer at any stage of the journey.

Babe Ruth, a reliable and steady going trotter, from Wingham Ont. ario was easily the best in the 2.20 class. After the horses were sent on their way in the first heat the bay mare went to the front and here driver had an easy and successful ride. Tilly the Great threatened in all three heats but the trotter simply turned it on when the going was toughest.

The time in the races was not fast although the track was in perfect condition but this was due to the fact, that a heavy wind hampered the progress of the horses and the winners had a certain edge over the field. There was no delay in the starting for the several heats and the races were finished in short time. Only one slight accident marred the races, when Bert Evans, fell down with warning up the horse jumping at its shadow. No one was injured and the equipment was not damaged.

Between heats the patrons of the fair witnessed a wonderful exhibition of roadster, carriage and hackney horses in all kinds of vehicles. Johnson of Frankford was successful in winning the red ribbon with his bay mare by having the best roadster on the ground. This mare can do a half mile quite rapid when hitched to a buggy. Mr. A. R. Webber of Kitchener showed a fine animals as did Mr. J. Tollard. The vaudeville acts were also given before the grandstand with the poodle dogs and the Gold Dust Twins being the most laughable. The boys working on the high aerial tower were also cautious due to the heavy wind. These boys work at a height of 150 feet without the aid of a net. The race results:—

ADMITS SETTING FIRE WITHOUT PERMIT

North Bay, Ont., Aug 29—(CP)—R. Koski of Round Lake, was remanded for sentence when he pleaded guilty in police court at Englehart to a charge of setting a fire without the authority of a license.

He is alleged to have been responsible for a fire which covered 4,800 acres early in June.

Koski started the fire for clearing purposes in the Township of Marquis. The blaze got beyond his control.

BABY SHOW IS GALA AFFAIR

46 Infants Enter Two Competitions Arranged By Fair

Forty-six fascinating infants, arriving in the very latest of stream line prams, competed in the annual Baby Show at Belleville Fair yesterday afternoon. Blonde and brunette, chubby and thin, gurgling quietly serious, the little ones almost baffled the judges, who seen the contest and so evenly matched, the two competitors. The secretary's office was given over to babyhood, the officials hastily retiring into the fair's fat salvation. At first perfect order was maintained, but when things became too dull for the babies they began to protest noisily and proved one thing to the entire satisfaction of the judges, none were deficient in lung power.

Prizes were given in two classes, under six months, and between six months and one year. Mayor Tywoon Fortin maintained family honors by carrying off a second prize, for sister, Catherine, having won first prize in her class four years ago.

Dr. Ida Love of Connecticut very capably acted as judge, assisted by Miss Ruby Pearson, Reg. N. After much deliberation, the prize winners were announced as follows:—

Baby girl under six months, first prize — Beverley Geraldine Poemeroy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Pomeroy, Castleton, Ontario, second prize — Irma Alice Carlene Embury, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Embury, R. R. 6, Belleville. Baby Boy, under six months, first prize — Lawrence Crossen, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Crossen, Belleville, second prize — Teddy Soule, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Soule, 134 Victoria Avenue.

Baby Girl over six months — Colleen Knott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Knott, 163 Albert street, second prize, Yvonne Fortin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Fortin 317 Albert street. Baby Boy over six months — David Derjaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Derjaw, 17 East College Street, second prize — Lawrence Joseph Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Wood, 329 1-2 Front Street.

HUGE WATERSPOUT REPORTED IN ERIE

Chatham, Ont., Aug. 29—(CP)—Reports reaching here today from East Beach, summer resort on Lake Erie, told of a huge water spout created by a twister which dipped the surface several miles from shore.

A brief but violent gale swept the shore of Lake Erie last night but, as far as can be learned, did little damage. Some small sailing boats anchored at Rondeau Beach at Erieau were capsized by the blow.

STIRLING MINISTERS PRESIDE AT INDUCTION

STIRLING.—The induction of Group No. 1 of St. Paul's Women's Association enjoyed a very pleasant afternoon on Wednesday, when they were the guests of Mrs. Thomas Moorhead, at the home on the Trent River. An interesting program of humorous readings and contests provided a most delightful and merriment particularly the passing around of the "hot potato" when lunch was served. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in interesting discussions, after which they then departed for their homes after having enjoyed every minute spent in the river side.

Ministers Preside at Induction Service

A large number of people representing the congregations of the pastoral charge of Flinton, Cloyne, Stirling and Rawdon United Church for the induction service of Rev. C. J. Call, who until recently minister of the people of Rawdon, Stirling Road pastoral charge, near Lindsay. Rev. W. Bruce Kerr, Belleville, Chairman of the Belleville Presbytery, was the inducting minister, and the very solemn ceremony, Rev. A. O. Price of Actinolite, took charge of the congregation.

Rev. Jame E. Beckel of Stirling, Secretary of the Bay of Quinte Conference, delivered the address to the minister and Rev. Rowland gave a fine address to the congregation. Following the very solemn ceremony, which was impressive, they drove to the parsonage where Mrs. Call was hostess at a delightful luncheon.

Gifts For The Bride-To-be

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My boy friend's brother is to be married within a few weeks. The wedding is to be very small with only the closest relatives present. I am really honored at this time because I, too am invited. I only have had the privilege of meeting this girl on three occasions.

Please suggest some items so that I may choose one for a wedding gift. Nothing too expensive as I am unemployed at present.

2. Also please tell me whether I should present the gift to the bride or my arrival at the hall, or give it to the bridegroom to place aside with the other wedding gifts? It is to be a five o'clock wedding.

ANSWER: 1. I am sure that the bride-to-be would be delighted to have you send her some fingerbowls, towels, the sheet presents which always find use so especially convenient to have only a limited number. Two dozen ones are the loveliest, and you can get a pair of these for a very small amount. You can buy them all-white, charmingly appropriate for the occasion whereas you can send six in lovely soft pastel shades—orchid, yellow, green, or with a soft blue, buttercup yellow, a glowing green, orchid, and so forth. Or you can buy Irish Point Lace, in a simple design, or, best of all, if you have any of your boys' linens, you can have them monogrammed, even with one initial, either the initial of her present surname or with the initial of her surname-to-be.

Or you might give her a set of napkins, plain or monogrammed, or cocktail napkins.Or a cigarette box for her living room table. Or look at the silver dishes for buffet service—there are great variety of them, useful, and most popular with new brides ,especially the ones in chromium, which do not need polishing. They come in a wide price range.

Then, too, there are an indefinite variety of small serving dishes, for bonbons, nuts, relishes and many other uses. These may be either silver (sterling or plated silver) glass, china or pottery. Or a set of eight (that's the popular number nowadays) china or glass salad or dessert plates.

2. I'm pepcially glad that you sent this question, for it want to urge you to send your wedding present before the wedding. You have plenty of time now, but after your wedding gift, have it attractively packed (they will usually do this at the shop where you buy it) and will send it for you), and send it addressed to the bride-to-be at her home. Enclose your visiting card (and you needn't write a message on it, unless you wish), or write your name, or your name and a short message, on a plain visiting card. Usually, too, shops supply attractive gift cards for this use.

If you wish to write a message, write something like this.

Every Wish For Your Happiness always Pamela Carr

Send you gift about ten days before the date of the wedding.

Weddings

COLLINS—McCANN

A very pretty wedding was solemnized Tuesday morning, August 27, at St. Edward's Church Westport, at 9.30 a.m., when Miss Margaret Ann McCann, daughter of Mrs. McCann, became the bride of William Collins, of Moira, Ontario.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in her wedding gown of white tear-drop satin made on princess lines. Her tulle veil was arranged in a cap-effect and was caught with orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet was of lilies of the valley and Briarcliffe roses.

Miss Kathleen McCann attending her sister as bridesmaid, was charming in her gown of rose angel-skin lace. Her hat was of rose crepe and she wore white accessories. She carried a Colonial bouquet of pinks, forget-me-nots and roses. The bride was presented to the altar by her little cousin, Ann McCann, dainty in pale green organza. Mr. Gerald Collins acted as his brother's best man.

The ushers, cousins of the bride, were, Mr. Mark McCann and Mr. Jerome Hogan.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride for about thirty guests the happy couple left on a motor trip that will include Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo. The bride's travelling costume was of navy and white triple-crepe with matching accessories.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Collins will reside on the groom's farm which is near Belleville.

Fashion Flashes

Alice Alden

(Copyright 1935 King Features) Syndicate, Inc.

We like spots when it comes to leopard fur. A new coat of finely marked leopard is made charming and gay by a big rippling collar of cross fox whose tones blend beautifully with the leopard pelt.

It won't be easy to resist buying a fall coat, for the new coats have much charming and varied styles. For general wear there is a model in brown wool with fine cross lines in brick color, giving a coppery cast. Natural brown seal is arranged in a rippling collar and rippled sleeves that extend to the wrists. The hem has a band of stitched patent. There are fur silver accessories.

An essential for the lazy vacationist is a tunic frock. A lovely model is in pure silk yarn, black flecks on white knitted into a two piece frock that has a red leather belt and a red silk tuck-in scarf. Brass buttons on the tunic simulate a double breasted line.

First fall days finds us looking for a new little frock. A navy and white foil one is in keeping. Rabbit's hair woolen with sleeves and ruffled collar and cuffs in tones. Pleats give a flaring line to the skirt.

New youth has been given the bitsel mode. For instance, a coat of black Persian lamb has the charming and young because is is done on fitted lines with flaring skirts and because it is but forty inches in length.

New luxury is achieved by a cape coat made mostly of silver fox skins worked vertically and in a swirled design. A big cuff of silver fox accompanies the waistength cape.

Those who acted as judges for the junior department were: Orwin and Ivey," pointed out Mr. A. J. H. Taylor, son of the grandad of Ye and Son, British retail grocers operating about 40 stores in Great Britain.

Grandads of the Old Country are very willing to buy Canadian goods, providing the price and quality is right, but the Canadians must do the selling. The buyers can't go out hunting for the shipments to do the ordering. Millions of dollars, or rather pounds are waiting for Canadian produce", he cheered "but you have to study your market. You are in competition with many other countries and you must analyze the peculiarities of the market you seek."

President's Welcome

President Walter Aselstine, on behalf of fellow members of the Belleville Rotary Club, extended the official welcome to the party, and in a few brief and well chosen words introduced Mayor Tice to further his greetings on behalf of the city. Again Mayor Tice on behalf of the citizens of Belleville extended his greetings and appreciation of the fact, that Belleville has been chosen as one of the principal cities to visit in the province.

He cited the previous visit of the party, beautiful Coe Lake, and outlined the direct benefits that had resulted in Belleville through visits to the grand Canadian scenery and the once and thoroughly enjoyed the program.

LAST DILLINGER GANGSTER FOUND

Had Been Dead A Year Victim of Federal Bullets

Oswego, Ill., Aug. 28—(AP)—The law held its last Dillinger today over the remains of the Dillinger gang.

Last of the gang was John "Three Fingered" Hamilton. He body was found by G-men and Illinois police, an ignominous grave, a shallow hole scooped from a weed-grown hillock, 50 miles southwest of Chicago.

Months of diligent search by Department of Justice agents finally laid low the ghost stories, receiving at intervals, that Hamilton, native of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., district, was still alive.

All that was left of him, a badly decomposed body, partly destroyed by fire, was identified by the three agents who discovered it through the teeth and the absence of the right index and middle fingers. A coroner's examination disclosed three bullets in the body.

Coroner F. M. Groner of Kendall county, called the inquest for today.

That Hamilton was slain by Federal agents during a hot chase after the Dillinger gang on April 23, 1934, was learned by Post Office men the theory of Federal men.

Hamilton, with Harold M. Ladd, Chief of the Federal Agents in Chicago, ordered the three agents to the Oswego farm. Federal authorities only they were looking for a body. The agents dug in numerous places for two days before they were successful.

The body had been clothed and lay on its side. A gray felt hat with a black "Bar Brand" had buried with it. The remains of a blue serge suit, a rusty horseshoe and the top of a can which apparently had contained lye were found in the crude grave.

MOSLEMS CHRISTIANS JOIN IN PEACE PRAYERS

Addis Ababa, Aug. 29—(AP)—As war, apparently wiping out the Ethiopian forces, entered its seventh week, Christians and Mohammedans, had banded them together today in joint prayers for peace, an unprecedented event.

Archbishop Dimasa (Priest) in their Friday prayer services in the mosques, will urge Moslem followers to unite with Christians "in this time of national peril."

The recent appointment of Selaia Ayelle Gabre to the consulate at Harar is another indication of the closer relations between the two races. Several Moslem ministers are returning Yemen bearing messages of sympathy and support for the Emperor.

DISQUALIFYING IS CONDEMNED

Alderman Stern of Brantford Addresses Municipal Board

Toronto, Aug. 28 (CP)—Opposing disqualification of either voter or candidate on the grounds of non-payment of taxes, Alderman C. F. Stern of Brantford told the Ontario Municipal Association yesterday such restrictions placed a heavy handicap on intelligent voting.

"At a property owner, one can qualify for any municipal position but it does not follow that someone else who married earlier in life and who raised a family of children, should be barred from qualifying because he has, perhaps, contributed more in real good citizenship than I have," protested Ald. Stern.

Property Qualification

"The requirement of property qualification puts a big load on what we call the more intelligent electorate.

"Men put on municipal slabs have not lacked qualifications from the standpoint of intelligence or ability but they haven't been elected.

"The vote of the people showed that their effort to attain office was a waste of energy."

Ald. Stern said candidates were sometimes forced with the need of "either borrowing from the city or getting a loan from the bank.

"My license will not be city but I have to borrow from the bank," he said.

"If we understood more fully the laws we have instead of rushing done here with resolutions asking for new ones, we would be doing better. Most municipalities do not use often enough their right of audit in Division Court for unpaid taxes."

RAILWAY CARMEN'S WIVES WILL ORGANIZE

Montreal, Aug. 28 (CP)—Formation of a Women's Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America was suggested at the annual meeting of the Brotherhood today by Felix H. Knight, President-General. Mr. Knight said more than half of the delegates to the convention were accompanied by their wives.

"The more they learn of the ideals of trade unions the better it will be," he said. "The mistake in the past has been not to inform the women more closely of the aims and objects of trade unions. Keep the wives better informed with what is going on, especially since they have become a voting power."

CONVENTION PLANS NOW COMPLETED

Final details of the 2nd Battalion O.R.F. Convention to be held in this city on Saturday were completed at a meeting of the local convention committee last evening. The meeting was presided over by Wm. Jack, chairman in charge of the convention. An expected attendance of between 300 and 350 members of the Battalion will make the local convention the largest on record. This week the local armouries is being decorated while reservations are being arranged in local hotels and residences for the visitors.

BOMBAY 'CHANGE SLUMP

New York, Aug. 28 (AP)—Slump in Bombay Stock Exchange resulting in restrictions against bear speculators, was interpreted in Wall Street today as an outgrowth of recent difficulties of speculators in silver and jute.

CITY CONTROL TO BE SUBJECT

Municipal Association Meets at Toronto in 37th Convention

Toronto, Aug. 28 (CP)—Consideration of the city-manager form of municipal government today stood out as one of the most vital topics of the agenda of the Ontario Municipal Association's 37rd annual convention, W. L. Wilkinson of Niagara Falls declared in his presidential address.

"While the vote-getters and were politicians don't believe in it, for the taxpayers the city city-manager form of government is the thing," he said. "From our experience in Niagara Falls the city has saved 10 times the salary we have paid him."

URGES ABOLITION COUNTY COUNCILS

President of Municipal Association Praises Government

Toronto, Aug. 28.—At the Ontario Municipal Association Convention today, President Wilkinson commended the Ontario Government for having made it compulsory for municipal councils to secure Ontario Municipal Board sanction before embarking on large capital expenditures.

He supported a suggestion to abolish county councils, stating they were out of date.

"Throughout the country there seems to be a general improvement in employment although we have not noticed it down in the north," said Mr. Wilkinson. "I believe there is nothing to be gained by piling up tax burdens which do not strike at the root of unemployment problems."

The President lauded newspapers which spoke out fearlessly on public affairs and took a leading interest in their conduct.

"Such action results in better administration of municipalities", he said. "In the past it seems that some papers are not frank enough in criticizing the action of councils. The ordinary man is influenced to a great degree by the papers and feels are to be the leaders of a community or province as the case may be.

"The newspapers therefore have a great responsibility and should in all cases be free with their criticism on the method of government in municipal activities."

QUINTS FIFTEEN MONTHS OF AGE

Dr. Allan Dafoe Reports Tiny Charges in Best of Health

Callander, Ont., Aug. 28 (CP) — Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe watched the Dionne quintuplets enter their 16th month of life today and then hurried off to the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto where their parents Oliva and Elzire Dionne, already are visiting.

But there was no reason for the 15-month-old youngsters to feel deserted on their "birthday" when hundred persons crowded around their hospital-home to wish them well, go through their two daily appearances and there were two kind gypsies to look after their wants in the hospital.

All Gain Weight

They all gained weight in the last month for a total of one pound 14 3-4 ounces and now weigh 36 pounds 8 1-2 ounces. Emilie headed the weight-gaining list with an advance of 12 1-2 ounces, Yvonne was next with 8 1-2 ounces, Annette had one 3-4 ounces and Marie three. Cecile bound the past month's best kept her waist line slim, she added only one ounce.

HARLOCK TO BE NEW CHIEF RANGER

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—(CP)—H. B. Harlock of Toronto, will be elected High Chief Ranger of the High Court of the Ancient Order of Foresters at the Biennial election of officers tomorrow in connection with the convention of the court now in session. He will succeed W. O. McDowell of Ottawa.

Dr. R. Fraser Corrie of Toronto, will be returned as High Court Medical examiner and J. C. Nash of London, will be renamed High Court Actuary.

ASSISTANT FAVORS RECALL

Calgary, Aug. 28.—Something new in election laws has been promised the people of Alberta by William Aberhart, Leader of the Social Credit Party that swept into power in the Province's election last week. For the first time in Canada, electors will have the right to recall legislators who fail to live up to their pre-election promises.

It is expected that Aberhart legislation will be patterned after the American recall laws, although its details have not been decided.

KNOWN BRITTNERS KILLED

Cheshampton, England, Aug. 28.—(AP)— Sir Olly Chetwynd, 61, a member of the historic Paget family was killed late night in an automobile collision at Charlton Orde. Sir Guy was also roads to Cheshampton to join his wife for a holiday.

580 ITALIANS SAID TO HAVE DESERTED

Zagreb, Yugoslavia, Aug. 28 — (AP)—The number of Italian deserters arriving in Yugoslavia is increasing as Italo-Ethiopian tension rises.

It was reported 580 Italian soldiers, fully equipped and using auto trucks, entered Yugoslavia from the Italian district of Zara. After being disarmed the fugitives were shipped for internment.

The Italian garrison at Zara has been holding field manoeuvres which brought its soldiers close to the Yugoslav frontier and the 580 deserters in question reached Yugoslavia by a quick dash.

CHURCH ASKS PEACE PRAYER

Methodist Conference of Britain Calls on Membership

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—The Methodist conference here called upon its 847,000 members to join in prayer for a peaceful solution of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

At the same time, George Lansbury, leader of the Labor opposition in parliament, said in a statement worldwide economic unrest and not the Ethiopian trouble is causing the world to arm itself for war.

"I believe it is the duty of the Christian church to stand up, whether from Mount Calvary, Rome or Geneva, to tell the nations it is blasphemy both against God and nature to endeavour to find means of destroying one another rather than sit down to discover how better they can use the gifts God and nature have given us," said Lansbury.

Picton "Blue Sox" Champions Defeating Belleville 7 - 3 in Second Game of Playoffs

Will Meet Kingston in The Second Round Playdowns

CHURCH GOOD

Wilf Cretney Local First Sacker Hits Long Homer

New champions were crowned in the Bay of Quinte League yesterday, when the Picton "Blue Sox" won the final game of the league play-offs downing the Belleville "Tals," by the score of 7 to 3 in Picton, ace victors having previously won the first final play-off by a larger margin. Yesterday's tilt was a tight affair, the homesters winning by virtue of a five run splurge in the sixth inning, when they drew Phil Loft, local starting pitcher, from the hilltop. Johnnie Bawden, erstwhile junior hurler, stepping into the breach to allow Picton two outs before the remainder of the pasume. Big Roo Church was Manager Doyle's choice for hurling honors for the home team and the Picton righthander well justified his mentor's choice, when he hurled beautiful ball in the pinches to ten Belleville base runners stranded on the base paths, and limited the locals to seven hits, whereas Wilf Cretney's mammoth circuit blow in the eighth with none aboard. The league winning Picton nine now meet the winners of the Kingston district loop in the provincial playdowns.

Skipper Fanning started Phil Loft, his methodical working righthander, who burled good ball for exactly five innings, but in his effort to get away in the sixth saw his arch derricked in favor of Bawden, who smoked himself in the first C.B.A.A. intermediate attempt on the mound. Bawden whiffed two in three frames and issued one free ticket, he allowed two scratch hits in two appearances at the bat Bawden hit a triple rar into deep centre field. Church whirled eight, Loft ten, Bawden mitigated his efforts as he passed five via the four ball route, Stellar fielding featured the game with both clubs making several pick-ups and put-outs. Harry Morgan's running catch of Frout's line drive in the second frame was the defensive feature of the game. Barrage, Little, Burke and Mighton, supplied the other fielding features, Cretney's circuit clout collected the safeties as he pitched his team to victory. Cretney's homer was the mythical clout of the day, although Bawden, Frout and Church hit lusty triples. Cretney and Little were the only Belleville hitters to collect over one safety.

Picton Opens Scoring

Picton opened the scoring in the second when McQuaid singled and scored on Mighton's double. Belleville knotted the count in the third half, Cretney scoring on a hit, a walk and a subsequent error. Picton added another in the third when Church tripled and scored on an overthrow. The big blow-off came in the sixth when Picton scored five big runs on six hits, including Frout's triple and Mighton's double, but a brace of Belleville errors started the streaks rolling and saw the ejection of pitcher Loft in favor of Bawden. Belleville then settled down to outplay Picton, as they scored in the seventh and eighth, the latter inning seeing Cretney's mighty wallop to right for a beautiful homer. Although the locals pressed hard in the latter innings and had sufficient men aboard to knot the count, much needed money hits were lacking and new champions were crowned in the Bay of Quinte loop for 1935.

dropped to between 51 and 52 degrees and that was too cold for swimming. If it is not at least 70 degrees higher the race will be postponed probably until next week.

Meanwhile there was a possibility only 17 would start. Ruth Downing had developed a hot chested in and it was reported she would be too sore preparing for her contest on Saturday to Danny McDonald, wrestling and paddling star, to bother with the swim. Eva Bein of Bronx, N.Y., had not arrived but was expected from Toronto in time to start.

Officials were worrying about costumes—or lack of them, a clause in the entry form provided the contestants preferred olive oil to the traditional petroleum jelly and the contestants insisted they should be able to get a little their trunks by getting into the water just as the men had done on Tuesday.

Wally Moses of Phillies Voted The Best Rookie

By ALAN GOULD

Associated Press Sports Editor

New York, Aug. 28.—(AP)— The cheerful bit of irony today for Wally Moses, sensational young outfielder of Philadelphia Athletics whose career was abruptly checked by an arm fracture, is that the baseball experts consider him the outstanding major league rookie of the 1935 season.

The distinction goes to the Texas League recruit, not as any consolation prize, but on the merits of his freshman performance in rivalry with one of the greatest crops of first-year regulars developed in a blue moon. Exactly 28 players, playing regularly this year for the first time received mention in a poll conducted by The Associated Press to determine opinion on the outstanding rookies.

Moses received 26 votes of a maximum of 53 cast by baseball writers. The speedy young outfielder, who broke into the A's lineup on opening day and had a batting mark of .326 for 85 games, when he broke his arm in Chicago recently two weeks ago, enjoyed a comfortable margin over all other flychasers, including Hank Leiber of Giants, who collected 14 votes.

Results of the balloting follows:

Pitchers—Cydell Castleman, Giants, 34; Cy Blanton, Pirates, 19; John Whitehead and Vernon Kennedy, White Sox 6 each; Vito Tamulis, Yankees 5.

Infielders—Lou Berger, Indians, 15; Buddy Hassett, Dodgers, 12; Phil Cavarretta, Cubs, 11; Floyd Young, Pirates 8; Burgess White-head, Cardinals and Billy Myers, Reds 4; Mickey Haslin, Phillies, Alex Kampouris, Reds and Tom Carey, Browns, 3 each.

Outfielders—Wally Moses, Athletics 26; Hank Leiber, Giants 14; Augie Galan, Cubs 7; Ival Goodman, Reds 5; Mel Ahrnds, Red Sox and George Selkirk, Yankees 3 each.

Recent averages show Bob Johnson of the Athletics and Roy Johnson of the Red Sox in a brotherly battle of bats. Bob's record slump brought him within a few percentage points of his brother Roy in the hitting column. Earlier in the season Bob led the American League in hitting around .334, his brother .319 The two brothers are part Cherokee Indian.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

About the only offensive item in the O.B.A.L. was in stolen bases, the Bandits having 27 pilfers during the regular playing schedule with Kingston second with 20. Then Jack Williams led the league hurlers in the matter of shut outs, having applied the whitewash brush four times during his eight league wins. Fred C. Neasley, sports editor of the Kingston Whig-Standard, annually compiles the league statistics and we are indebted to his good work for the following averages.

The Bandits managed to finish third in the league in both batting and fielding, their team batting average being .324 and their fielding average .967, the latter something like 2945. Peterboro led the league in fielding, as a team, when the Leamen hit .272. Incidentally Belleville did manage to get somewhere in the .300 class when Art Ellis, switch-hitting baseman of the Tals, was the champion batter of the league with an average of .378. Following Ellis' lead the Tals' six regulars Calhoun .289 for eleven games; Grey .256; Ernie Smith .258 in three games; Ford .243; Barclay .217; Green .184; Williams .174; Hoffner .167; Jr. Smith .172; Mills .166; Sero .111; Darrah .111, while the remaining players failed to collect a single hit Johnnie Kerr had 25 singles, one double one triple and the local's only four base clout.

One thing is certain and that's the fact that a better class of defensive ball was witnessed in the O.B.J., in 1935 than has been the custom for the past few years, all four clubs turning in creditable fielding records. Oshawa, the tailenders, finished atop the loop defensively only kicking in with 44 errors for a team fielding average of .952; Peterboro was next with .951, Kingston .948 and Belleville in the cellar with .940, there only being seven points difference among the whole four teams. Jerry Smith of Belleville and Fred Ash of Peterboro finished alog of the first baseman with an average of .988. Komopka of Peterboro, led the middle markers .979; H. Smith of Kingston was the best at third, .896. At short the Whig-Standard twins worked and finished under a blanket, with Osborne of Oshawa two points ahead of Murphy of Peterboro and Compeau just nosing Ford out by a hair. All in all the old Central loop enjoyed a very successful season and the statistics are looked for in the play-offs.

Tommy Pedder, Belleville junior entry in the Canadian National Exhibition swim, surely had his ups and downs on Tuesday, and they were mostly downs. First and foremost Pedder was forced to swim nearly four miles without an escort, his accompanying attendants in his boat being unable to find Tommy in the 35 swimmers, that entered the water. At any rate Tommy continued desperately and finished 12th right up among the best of them. According to Tommy's theory the race will be lengthened considerably next year, which should be just about to his liking, as Tommy was just beginning to strut his stuff around the four mile mark. Incidentally we understand, that Tommy received an excellent recommendation from the examining physicians prior to the race. His physical condition was reported 100 per cent. Tommy has now down-hearted and says he'll be back next year stronger than ever. For good luck then as Tommy Pedder the sporting fraternity has nothing but the highest praise.

All roads lead to Central Park tonight when the second game of the second round of the O.B.J. playdowns will assume the sport limelight featuring together Kingston and Belleville softball teams. Regardless whether its baseball, softball, hockey or fiddler winks, you can always depend on a grand and glorious scrap when these two Belleville and Kingston tangle.

The second baseball team, leader of a week, was eliminated from further competition, when the local intermediates dropped the final game of the Bay of Quinte playoffs to Picton. Belleville threw a splurge in the sixth on the part of the homesters decided the issue, Up to big stickin, Ken Church stepped to the mound for the homesters and completely baffled the locals as he let them down with seven hits and left no less than ten baserunners stranded on the runways. Thereon lies the entire story—inability to hit the pitcher meant the Pannigites the league championship, of course in fairness to the locals it must be admitted they were slightly handicapped, three of their regulars being absentees. Ten things stood out from a local viewpoint—Wilf Cretney's mammoth clout that right, that went for a homer, and Johnnie Bawden's relief hurling. Bawden pitched three frames and was touched for only two safe blows, a combination good for a junior pitching his first intermediate baseball game, Bawden starts on set Greer, Picton's ace slugger on two occasions. The victorious league champion Picton nine now meet Kingston in the play-downs. May they enjoy the success we hoped the locals might have, namely—Senior Intermediate title. Following the game the locals, to a man, congratulated Ken Church and the Picton nine in whole, hoping they enjoy every success possible in their quest for a provincial title.

The heavy seas railed havoc with the weekly punt races off Victoria Park yesterday, three craft being towed off the course, while two others dropped out in disgust. A stiff northwesterly caused the lake to be rather choppy, with whitecaps raising at times. Only eight craft

ONLY 3 PUNTS FINISH COURSE

Strong North-West Wind Prevailed During Punt Races

The weekly sailing events sponsored by the South End Athletic Association were on Wednesday afternoon staged under rather unfavorable conditions. Getting off to a poor start, the punt classes got stealthier prevailing,the number of starters was limited. A strong northwest wind prevailed during the afternoon, making it quite difficult to be prominent upon the usual triangular course. Only three craft completed the course.

Only eight craft answered to the crack of the pistol for the start of the first heiter, the course was completed three had to be towed in owing to it being dropped and two others dropped out. The results in the various classes were as follows:

15-Foot Class

Spray, owned by H. Hayes, Scotts, coxed by R. Rushlow and Let's Go, owned by E. Sallaway. Not one craft in this event finished.

Class D

There were but two entries in this class, namely Romeis, owned by D. Rowe, Ron Wallace, owned by Ron Wallace. The latter alone completed the course.

Class C

Toots, owned by F. Green sailed the course alone completing it in good time. This was a short course for the smaller crafts.

Class B

Joka, owned by "Duke" Smith and Anne G, owned by H. Seymour with skipper Capt. Smith in charge were the entries. The Joka proved the only real race winner. Time of winner 2.31.

Notes

Mrs. Charles Jeff, Secretary of the Association was in charge, with the officials for the afternoon performing their duties in an efficient manner.

The pleasure gasoline yacht Pullman, owned by Mr. A. M. Lindsay of Rochester, N. Y., which was anchored in the harbor went into the scene of disabled crafts and towed them into the harbor. It was a gracious act which was much appreciated by those in distress.

The Club's motor pilot boat was also manned following the crafts around the course.

Several of those who were on the crafts were drenched by the spray and bailing out of water in some was the order of the day.

Ed Linke, Senators, and Ivy Andrews, Browns: Pitched brilliantly to break even in doubleheader.

PONIES DEFEAT GIBBARDS 3-2

Pointer Trifle Shaky And Walked Six During Game

Napanee, Aug. 29—Kingston Junior, top-placers in the Central Ontario League, defeated Gibbard Athletics, 1934 intermediate "A" champions, 3 to 2 here yesterday in an exhibition game, Burt Clancy, the league's leading hurler, and Speedy St. Louis divided the mound duties for the Ponies and held the Athletics 10 five scattered hits. St. Louis, throwing the last six innings, was very effective, Card tripling in the eighth being the only runner he allowed pass second.

Extra-base hits by Clancy and Arnold, followed by St. Louis' trip to deep centre, accounted for the winners' brace in the fifth, and Compeau drove Scrimgeon in with the winning run in the ninth after the latter had walked and worked around to third on a sacrifice and wild pitch.

Pointer was a trifle shaky and passed six. He had runners on base in all but the sixth inning, but 11 strikeouts mostly in the pinches kept down the scoring. Compeau and Clancy, each with a pair, led the Kingston hitters, but Card's triple over Adas' left in right was the best clout of the game. Both teams are awaiting playoff games, the locals marking time to play the winner of the Peterboro-Belleville series in league championship series, while Gibbards have not yet been notified what group opponents they are in the intermediate "A" playdowns. The score:

NAPANEE EVEN WITH DESERONTO

Take Second Game of Softball Play-offs by 7-5

Napanee, Aug. 29.—Coming from behind to wipe out a six-run lead piled up in the first four innings, Napanee Mic Mac defeated Deseronto Black Cats 7-6 here last night to even up the best-of-three intermediate "B" O.B.S.A. playdowns The third game will be played in Deseronto Friday.

Green started for Deseronto and held the locals to four hits and no score for the first three innings, but he was pulled in the fourth in favor of Brant after being touched for four hits and three runs and another was added before the side was retired. Three hits resulted in one run in the fifth, and in the seventh after two were out Jackson muffed a drive to left that paved the way for the winning markers.

Henderson steadied away in remarkable style after the fourth, following, but two hits, none after the sixth, and Deseronto never looked like adding to their early innings total. There was little to choose between the team defensively, both playing in championship form. No

PLANE COMPETITION ABANDONED IN BRITAIN

London, Aug. 29—(CP)—Largely because of the heavy demands being made on the aircraft industry in connection with the Defence Force expansion program the Air Ministry, after consultation with aircraft manufacturers and air transport operators, has decided to drop the 20,000 pounds prize competition for a fast, economical, medium-sized transport airplane.

A further objection to the competition originally proposed by the Air Ministry was the machine asked for was one which nobody would be likely to want.

LIFE STORY of WILL ROGERS

By Scott Cunningham

Fifth Instalment

THE BOY IN THE RULL-PEN

Scarritt Collegiate Institute at Neosho, Missouri, was the fifth school Will had attended by the time he was 15. At the end of his second year he felt he had been there long enough, so he returned to his dad's ranch.

At the neighboring Lane ranch he passed a turkey one day and accidentally broke his neck. A week or two later he came visiting to the ranch with a package.

"What is it, Willie?" asked Mrs. Lane.

"Fireworks," he told her. "To make up for the turkey."

One day Will and Doc Payne were riding home from Oologah together. Will produced a cigar he had bought in town. He was going to see what smoking was like. After lighting it he threw away the match with an epoch of the veteran's grace as he could command.

The neophyte smoker was going strong when Doc, who had looked back, cried: "Fire!" Will's match had set a prairie ablaze.

A wind spread the flames crackling through the grass. As hastily as they could, Will and Doc obtained wet gunny-sacks. Other fighters poured in from all sides to battle this enemy of all cattlemen. No one asked who started it but Will suffered.

All day long they fought, and only after nightfall, when the flames had posted them six miles, did the firefighters win.

"Well, what would you have done, Will?" Doc asked as they rode home. "If we hadn't put it out?"

"I'd been a-ridin' yet," said Will. His quit trying to smoke.

Will's next school was Kemper Military Academy, at Boonville, Missouri, where he had 150 fellow students. Will, now in his eighteenth year, looked handsome in his gray uniform.

"Well, Bill," Will's father told Bill Sunday, "I've got that hard-to-control boy of mine where he ought to be. He's in a military school, and they got a wall around it!"

"It was two years at Kemper."

Will later said. "One year in the guardhouse and other in the fourth grade. One was about as bad as the other." In reality, he enrolled for what would, eventually, now be the second year of high school. And here as at other schools he seemed to get a fact into his head in less time than it took others.

He could leaf all through a study book hurriedly, read his lesson as he strode to class, and wind up knowing it as well as any of his more studious schoolmates.

In the private class of ten or twelve boys he had a seat at the side of the room, and almost always was asked question No. 1, as given in the text. He Will irritated himself, when under other pressure, to know the answer only to question No. 2.

He had to take elocution. The gestures and other artificialities he had to learn in that course gave him a life-long dislike of the pompous, oratorical style.

Will liked to play practical jokes. One of his favorites was to catch someone asleep in the upper bunk of a double-deck bed, and tilt the bed until its occupant rolled out—and land on a couch Will would have waiting for him.

His greatest triumph was in the creation of a "fire department." Two schoolmates, "Street" Carr-Johnson and "Flirt" Payne, were his closest aides. One of them had a roll of hose, and the other an alarm clock. Shortly after ten on some night when everybody was supposed to be in bed and the commandant in-charge had been seen to leave the dormitory, the alarm clock would ring.

"I'm not going to live in town," decided Will. He built himself a log cabin on a hill near the old ranch-house, which had been rented. He turned backward to make them look like firemen.

Hastily Will connected the hose to a water faucet, and then, throwing wide the door of the intended victim's room and shouting "Fire!" he played a stream of cold water full upon the victim's bed.

His friends would open the closet door, so water could reach the victim's clothes, too. Being entirely firemen, they never left till everything was thoroughly soaked.

Kemper's president caught Will throwing marbles in a class-room once, and asked sternly: "Mr. Rogers, did you throw that marble?"

Will rose and dramatically said: "I plead guilty, sir."

"Twenty hours of night duty is your punishment." The bull-pen!

The charms of Kemper had palled for Will by the spring of 1898. For one thing there was too much bull-pen. "If all my footsteps while marking in the bull-pen at Kemper could be laid end to end they would stretch across the American continent," he later said.

He wrote his sisters for money without explaining what he intended to do with it, and then ran away to Texas. "Kemper Military Academy was not being run in accordance with the standards that I thought befitted a great intellect," Will said later. "I not only left them flat during a dark night, but quit the entire school business for life."

In Texas, Will got some experience as a being a cowboy for someone other than his father. He accompanied one trail herd from Higgins, Texas to Medicine Lodge, Kansas, and another from Amarillo, again in southwestern Kansas. With the money from this last trip Will returned to the Indian Territory and found his father and the commandant from the ranch to live a Claremore, twelve miles away.

"I'm not going to live in town," decided Will. He built himself a log cabin on a hill near the old ranch-house, which had been rented. He turned backward to make them look like firemen.

Will now usually played on the Oologah baseball team, but more importantly he became an irrepressible street fair every spring and fall. On the fourth of July, 1899, in Claremore, he was the marshal.

What would induce the boy to settle down? Clem Rogers, now a banker at Claremore, tried that experiment of giving his son the old ranch in the Verdigris River bend at the spring and fall roundups, but those were over he went off to ropin' contests. He entered one in St. Louis, another at Oklahoma City another at Des Moines, Iowa.

Socially, when at home he was "in the swim". In old files of the Claremore, Oklahoma, Progress can be seen plenty of paragraphs that read like one in the issue of August 19, 1898, which told of "lucky party" at Oologah. "An important feature of the evening was the "cake walk." The prize, a generous-sized gingar cake, was awarded to Vic Foreman and Willie Rogers.

Will bought a robber-tired buggy and courted Kate Hill, daughter of the proprietor of the Oologah Hotel. His friends suspected he was falling in love.

Strangely enough in the light of subsequent events, it was Kate Hill who introduced Will to Betty Blake, Betty, of Rogers, Arkansas, was visiting her sister, the wife of Oologah's "depot agent." The introduction was being a trifle formal in Oologah about 1900.

Because Will was Kate's "feller," Betty Blake ignored him. He did tricks on his bicycle, and then on horseback, in front of the hotel where the visitor was staying but to Betty he could not be impressed.

The story of his more successful efforts will come later.

THIRD SIDNEY

3rd Sidney—Sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot Bailey, 2nd Line, on the loss of their barn by fire on Monday afternoon. A threshing outfit belonging to Mr. Lee Crills was in the barn at the time but was taken to safety. Owing to the extremely dry condition of the past few weeks, flames spread rapidly, catching in nearby buildings. The barn belonging to Mr. Angus Lawrence was burned, and a granary on the farm of Mr. Bert Bush also rail fences on adjoining farms. A heavy shower in the early part of the evening saved the setting conditions of grass fires.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jennie Moon are sorry to hear that she has taken to the hospital for treatment and for an operation on Monday evening and hope for a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Snider and Wilfred of Victoria, B.C., are visiting Mr. Snider's brother, Mr. Edwin Adam's and family.

The C.N.R. is an Important Factor in CANADIAN MINING.

Mining is by no means a new industry in Canada, but when its future development is considered in the light of recent discoveries it may quite rightly be said to be only in its infancy. Much of the success which has attended mining in Canada is attributable to the railroad facilities of the C. N. R. were easily available. In the same way its future is linked with the extent and nature of the transportation services at its disposal.

Coal formed the largest single item in weight carried by the C. N. R. in 1934, in that year the system hauled as revenue bearing freight, over 8,000,000 tons. Were it possible to collect this vast amount in freight cars and make one long train, it would extend almost half way across the continent. The importance of this commodity to the factories and homes of Canada needs no stressing : : . but it is well to bear in mind that the railroad is the only land transportation medium for coal haulage where distance is a factor.

Of course other mine products enter into the freight business of the C. N. R. Altogether, over 12,000,000 tons of mine products, embracing coal, coke, ores, sand, stone, gravel, oil, salt, etc., were carried in 1934, this being a substantial increase —22%— over the preceding year.

The mining of metals has of recent years assumed greater dimensions than before, and it may be of interest to note that of non-ferrous metals in semi-refined state, the C. N. R. carried over two hundred thousand tons in 1934, which was more than twice the quantity carried in 1933.

In many districts of Canada the C. N. R. is providing the sole railroad service available to this great industry, and its tracks enter, or are close to, some of the most promising mining areas in the Dominion. In accordance with its policy of rendering the greatest possible public service the C. N. R. is co-operating to the fullest in furthering the development of these areas.

In all these branches of railroad and allied activities the C. N. R. maintains a high standard of efficiency. Its passenger trains are speedy and comfortable . . . fares are low and there are many special excursions at reduced rates. Its freight, express and telegraph services are quick, reliable and economical and its hotels and camps, situated throughout Canada, offer the traveller, whether on business or pleasure, accommodation of the highest standards. You are invited to make a greater use of these C. N. R. facilities.

During the present Summer season the C. N. R. is providing special fares and excursions between points throughout Canada. These are exceptional travel bargains. The nearest C. N. R. Agent will be glad to give full particulars.

FAIR NOTES

A very attractive display of roofing and hardwood flooring material is made by Mr. V. M. Mott, of Bellefonte, who has a specialty of roofing and flooring, and is local representative for Rubberoid Roofing and Knight's Hardwood Flooring.

Motorist visitors to the Fair are attracted by the new Terraplane being exhibited at the Fair by Holgate & Madill, newest addition to Belleville's Motor Row. The new Terraplane is a fine car and one of the most attractive models ever turned out by the company which manufactures them and supplies an Essex popular line of cars. The new Terraplane is a big, roomy one and well and favorably known in Belleville and district, Mr. George Holgate who has had considerable experience as a salesman in this district and Mr. Madill, well known as "Hap" Madill, well known motor mechanic, specialist in tuning up motor cars so that they do their work with the least possible effort and greatest efficiency.

G. D. W. Hardy is showing a very attractive line of Thor Electric Washers, also some of their latest models in electric refrigeration, featuring Frigidaire.

IN MEMORIAM

STAPLES—In loving, affectionate memory of our dear mother, who passed from earth to Heaven to be forever with the Lord just one year ago today, August 29, 1934.
She sleeps in Jesus, His's battle is o'er.
Sin, sorrow or pain shall affect her no more.
The end is past, the victory won,
And all that is worrying past and done.
Sadly missed by her two Daughters, Sister and Grandchildren.

WITHERDEN—In memory of Madge A. Wheeler, who departed this life Aug. 29, 1931.
She is not dead, she's just away.
—Inserted by Husband and Family.

SWEDISH PEOPLE WEEP IN STREETS FOR QUEEN ASTRID

cluded Astrid's marriage to Leopold was a love match . . . love became the history of Swedish royalty.

Memories were recalled of the days when the handsome young Belgian Prince, wearing the dark-haired Astrid, traveled incognito in a third class railway carriage from Stockholm to Stockholm to spend a few hours alone with the girl of his choice.

One of the favorite stories was of Leopold and Astrid motoring together with other couples in a Stockholm park in the evening hours.

Ill Dress Breaks News

Reuter's Agency—Shocked by the death of Queen Astrid of the Belgians, Italy learned of the tragedy in Il Dooe himself to break the tragic news to the Italian Royal family.

A government spokesman said: "This is terrible. The whole Italian nation will mourn the accident deeply as will the Belgians. Everyone knows how we love our King and his family. Any carriage crowded in them will be burned deeply in the hearts of the Italian people."

(Princess Marie Jose of Belgium, sister of King Leopold, is the wife of Crown Prince Umberto of Italy.)

The Vatican City knew that the task of informing Queen mother Elizabeth of Belgium, living with the Duke of Brabant, would involve upon the King himself.

The Queen mother was stricken by the death of King Albert in February, 1934, just a month after her son in Italy with her daughter since an accident on a mountain climbing expedition robbed her of her Royal consort.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service

What Not To Sell

"On the other hand, the following shares might normally be kept, but should be sacrificed now:

1. Shares bought for the long-run cycle, unless they have moved very nicely ahead and have been subjected to wild speculation.

2. Cheap and promising shares with a high earnings yield.

3. Small investors, i.e., those which do not normally fluctuate much in each conjuncture.

4. Shares in groups in which there is no bull position but whose industrial outlook is still considered promising.

5. Shares concerning which good (unexpected) news is expected shortly by your well-informed self, though not apparently by the public. (Publicly expected good news is normally well discounted in advance.

6. Shares with a sharply rising profit curve, and which still show a reasonable earnings yield. These shares rarely realize during conjunctural reactions.

7. Shares which look safe on the graph. But if they look too grossly overvalued, it is usually wise to sell them when even though their graph looks good and their long-run prospects seem favorable. Indeed, it is time in Italy with her daughter normally not unwise to be fair in cash at the peak of any conjuncture which looks dangerous if shares as a whole are overvalued.

With Wall Street losing some of the ground gained in the rise of the past month or so, the Canadian list have also turned somewhat reaction way, although the setback across the line has been much more severe than here. This is as it should be. The Canadian markets did not participate to any appreciable extent in the New York rise and, consequently, there is not as much room for a setback.

The open interest in utilities in New Yorkhas been a little too large for safe appeals to investment reasoning. The small trader and investor in various parts of the country appeared to be active in utilities this summer in much the same manner that they took to the liquor and alcohol stocks in 1933, although this time on a smaller scale. Most houses had a widely scattered long interest in low-priced utility common shares and many of these buyers were not certain of their ground nor able to appreciate the intricacies of a bewilderment weeks ago when utilities were bounding ahead without apparent reason, and they were beginning to wonder whether someone knew something about the legislative outlook which was not apparent to them.

FINANCIAL

There are signs, of course, business reports are spotty, employment erratically moves upward; prices are strong, but there are numerous weak areas; steel output is highly unstable, car loadings show only casual gains. But all the while, stocks seem to creep upward and all the while speculators and investors look for the reaction.

INDUSTRIAL STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)—The Toronto industrial share list displayed firmness in the late trading today though buying was of the casual variety. Approaching the week end, the month-end and the Labor Day holiday on Monday, brokers were inclined to hold to the side-lines and volume was small. Interested sellers, notably the oils, Ford A and some of the issues were inclined to take up the slide under the board gains held a narrow edge over losses.

The interlisted group of the industrial list displayed firming tendencies at the opening, prevailing today after showing a narrow preponderance of losses in the early trading. For A, the oils, Brazilian, Consolidated Smelters and some of the miscellaneous issues were up moderately this afternoon.

The oils chalked up gains of 1-8 to 1-2. In the beer section, the brewing corporation stocks were weak while Canada Malting was on the firm side. Food, utility and steel issues were steady and Bell Telephone and Steel of Canada were firm.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)—The props were knocked from Bear Exploration and Radium today on the mining section of the Toronto exchange today and the price broke down about 90 cents to 72 in an avalanche of selling. The action of the stock in the rising from around 16 cents to 1.03 while other silver stocks were dropping, from one end of the market features in recent weeks. Base Metal shares were soft and eleven issues were off a point or more but they firmed in the afternoon.

The selling of, against Bear Exploration and Radium expanded around noon today and the price broke about 20 cents to 72 from which level it recovered only a few cents. Other issues which moved around the dollar mark for some time, during the silver issues were slightly heavy in the early transactions but were firmer by early afternoon.

Wright Hargreaves was soft.

Weakness extended to the Base Metal group and Falconbridge, Base Metals Corporation and Sherritt sold off, Base Metals going back 10 per for a loss of 5 points while the golds Macassa weakened 9 cents to $3.50 and Lamaque, Kirkland Lake's penny feature, lost ground after moving up nearly 2 points to 4.75 in the early trading. Most of the other golds were steady to strong.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 29.—(AP)— Quiet conditions ruled in the stock market today with dealings almost without interest. Closing prices were irregularly mixed.

Columbia Pictures got up around two points in the last hour of the day and the afternoon.

Others, fractionally to a point or so higher, included U. S. Steel and Bethlehem Common and Preferred, General Motors, Chrysler, Radio Purchase, Montgomery Ward, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Standard Gas, Electric Boat, Douglas Aircraft, Glidden, Kelvinator, General Electric, Public Utilities Holding, Int. Harvester, N. Y. Central, Union Pacific and Douglas. Trading was slow this afternoon. Transfers approximated 1,000,000 shares.

Livestock

Toronto, Aug. 29— (CP)— Early movements of cattle into Toronto market today was almost at a standstill with receipts of calves and lambs traded. The cattle supply of 300 holdovers and 20 fresh was mostly plain stock with few steady. No sheep or hogs were received.

Receipts were light by Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 20; calves 10; lambs 100.

Calves were steady at $4.50 to $8.00 cwt. Lambs also were steady at $7.00 for good, even, weights and $3.00 to $6.00 for other grades.

HOGS

Toronto, Aug. 29 (CP)—Despite steady to higher prices at Toronto yesterday, the current line on bacon hogs was made today at Peterboro. Other quotations per cwt. also held unchanged.

Prices: Peterboro $8.00; Barrie, $8.00; Kitchener, $8.00; Chatham, $8.25; Stratford, $8.00; Brantford $8.05; Palmi, $8.00.

Graded Egg Prices

Regrets Setting Out Whisky As Monkey Dies of Alcoholism

Use of Whiskey to Capture Fugitives is Abandoned

Massapequa, N. Y., Aug. 29—(AP)—Use of whisky as a lure for Frank "Bring-'em-back-alive" Buck's escaped monkey has been regarded last night, because one of the animals drank too much and died of acute alcoholism.

"Nothing has affected me for a long time so much as the death of this little fellow," lamented T. A. Overland, Buck's associate in the wild animal business.

"Had I known this would happen we would never have employed whisky to capture the monkeys."

The monkey which perished was one of three which were captured, dead drunk, after they had guzzled whisky from containers placed in the woods Tuesday night around Buck's Zoo.

Zoo attendants worked over the creatures long and carefully, and it is responded by waking up, hiccoughing once and expiring.

The other two monkeys are doing nicely.

About a dozen monkeys are still at large of the 175 which escaped the zoo last week and attendants fear they are feeling very badly.

Erie, Pa., Aug. 29.—(AP)—Fifteen monkeys roamed through the area of Waldameer Park after escaping from their "jungle" island. Park officials said the animals reached the mainland across a ladder which an employee thoughtlessly left stretched across a water barrier.

The slippery Simians paid little heed to attendants who, throwing bananas, tried to induce them to return home.

—MUSSOLINI, MODERN CAESAR—

UNEMPLOYED AND BOLSHEVISM GAVE MUSSOLINI HIS CHANCE TO BECOME MODERN CAESAR

Fiscist Revolution Not in Mind When He Left War Front

By J. C. CHESTERCHEER

Written for and Copyright by The Daily Ontario Intelligencer and Central Press Canadian

This is the fourth of a series presenting dramatic episodes in the life of Mussolini, Italy's modern Caesar, by an author with an foreign affairs.

Benito Mussolini was not the first Italian to die trenches when Italy entered the World War. A member of the class of 1884, he walled or was compelled to the call, until he was called up. He went, finally, as a private in the ranks to the front at Alto Isonzo in the summer of 1915.

Throughout his career was an honorable one perhaps to the surprise of his superior officers, who were well acquainted with his record as an agitator. He served for almost three years, mainly in the frigid Alpine passes, whether Austrians fought intermittently in death struggle, while the morale of the Italian army rose and fell with each successive victory or defeat. He had his brother during the war. It was a tragic name to the front announcing her illness and he was furloughed to see her. She was dead when he got home.

He was wounded at Caporetto, in January of 1918, when a trench-mortar exploded, killing a number of his companions and wounding all the rest. Some 40 pieces of sharp metal pierced his body. He followed weeks in a front-line hospital. He was then transferred to the military ambulance raised among the wounded. Enemy aeroplanes raided hospitals in the hope of killing the leading Italian Immanuel Kant, and Mussolini, the ex-socialist editor who had turned war hero and shook hands with his former foe, with no suspicion that this man would eventually make a prisoner of the royalty of Italy. In May he returned to Milan, invalided out of the war but still capable of fighting in 'Il Popolo.

Black Months For Italy

These were the blackest months for Italy—the months when Italian soldiers fought and fell—even retreated, fled in disorder. Mussolini, writing of it in his war diary, blamed this break in morale upon ineffective leadership and the cumulative effects of unrest and political unhappiness. The filthy of the war had run its course; the hypodermic had lost its effect.

The war ended with the Italians finally victorious on the Piave. The Austrians this time retreated, and the last shot conquered.

There were yet to be heard the roll of Mussolini's drums.

Early in 1919 he began to campaign for territorial recognition. He knew that Italy had been betrayed and Piume. It gave way slowly to impassioned appeals for the veterans who returned home, as so many others, to find jobs gone, no new ones to be had and starvation their only reward.

"Fascios" Was Misery

Mussolini was in such disease befalling Italy new proof of the unfitness of Italy's governing delegates. They had not mobilized early enough with the result that they suffered for years beyond her deserts when the battlefield. If any time was taken, he charged they failed to prepare for demobilization. They saw industries closed down, throwing thousands out of work. The Red Spectre threatened. The cost of living rose. The parades that soldiers for four years had endured turned into another winter of misery and suffering.

During this period Mussolini's office became the mecca for the unemployed. They received more than 1,000 letters of introduction when jobs might possibly be had, and 10-15 men daily with food was even more urgently needed. Each recipient was a social Bolshevist. Each began to look upon the giver as a Samaritan. Soon, for one, in these troublous days, the Fascist army was formed.

Became Anti-Socialist

But those who came to Mussolini for help were not all young men in the nation. Others, beyond the reach of his personal influence, or opposed to it on principal, began to heed the call of Bolshevism. Here was the ground the enemy in had been setting. He wrote time and again that Bolshevism could not succeed in a land where sunshine and green grass prevailed eight months of the year, and assured his readers that Lenin could never win a happy southern land to the self-satisfied iron rule of an icy Russia.

But he, nevertheless, fought Bolshevism as his springboard to power. Like the Hitler of 1933, he was further his first opponent that Fascism was the only bulwark against Communism—that without this repression of national feeling the red flag would surely have flown over Italy.

Defended Capitalists

He continued to declare that some sort of revolution was necessary for Italy, that the fight against Bolshevism was not to be a defensive. And to lay the groundwork for it, he laid down certain principles which were later the foundation of legislation under Fascist rule. He defended the capitalists "despite their defects" and urged the proletariat to follow in their footsteps, coming to terms with them and dividing the resultant spoils—stepping aside all parasite or right and left. He rallied against Socialist ownership, proclaimed himself for a corporate form of government— a sort of Mosaic Syndicalism, in which each trade or guild would have its respective voice in the conduct of state affairs.

Called "Fascism"

Spontaneously, the movement won its symbol and its name. A young and early group of adherents, fired with the ideal of recreating in twentieth-century Italy the glories of ancient Rome, marched with bundles of sticks—bound with thongs—the fasces, symbols of authority. Victors or Rome as symbols of authority. These were called "fascos." From the word came Fascists and Fascism.

The single popular movement in history, not excepting the Nazi revolution in Germany, that can compare with Mussolini's Fascism. Almost overnight, Mussolini found had dictators at the polls. There were early defeats, but under the leadership of Mussolini with fiery speeches, there came a day when 35 Fascisti were elected to the chamber of deputies. In a few hours the new party became a force to be reckoned with. It could claim a sense dramatic episode to see it develop to maturity.

Worked Alone

In his rise to fame and power, Mussolini had few collaborators. His was the product of a single mind. He had helpers, but no one to share with it without a qualm when he distrusted either their ability or loyalty, but there was never, as in Germany, any sort of Hitler-Goering-Goebbels triumvirate.

But there was one man who gave to the Fascist movement a drama and color that not even Mussolini could supply, an incentive to daring deeds that his youthful followers seized upon to emulate.

That man, still Italy's second citizen, one of the most picturesque, courageous, dramatic figures the peninsula has ever produced, is Gabriel d'Annunzio.

His contribution to the rise of Fascism was the seizure of Piume. How he did it, how it became the man of the hour as the Fascists race to power is told in the fifth article of this series, to be published on-morrow.

JOHN BANNON DENIES GUILT

Says Statement Made by McCardell is False

London, Ont., Aug. 29—(CP)—Through his counsel, A. S. Ferguson, John Russell Bannon of Windsor, committed for trial Monday for alleged participation in the John Labatt kidnapping, has issued a denial of his guilt and of the statement in Michael McCardell's confession that McCardell heard through him of Louis F. McNaughton, Labatt sales manager, being involved in the plot.

McCardell said Bannon was one of the group that plotted the kidnapping and said he learned through Bannon McCaughey was to be one of the five to split the ransom.

Bannon said he did not believe McCaughey to be implicated and the sales manager was not connected with the case through him.

Little Benny's Note Book

Mr and pop was taking a week before supper and as usual the choice is this chap coming tords us, I seem to have him from some where or other.

Meeting a medium size man with a round nose and square shoulders, and a big head, looks as if he thawt he know you, too, pop.

That practically constitutes a personal introduction.

And they both stopped going past and shook hands and looked each other over, then began forgetting each others name, pop saying, Well well, how have you been?

Never better, the man said. And you, I must say you're looking quite fit, he said, and pop said, O, I cant complain much now days, quite some time since I saw you last, he said.

Yes it has, the man said. Still, isn't a sauce time flies, he said, and pop said, Yes, yes indeed, that's the worst thing I do know.

And they looked at each other as if they couldn't think of the next thing to say, and then they both couldn't, and the man said, Where was the last place we met, I cant seem to recall? and pop said, Why, let me see, was it at somebody's house?

Perhaps it was, whose? the man said.

And they looked at each other some more with embarrassed expressions, and pop said, By golies you're not the man I took you for!!

Why no, I'm not, the man said, and pop said, That's what I thawt, by gee whiz, I took you for you dimm Adam.

Well I could tell you from Eve, but that's about all the man said, and pop said, No one at that.

And he handed him a cigar from his vest pocket and the man said, Why thank you, I don't mind if I do.

And he handed pop one from his vest pocket, pop sayso, Thanks, I see we smoke the same brand.

And they took long puffs and one and pop kept on going, pop saying, Chance acquaintances often prove to be the most satisfactory.

RESUSCITATION

Follow These Instructions Even if Victim Appears Dead!

DROWNING—Quickly remove victim from water and place on ground or other hard surface. If possible, have head slightly lower than rest of body, so that water and other liquids will drain away from victim.

Instantly Attend to The Victim's Breathing

As soon as possible, feel with your fingers in the patient's mouth and throat and remove any foreign body (tobacco, false teeth, etc.) If the mouth is tight shut, pay no more attention to it until later. Do not stop to loosen the patient's clothing, but immediately begin actual resuscitation. Every moment of delay is serious. Proceed as follows:

(1) Lay the patient on his stomach, one arm extended directly overhead, the other arm bent at elbow and with the face turned outward and resting on hand or forearm, so that the nose and mouth are free for breathing (See Figure 1.)

(2) Kneel, straddling the patient's thighs, with your knees placed at such a distance from the hip bones as will allow you to assume the position shown in Figure 1.

Place the palms of the hands on the small of the back with fingers resting on the ribs, the little finger just touching the lowest rib, with the thumb and fingers in a natural position, and the tips of the fingers just out of sight. (See Figure 1.)

(3) With arms held straight, swing forward slowly so that the weight of your body is gradually brought to bear upon the patient. The shoulder should be directly over the tips of the hand at the end of the forward swing. (See figure 2.) Do not bend your elbows. This operation should take about two seconds.

(4) Now immediately swing backward so as to completely remove the pressure (See Figure 1.)

(5) After two seconds, swing forward again. Thus repeat deliberately twelve to fifteen times a minute the double movement of compression and release, a complete respiration in four or five seconds.

(6) Continue artificial respiration without interruption until natural breathing is restored or until Rigor Mortis (body stiffening) sets in. DO NOT STOP.

(7) As soon as this artificial respiration has been started and while it is being continued, an assistant should loosen all clothing about the patient's neck, chest or waist. Keep patient warm. Do not give any liquids whatever by mouth until the patient is fully conscious.

Admonition Sanctions Mean Serious War Trouble Says Duce at War Front

Take Measures

"In any event," said the Communique, "that Fascist Government fulfills its precise duty by making known to the Italian people all the proportion of sanctions has been examined by the highest military authorities of the regime under all aspects and as regards eventual sanctions of a warlike nature. Decisions and measures necessary to face them have been taken already in Silver Tabby female kitten and first and second in Silver Tabby female.

Father of 26 Children Convicted

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 29—(CP)—Thirty-three-year-old Henry Culmer, who said he was the father of about 30 children, 10 of whom are living, was convicted of a serious charge involving a young boy in Magistrate's court Thursday and remanded one week for sentence.

With the Italian Army, Sobano, Italy, Aug. 29.—(AP)—After an extraordinary meeting here near the mimic battle field Il Duce's cabinet today stood before the world with: (1) an admonition sanctions mean serious trouble; (2) a determination to attack Ethiopia at the council session and, (3) fundamental decisions which closed relations with Ethiopia.

The cabinet meeting gave assurance British Imperial rights would not be touched by the Italian drive. Italian fleet to Suez Canal waters in order to keep that channel open. Communique which disclosed measures already decided upon the military measures it would take in event of sanctions.

English System Of Relief May Be Adopted

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)— The Mail and Empire today said in part:

Early adoption by the Hepburn Government of the English system of relief distribution and administration was rumored last night as certain municipalities—chiefly the supervised municipalities of the Toronto area—considered what today might bring in the way of new policy announcement from Hon. Duncan A. Croll, Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs.

Adoption of the English system, which was closely studied by Mr. Croll during his visit to the Old Country—would mean, it is understood, total abolition in Ontario of relief vouchers, payment of cash in fixed sums at fixed intervals to all relief recipients, whether they work for the money or not, establishment at strategic points of "clubs" or stations through which to make payments.

The present renewed Queen's Park drive for departmental economy is said to include a study for the suggested introduction of the English system.

Electrocuted at Noranda

Ottawa, Aug. 29—(CP)—Ray Larkin, 24, former resident of this city was electrocuted while wiring a mine at Noranda.

Little Benny's Note Book

Meeting a medium size man with a round nose and square shoulders, and a big head, looks as if he thawt he know you, too, pop.

That practically constitutes a personal introduction.

And they both stopped going past and shook hands and looked each other over, then began forgetting each others name, pop saying, Well well, how have you been?

Never better, the man said. And you, I must say you're looking quite fit, he said, and pop said, O, I cant complain much now days, quite some time since I saw you last, he said.

Yes it has, the man said. Still, isn't a sauce time flies, he said, and pop said, Yes, yes indeed, that's the worst thing I do know.

And they looked at each other as if they couldn't think of the next thing to say, and then they both couldn't, and the man said, Where was the last place we met, I cant seem to recall? and pop said, Why, let me see, was it at somebody's house?

Perhaps it was, whose? the man said.

And they looked at each other some more with embarrassed expressions, and pop said, By golies you're not the man I took you for!!

Why no, I'm not, the man said, and pop said, That's what I thawt, by gee whiz, I took you for you dimm Adam.

Well I could tell you from Eve, but that's about all the man said, and pop said, No one at that.

And he handed him a cigar from his vest pocket and the man said, Why thank you, I don't mind if I do.

And he handed pop one from his vest pocket, pop sayso, Thanks, I see we smoke the same brand.

And they took long puffs and one and pop kept on going, pop saying, Chance acquaintances often prove to be the most satisfactory.

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"Did you?" said Brian grimly. "Do you know shall I tell you just what these gentlemen actually are?"

Mr. McGinness blinked and looked at him with surprise.

"They were all, of course, perfectly straightforward and simple men—I had to deal with him, didn't tell me all his affairs; he was a most secretive man," he said, and there was a tinge of asperity in his voice. "But we are straying from the point."

Brian looked at him, wondering whether he or Sannister was the crook of the two.

"The point being that I've no interest in this will, or control over it McGinness. "That seems to be right. . . I notice he calls you his partner."

McGinness had the poker-player's face, but to Brian's eyes he had a very visibly uneasy under the surface.

"To be candid with you, Mr. Chalmers, that was a phrase I never quite liked. Strictly, I wasn't his partner except in one very simple transaction; but he insisted on it in his will, and he insisted on every word of it. He had a very real affection for me, as I for him; but his instructions had to be obeyed to the letter, and it was always understood that I should be master to her personal estate."

"Sannister Coote is dead, and he is lying in Nordmeer mortuary," said Brian. "I'm not going to say anes his partner, you are unfortunate. . . For his dealings with just about as many of the theft of the Stannary Mine on a dark night, Mr. McGinness."

McGinness gasped, looking at him in blank amazement.

"What on earth are you talking about?"

"Just that; we'll come back to it directly," interrupted Brian. "It seems to me—and I'm sure you'll agree, McGinness—that there's something missing in this mystery—the murder of Sannister Coote, and everything that's followed it. I quite understand your anxiety about this will as things are. You say it's valid. Is Selby's claim valid, too?"

"Yes; obviously."

"Then you don't intend to oppose it?"

"I couldn't, even if I wished to Coote had the right to do what he chose with his money."

"Do you tell me why the Selby family are in the will as legatees. I'd like to hear a little more about the Selby's."

McGinness shook his head.

"There's little or nothing about them, except that they were in Coote's service and that he insisted on making this provision for them. He gave no reason to me—only that they're old and trusted servants who deserved all he could do for them. I thought the legacies a little excessive, myself. But when Coote wanted a thing done, it had to be done."

"And did this old and trusted servant know that he was down in Sannister Coote's will for five thousand pounds?"

"No one knew it, except Coote and myself. I am his lawyer, and the will was placed in my charge; it was only drawn up a month ago. Here is your signature, Chalmers; you recognise it?"

"There, that's my signature; I remember Coote signing it too. Dale, September 6. So getting on that. . . I'd never troubled about its terms. You tell me the Selbys didn't either?"

A faint dew of perspiration glistened on McGinness's forehead.

"Apparently not. And no one, surely, could suspect Selby. . . When I heard of this disaster, I wrote to them at once to put, as you're now the head of the family, Mr. Selby, and to keep it without any delay. If I could ever have dreamed of such an appalling thing happening, nothing would have induced me—" There was a tremor in his voice. "I came to see me at once; when did you hear of Sannister's death, Mr. Chalmers?"

"Late last night, when I returned home. I'd been kidnapped at Dale from the Amsterdam boat, mid-day yesterday. . . Tonight I should see you before going to the police."

"Mid-day yesterday! Amsterdam! You've been in Amsterdam?"

"For the last five days."

"Surprising, considering the diamond trade, isn't it?"

"I believe so. I know very little about diamonds."

"Well, I'm a jewel expert, Mr. Chalmers; it's my job, for the moment we'll keep to the will. You get Sannister's personal estate, less the thousand pounds, and to the Selbys. That seems clear enough."

"Certainly."

"Has it occurred to you that James Selby might have had another nothing about—was a blackmailer. And maybe something there came out?"

McGinness gasped faintly.

"That does sound preposterous to me. Would Coote include Selby in his will, if that were so?"

"He might. In certain circumstances; perhaps blackmailer isn't quite the word. But Selby gets five thousand, if he is living, and can claim it. Supposing he's dead—it goes to his widow. And five hundred to his daughter."

Brian pressed the bell. Grant appeared promptly; Brian gave him a scribbled note.

"If Mrs. Selby hasn't gone, give her that, ask her to come here at once. And her daughter."

He turned to McGinness.

"I propose we have them both in, and let the will be read in their turn. Then you've got it up to me. Does that suit you?"

"Certainly," said McGinness. "The sooner this is cleared up the better."

The door opened, and Mrs. Selby appeared, Deborah at her side, both of them in hats and cloaks.

"Come in," said Brian. "Mr. Coote's lawyer is going to read Mr. Coote's will, and as your husband's name is in it you ought to hear it before you start. It isn't going to take long, but you'd better sit down, Mrs. Selby."

"I prefer to stand, sir," said the woman tragically. "All I want to know, is what's happened to my Jim."

Deborah Selby looked with lowering eyes at Brian, and from him to the lawyer. Her dark little face was extraordinarily bitter.

The door swung open again, and Sonia walked in, like a breath of fresh air; her eyes sparkled with excitement. She took in the assembly at a glance, pausing over the two women, and looked curiously at Mr. McGinness.

"A conference"? she said. "Not interrupting you, am I? Who is your guest, Brian?"

If the four were surprised, Brian showed it least.

"I don't know if you want to be in this scene," he said. "But Mr. McGinness is Sannister's lawyer; he is about to read Sannister's will before the beneficiaries; at my suggestion."

"Is that so. It's a little early isn't it?" said Sonia. "But I've been wondering if some such news were on the way, and I think it's an excellent suggestion. I'm glad to see you, Mr. McGinness. You might present me."

"McGinness, meet Miss Sonia Neil; my fiancee," said Brian.

McGinness gazed at Sonia speechless whatever. He rose, and bowed stiffly. Like most men who met her, he was unable to take his eyes from Sonia's face.

"Miss Neil," he said, "I hope you will allow me—to congratulate you on—"

Sonia smiled.

"How that's really nice of you," she said. "Should we wait legal advice, you'll be able to help us. But as you're here officially don't let me delay the meeting. There's nothing to be interesting as a will."

Deborah Selby, two danger-spots of high color on her cheeks, faced Sonia.

"What is it to you!" she said bitterly. "This isn't any business of yours—it concerns my mother, and me!"

"And not me?" returned Sonia. "It concerns Mr. Chalmers, And I believe I'll stay."

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

Sonia seated herself and crossed one knee over the other, smiling at Mr. McGinness—chilly, trim, serene. Deborah flushed to the roots of her hair.

"You're goin' to be mistress here at King's Rin, eh! You're goin' to marry him, I'll be having a word to say to that. Well then—stay!" Brian, with a wide angry was on the point of breaking out, but McGinness pre before him.

"Most certainly. Miss Neil will stay if she wishes; I am glad that she should!" said the lawyer in considerable agitation. "For goodness sake control yourself, young woman—this is no place—"

"Just so," said Sonia. Get on with it."

Mr. McGinness, perspiring visibly, adjusted his spectacles, and after a preliminary cough or so read, in a steady, unemotional voice the will of Sannister Coote and Sannister Coote.

Sonia listened attentively. Tense though the situation was, as she heard the clauses read out she could not help a twinkle of amusement in her eyes. Not a word came from Deborah. She was trembling slightly, and she listened without seeming to understand.

Finally it was Deborah who stepped out into the centre, her small hands clenched.

"I've understood!" she said. "I've understood! It's a lie!"

"Not ungenerous, surely," said McGinness. "Did you expect more?"

"I expected what I'd been promised sitting into a chair. She leaned over the arm, burying her face in her hands; sobs shook her from head to foot.

"I didn't want it!" she groaned. "I never wanted it. Jim might have had it, but I didn't. He was dead to me. A better man no woman ever had, I'd married her head, but my heart was streaming with tears; a dreadful tragic figure. "I've lost him—he's dead. Dead!"

"Mrs. Selby, you can't be sure of that," said Colonel Capell. "No wrong has been committed. For just before they left this morning he told me that she had promised to marry him!"

Deborah's eyes blazed at him.

"That comes well from you two!" she said. "You an' that girl beside you!"

She turned to McGinness.

"Look at them! Dead man's money! How did he die? Ask him!" She pointed to Brian. "And that girl—she's deeper than you are, sitting there as quiet as a kitten. Laughin' in her sleeve at us all, she knows!"

Brian strode forward.

"Stop!" he said, and there was that in his face that for a moment made Deborah shrink back. "Any woman here may say what she chooses to me and it doesn't move me an inch! But leave Miss Neil alone. I've listened long enough, he's dead . . . dead."

McGinness' face was pale, and his lips set tight, but he preserved his dignity.

"Gentlemen," he said. "Even if this amazing thing is true, I find it difficult to believe that you would press such a claim; that any man would be so heartless and cruel—dies would do so, who by a tragic accident of fate, had come into a great fortune through the murder of death. . . That having all this he would grasp at the rest and claim the last cent."

A queer little smile twisted Brian's mouth.

"Do you, McGinness?" he said. "You may possibly be right. It's not a claim I'd have been in a hurry to make . . . But I'm a fighter. I want you to understand, McGinness, that I hold you, and these people whom you represent in the hollow of my hand."

McGinness was silent. It was the silence of surrender. Everybody in the room knew that Brian was master of the situation. . . Deborah, from him, and Sannister Coote's lawyer, and the two servants.

But Deborah Selby stepped up to him, her face working, her eyes quivering, and her eyes blazed.

"He's darling!" she screamed. "He's a murderer! He knows that. . . He's darling! He knows that. . . Let him claim it from the hook—let him claim it from the dock! You can't kill a man and claim money!"

"The police? . . . They're clever, poor cheap crook, who only came here to arrest Jim Selby! This cheap Barker. . . But they know! They know! They'll collect them. He was at the mine that night . . . He says he doesn't . . . he's a liar! He did. . . He's a murderer, I tell him. He'll get no money, all he'll get is the rope!"...

She pointed a blazing finger at Brian.

"He did it! I know he did! He killed Sannister Coote! And he killed my father!"

"Killed them! He killed them both."

"Come, now!" said a deep voice. The door was wide open, Sergeant Howe stood close behind her; a big towering figure in loose tweeds, his friend, with Hesseltons kind. His entry took the whole company by shock; except Deborah, who turned on him like a tiger-cat.

"It's true!" she cried shrilly. "Why ain't he arrested? You got to take a year about it! I say he killed them! He's a murderer! He came back here to foul us all. . . I was glad when she stopped him and was with him in Brown Wood before ever you saw him at the Inn—as I've told you. Chalmers killed Coote; when they put me in the witness box I'll tell the world what I know . . . and he killed my father!"

MR. AND MRS— By Briggs

TARZAN THE UNTAMED— (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

The last sentence of the dairy's entry read: "Lady Greystoke we take with us." She will be of more value to the Red Command alive than dead. . . .

"She left only Tarzan," said Colonel Capell. "And now?" "I will return with you, of course," replied the ape-man. "Undoubtedly all your headquarters I will find my wife, or else receive news of her."

"Now terribly I have misjudged Patricia Canby!" continued Tarzan. "Why, I even told Lieutenant Orell, who loves her, that she was a fool, and "Don't worry about TRAT," said Colonel Capell. "No wrong has been committed. For just before they left this morning he told me that she had promised to marry him!"

Soon Tarzan was returning with Colonel Capell to British Headquarters. There he rejoined Patricia Canby and Lieutenant Orell, happy in their love, he haughtily accepted Tarzan's apologies for his suspicion. And there he heard the closing news that his wife Jane had been rescued from the Reds and returned to the West Coast.

Hurriedly Tarzan took leave of his new friends, and set out, across, on long journeys to the site of his burned home. Weeks later he came in sight of it. It was a hive of activity. In his absence Lady Greystoke had begun to rebuild it. And the arm of her husband succeeding her completed the joy that the Red War had almost wrecked. . . .

Beginning Tomorrow —TARZAN The INVINCIBLE

His turned to the lawyer, "Now hear me.

"McGinness, you're named as Sannister's executor, and you call yourself his friend. I didn't know till three days back that Sannister was a crook, and an associate of crooks."

McGinness sat bolt upright in his chair; he looked Brian squarely in the face.

"Chalmers, I don't understand you; have you taken leave of your senses? Are you trying to bring an accusation against me?"

"No," said Brian grimly. "I accuse no man or woman, but I've the proof to lay down before them. You claim here to find at all the earliest moment what my attitude would be to this will of Sannister's. To establish your claim and Selby's claim. . . I'm a witness to the will, I've been through Sannister's papers; they show personal assets of his amounting to thirty thousand pounds."

"Well, then—"

"That's one fact—now hear another! Sannister Coote has been killed by the poison he gave to his wife—to the tune of nearly thirty thousand, that includes the value of a stolen heirloom; the Coote Diamond. When I file my claim to recover it, I've also got nothing left for Sannister's heirs to claim."

Sonia sat back in her chair, and smiled.

"Exactly," she said.

"I hold up my finger, and that will be the end of Selby's claim," he paper. He's written on. . . Legally it may be sound—but there's a decent behind it. A cent! . . . Well, there may be an odd thousand on the balance! I doubt even that."

McGinness seemed petrified. He stared at Brian with incredulous eyes.

Mrs. Selby dropped her head upon her arms with a wild moan.

"Money! They talk of nothin' but money," she murmured broken-ly. "They could have all Coote owned, if I had my Jim back. And both."

"Killed them! He killed them both!" said a deep voice.

"The door was wide open, Sergeant Howe stood close behind her; a big towering figure in loose tweeds, his friend, with Hesseltons kind. His entry took the whole company by shock; except Deborah, who turned on him like a tiger-cat.

"It's true!" she cried shrilly. "Why ain't he arrested? You got to take a year about it! I say he killed them! He's a murderer! He came back here to foul us all. . . # Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE
"Little Men"
Charm, Comedy, Romance, Blend in New York Story

Two excellent screen attractions will be offered at the Belle Theatre today and Friday, matinee daily at 2.30.

The first feature, Louisa M. Alcott's immortal romance, "Little Men" comes to life in Mascot Picture's latest version of the classic which has been an outstanding favorite with readers of three generations.

All of the book's matchless charm is masterfully recaptured on the screen, and the cast of "Little Men" includes one of the most imposing arrays of child and adult stars ever assembled in Hollywood.

There is humor, pathos, distinguished stage and screen actor in the role of "Uncle Jack" Brooke, owner of quaint Plumfield School around which revolves this death-less story of New England in the seventies. There is lovely O'Brien-Moore, New York humbarjy, as "Jo". There are Junior Durbin, dainty Cora Sue Collins, and Phyllis Fraser, and a host of "Little Men" headed by Frankie Darro, David Durand and Dickie Moore.

You will find laughter and tears and a tugging at your heart-strings. Young or old, "Little Men" is YOUR picture. It is ideal family entertainment. (Please note: "Little Men" will be presented daily at 2.45 and 8.45 p.m.

Arranged in addition to the above a second feature picture is also being presented, Warner Bros. hilarious comedy, "We're in the Money," with that inimitable trio of comedians, Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell and Hugh Herbert as the stellar roles.

The story by George R. Sikes and the screen play by Manuel Seff is an extremely funny and laugh-packed comedy that will more than satisfy all.

The picture concerns the efforts of two clever girls, Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell, to serve subpoenas on wealthy men in breach of promise suits.

They work for a shyster lawyer, played by Hugh Herbert, who is so absent-minded he frequently forgets which side he is on.

Glenda remains forever the gold-digger, but Joan falls in love with a wealthy young man dressed in a chauffeur's uniform to escape process servers.

Ross Alexander is the hunted man. Phil Regan sings a catchy air within especially for the picture. Man Mountain Dean and Chief Caupolican, Indian, distinguished stage and screen actor in the role of "Pop Chase" are seen as janitor of quaint Plumfield School around which revolves this death-less story of New England in the seventies. There is lovely O'Brien-Moore, New York humbarjy, as "Jo". There are Junior Durbin, dainty Cora Sue Collins, and Phyllis Fraser, and a host of "Little Men" headed by Frankie Darro, David Durand and Dickie Moore.

and assure you that this midnight performance will be well worth attending. In addition to the feature a splendid array of short subjects will be shown prior to the feature. Doors will be opened at 11.30 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL
"Lady Tobe"
A Rollicking Comedy and Action-Packed Western Opens Double Bill

Many sly jabs are taken at the snobbish rich in "Lady Tobe", the rollicking comedy now playing at the Capitol Theatre along with Zane Grey's latest starring vehicle, "Awakening of Jim Burke".

"Lady Tobe" is a mistaken-order farce for the clownish Alice Brady, with Douglas Montgomery and Anita Louise in chief support.

The wealthy Ash-Orcutts, of Long Island, belatedly object to the marriage of their manly son to the niece of a former cook at a railway construction camp, solely on account of the fact that the girl comes from the wrong side of the tracks and can boast of no "family connections".

But when the aunt inherits a fortune and returns from England master-minding under the fictitious title of "Lady Tobbs" the obsequious Ash-Orcutts receive the supposed blue-blooded aunt with open arms and entertain them lavishly. When she, as the cook, now turned lady, is still not satisfied, however, and with the aid of a contemptuous neighbor succeeds in dragging out the closets of the luxurious Long Island mansion a pair of skeletons which the socialites had previously kept hidden.

The climax of the story brings a succession of laughable situations, culminating in Alice Brady's very embarrassing to her "snooty" set boobies.

The story of "Lady Tobbs" was written by Homer Croy, and besides the above named principals includes such players as Hedda Hopper, Alan Mowbray and Lumsden Hare.

The Capitol also presents the latest starring venture of Jack Holt in "The Awakening of Jim Burke" and is an ideal story for his stalwart and dynamic personality.

It is a colorful story set in a rough construction camp in the rugged West, and concerns itself with the misunderstanding that arises between father and son when the boy, instead of being the tough young ruffian he has been reputed, turns out to be a gentle, talented violinist. Holt is cast as the father role, with young Jimmie Butler as his son.

Kathleen Burke and Florence Rice are the two young ladies who are rivals for the affections of the father and son.

Others in the cast include Robert Middlemass, Ralph Remley and George McKay.

A Fox Movietone Newsreel shows the last minute events of world wide happenings.

At 12.01 next Monday morning the Capitol will present a double Fox view of Joe E. Brown's latest and funniest comedy, called "Bright Lights". He is supported by an excellent cast that includes such well known names as Patricia Ellis, Ann Dvorak, Joe Cawthern and William Gargan.

QUEEN'S BODY IS PLACED IN PALACE IN CAPITAL CITY

Tragic Homecoming Witnessed by a Mourning Nation

TROOPS LINE STREETS

King Leopold Left Train Before Arrival at Downtown Station

(By Accoard Trans Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Brussels, Aug. 30 (AP)—To the mutfled roll of drums and the shrill notes of bugles sounding "Aux Champs" (Last Post) the dead Queen Astrid made her tragic homecoming today to the country, which has grown to love her.

Bathed with flowers and lighted by six large candles, the simple coffin was placed in the palace chapel.

Her special train, that bore the body from Switzerland as it drew into the cowlsom Gare Du Nord station at 9 a.m. (3:00 a.m. E.D.T.) found a city in deep mourning.

Converging crowds wept openly in the streets and doors were draped with black crepe and shop windows shuttered. A deathlike hush fell over the crowd outside the station as the Queen's body was lifted from the coach in which it made the overnight journey from Lucerne.

Sobs from the bareheaded crowd broke the deep silence as attendants placed the flag-draped coffin on the gun carriage which was to convey it to the palace.

Slowly the procession moved with the gun carriage and the caisson moved behind the hearse as the last procession to the palace began. Troops lined each side of the street.

Grey children clutched mothers' hands watching the mournful drama. Queen Astrid's three children played sadly in a garden in one of the palace wings, unaware mother never would return to them.

King Leopold was depressed, and, his children's grief-stricken today and a sleepless night. Before he left the train he exchanged his own injuries. In the palace as he led the procession to the coffin he sat with bowed head.

The funeral party halted briefly outside the palace to receive Queen Astrid had spent so few of her happy months in Belgium as the grand staircase to a flower-decked chapel.

The grief of the huge crowd outside the palace gates was deeply stirred few it was in the chapel where Queen Astrid's body was temporarily placed. That the tragic King Albert lay in state less than 18 months ago.

Funeral on Tuesday

For a short time while some court officials and a few others were admitted to the chapel, Albert reigned waited in another room of the palace. Then when the doors were opened gore he entered the room alone and knelt beside the bier.

The crowd outside the palace sympathetically noted the distress of Leopold, while the doors of the chapel were closed.

The funeral party halted briefly outside the palace to receive Queen Astrid had spent so few of her happy months in Belgium as husband and little family self to be a Hydro Electric Commission inspector, a man giving his name as William Lytle, address unknown, was arrested by Provincial Police as he motored into Belleville shortly before noon today.

In the man's possession were four documents and papers with various names such as Russell Dacilla, W. Jones and others.

He is wanted in Napanee on a charge of fraud, the information for his apprehension being relayed to Belleville by Chief Walls of Napanee twenty minutes prior to his arrest.

According to the information received by Provincial Police Lytle impressed himself to be a Hydro inspector and offered two Napanee young men jobs on the promised completion of new Hydro lines, allegedly first getting a deposit as the applicants for the transportation. Chief Walls arrived in Belleville noon and escorted Lytle back to Napanee where other charges of fraud may be laid, the Napanee Chief Constable stated.

Lytle was driving a new sedan automobile purchased in Canadian this year and a complete check-up of his activities has been ordered by Provincial Fraud Gardner of the Ontario Provincial Police.

GEORGE W. TICE

(Syracuse, N.Y.)

Word was received in the city Thursday evening by Mayor George O. Tice of the death at his uncle, George W. Tice, in Syracuse, N.Y., after a short but serious illness, although he has been in failing health for some years. The deceased was a former resident of this district having resided in Prince Edward County for many years and was well known in this city when he conducted a mail route between Roblin Mills village and Belleville. He was born in Ameliasburg Township, 88 years ago, being the son of the late Henry and Olive Tice. The deceased was a descendant of the United Empire Loyalists and although he resided in the United States for many years, was always proud of his native country. He was a member of the Methodist Church and active in Church work. While in politics he was a Republican. Left to mourn his loss are two daughters, Estelle and Clara of Syracuse, New York and a step-daughter, Mrs. Howard Landon also of Syracuse and with whom he resided. The late James Tice of Wellington were brothers. In July of this year, the deceased visited with Mayor George O. Tice and his sister-in-law, Mrs. James S. Tice. The funeral will be held on Sunday in Syracuse, New York.

JUBILEE STAMPS SHOULD BE SAVED SAYS COLLECTOR

Walter Emerson of Chicago Looks Over Local Collections

HOBBY GROWING

A hobby which was started by him when he was not quite twelve years old, and afterwards became his life's work, was described in this city yesterday by Walter M. Emerson Chicago, professional stamp collector, expert appraiser, and quiet-spoken president of the Chicago Philatelic Society. Mr. Emerson, on a brief trip through Ontario, spent the greater part of the day here where he interviewed several leading collectors of the city in the store of James Tuzia.

Singularly reticent regarding the hobby which later turned to a profession and has gained him wide distinction in collectors' circles, and a comfortable living, the Chicago expert to whom the rare and curious bits of postage matter are the most fascinating study on earth, delivered the comment:

Collecting Interest

Either you are a stamp fan or you are not. Up like man who does not understand the appeal which lies in the collection of the various stamps it may appear odd. But as for golf, too, to a good many people, he says.

Belleville, Mr. Emerson found, is not the ideal stamp-collecting centre when compared with other cities of Canada and the United States for size. Kingston, for example, has twice or three times as many genuine collectors, many of whom treasure perfect exhibits and collections. Peterborough is "a good town," but Canadian in not the interest that is displayed in even the smaller cities of the United States. Mr. G. M. James of Belleville is one of the few in this city who is collecting stamps with the realm of the mere fan. Many rare and valuable stamps are owned by the local resident.

Money in Stamps

There's money in stamps. Mr. Emerson is quick to point out. Stories of mere tyros stumbling by chance upon one of the rare varieties and realising a fortune from the sale to stamp collectors.

"One of the most expensive stamps in the world was sold by a young chap to another fellow for a cool $2,000.00. But there are many others in the world which range almost up to that price. The prizes collectors' with which the average small collector starts up may be had from $1. to $2.50. Stamps in varieties with which Mr. Emerson, president of the Chicago Philatelic Society. Mr. Emerson, on a brief trip through Ontario, spent the greater part of the day here where he interviewed several leading collectors of the city in the store of James Tuzia.

Singularly reticent regarding the hobby which later turned to a profession and has gained him wide distinction in collectors' circles, and a comfortable living, the Chicago expert to whom the rare and curious bits of postage matter are the most fascinating study on earth, delivered the comment:

Collecting Interest

Either you are a stamp fan or you are not. Th ide man who does not understand the appeal which lies in the collection of the various stamps it may appear odd. But as for golf, too, to a good many people, he says.

Belleville, Mr. Emerson found, is not the ideal stamp-collecting centre when compared with other cities of Canada and the United States for size. Kingston, for example, has twice or three times as many genuine collectors, many of whom treasure perfect exhibits and collections. Peterborough is "a good town," but Canadian in not the interest that is displayed in even the smaller cities of the United States. Mr. G. M. James of Belleville is one of the few in this city who is collecting stamps with the realm of the mere fan. Many rare and valuable stamps are owned by the local resident.

Money in Stamps

There's money in stamps. Mr. Emerson is quick to point out. Stories of mere tyros stumbling by chance upon one of the rare varieties and realising a fortune from the sale to stamp collectors.

"One of the most expensive stamps in the world was sold by a young chap to another fellow for a cool $2,000.00. But there are many others in the world which range almost up to that price. The prizes collectors' with which the average small collector starts up may be had from $1. to $2.50. Stamps in varieties with which collection of about 1,200 stamps of different varieties for about $100," explains Mr. Emerson.

In his own collection Mr. Emerson treasures one of the most complete series of American stamps in the United States. His collection contains some 2,000 different varieties of United States stamps. Many of them are almost invaluable from the collector's point of view.

Silly Stamp Blooms

"Nine tenths of the stamp stories you see in the daily papers are humbug and generally give the real collector a good laugh. Some reporter gets hold of what appears to him to be a good story about some foreign stamp and it is placed up to the wire. Once I was quoted in a leading American paper as having a collection of 2,000 or so varieties. Why any mere kid first starting out has that much. You can see how impossible all this is when I tell you there are about 40,000 varieties listed in the books, of which collection packs are made.

The depression has been responsible for the doubling and trebling of collections of collectors in the past two or three years in Canada and in the United States, according to the Chicago expert.

Sense of Public Shame

"People even many of the rich ones, found they could no longer play around with packs and fast cars and they turned to cheaper amusements. A friend this is the stamp-collecting hobby. Now they have turned out to be real fans," he explained.

One word to the occasional collector. Save your King's Jubilee stamps that were issued primarily this year. They will be a prize.

In a few years, and in fifty years' time may return a sizeable profit on the face value purchased them along to future generations, warned the expert.

BOWLING MEET AT STIRLING CLUB

Sixteen Rinks Were Entered, Campbellford Wins First Honors

Stirling—Though cloudy and cool weather prevailed throughout the afternoon and evening, sixteen entries were on hand at the local bowling greens to take part in the mixed bowling tournament held at the Stirling Bowling Club on Wednesday afternoon and evening, three from Campbellford, two from Frankford, two from Madoc, one from Warkworth, one from Deseronto, two from Cobourg and five from Cobourg. Campbellford rink composed of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Archer and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wiggins carried off first honors winning three games for a total of 42 points out of a possible 48. The ladies each received silver relish dishes and the gentlemen each received silver water jugs.

The second prizes for three wins went to Wilson's rink of Madoc composed of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Patterson and C. S. Morton were successful in winning the prize for two wins with a net score of 38 points. Silver butter dishes went to the ladies while the gentlemen received leather hassocks. A Madoc rink composed of Mr. and Mrs. Waverley Hughes and Mr. and Mrs. were successful in winning the prize for three wins with only one win. The ladies received linen luncheon sets and the gentlemen Swedish flower vases.

At the close of the tournament the ladies of the Stirling Club served refreshments and the prizes were presented by Mr. Thos. W. Solmes in the absence of Mr. C. H. Baker, President of the local Club.

Members of Stirling Tennis Take Part in Tweed Tournament

On Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 28th, several members of the Bowling Lawn Tennis Club motored to Tweed where they took part in an inter-club tournament being sponsored by the Club of that Community. Though the weather was ideal and the games throughout the tournaments were keenly contested the visiting player only succeeded in winning their matches when played. The showing of the Stirling players showed a great deal of improvement over their showing the last time they met the members of the Tweed Club some weeks ago. The weather was ideal and the courts in excellent condition for the occasion. The results of the games were as follows—

In the ladies doubles—M. Lovibond and W. Morton lost to C. Morrison and Mrs. McTague 5-6 6-1 6-2.

In the mixed doubles—H. Mallory and A. Mehlejohn lost to J. McTague and D. Bowers, 6-3, 8-6. J. Ardenne defeated A. Mehlejohn 5-8, 6-3, 6-3 and Sid Arber defeated H. Lovibond 6-4, 6-3.

In the men's doubles C. Holmes and J. Ward defeated L. Morrison and J. Ryan 6-0, 6-3.

T. Moffat and J. McTague defeated L. Bateman and M. Lovibond 6-1, 3-6 and 6-3.

L. McCue and R. Williams defeated N. Bowers and F. Tummon 5-6, 6-3, 6-3.

The Stirling Club are planning to hold their annual tournament on Monday September 2nd, and all entrants in this tournament which is being held in the interest of weaker Clubs whose members have not been engaged in senior tournaments will be expected to qualify under the ruling that they have not participated in senior tournaments.

In the past few years this tournament has done much to encourage the weaker clubs in this district. Last year the ruling was changed from five to three years in barring senior players. But this year, although the three year period still stands no barring on any age limitation in any town will be allowed to enter if they have played in senior tournaments in the last three seasons. Suitable prizes have been secured and the silver Trophy given to the club winning the most points in the day's play.

HEAVY THRESHING BEST IN YEARS

Live stock in this district will feed well and plentifully throughout the coming winter season, as farmers in the section, now taking stock after one of the most successful threshing seasons on record find themselves literally with feed to burn.

On every farm barns are packed to the rafters with an abundance of feed for the coming cold months. Grasses by reported over the past years, crop, clover this year has started beyond the dreams of farmers and will constitute the bulk of the forage. Varying estimates of the grain crop, however, are given although estimates of acreage planted show a more than favorable return for the expenditure of seed and labor.

Corn and roots, it was declared, needed a steady drizzle of rain such as that received on Friday, in order to attain full growth, After being stunted by weeks of drouth weather, Late potatoes, also a heavy yield, will benefit immensely by the downpour.

Threshers counted the present season as the heaviest on record, and one of the hardest on their machines. Heavy, woody stalks on grain made the work of threshing slow and tedious, necessitating overtime work far into the late evenings with electric lights providing the illumination on many of the farms. So plentifully has been the yield of grain, that local buyers at the present time look upon it as almost a drug on the market. Outside buyers, who would have liked to maintained a steady demand for all sort of grain, particularly barley this year are finding a lukewarm attitude in the matter. Elevators are reported full and only a slow movement in grain is reported in this immediate section.

Fiume Episode of D'Annunzio Gave Mussolini Drive for Fascist State in Italy First Big Impetus

This is the fifth of a series of dramatic highlights in the life of Benito Mussolini.—Editor.

By J. C. OESTRICHER.

Written for and copyrighted by Ontario Intelligencer and Central Press Canadian.

Since the rise to power of Benito Mussolini, Italian chauvinism has been a centuries - old sentiment planted in the Italians, from the days of the first Caesar and before, have been nothing without a dictator. It only into their consciousness, price of peace, national safety and lower. Thus the Mussolini is a distinctly Italian phenomenon the conditions which made his triumph possible were distinctly Italian also. Other nations might produce the great statesmen, great idealists, great industrialists, great soldiers, great artists.

Italy has contributed her share of these to be sure, but Italy alone could produce a Mussolini.

In the troubled days immediately following the war, there were, as noted before, revolutionary manifestations of an abortive nature; audible rumblings of communism, and outbreaks of industrial unrest, which clearly indicated an upheaval in cons.

Fascism Discussed

The fracas already was a symbol of nationalistic pride. Little groups marched frequently through the streets, giving loud voice to the long-standing grievances of Italy. It is a tribute to Mussolini's early appeals to chauvinism that along with the rabble, there were to be found shelter there were demands for the return of Nizzasia and Fiume. Young men in Milan, Rome and Turin—most of them had traveled nowhere but to the front and back—felt themselves responsible for the plight of the unpatriated Italians in the north. With no personal interests at stake save that of national pride, they lined themselves by voice and action with the northern irredentists. Soon they were deep in the soil of a united nation, had begun to bloom.

With whatever choice of flowers of nationalism burgeoned in these troubled days there were rank weeds also. Strikes were perpetual. For no observable reason, a new factory and field would be brought to a standstill. Soldiers were installed, spat at, attacked. Officers still bearing proudly the wounds and stripes of service in the Alps and the Piave, were wounded by howling mobs. Medals were torn from under foot. Cafes became the scenes of rowdyism. Italy fought hand to hand with Italian.

Class Struggle Fierce

Mussolini's biographers — make much of these hectic days of 1919. The government, they declare, was powerless and such indeed seems to have been the case. Desperate efforts were made to conciliate the Socialists and avert an end to the internisable strife, but all met with failure. Amnesty was extended to all deserters; amnesty was followed by the ministry to wage mutiny in the streets to escape attack. Still the aimless, vicious battle of class continued.

On April 12, 1919, Gabriele d' Annunzio, poet, dreamer, idealist, master artisan of the literal phrase, of the war, abandoned plans for an Europpean flight from Rome to Tokio. It was planned as an encouragement to Italian morale at the last most important measures were needed to stave off civil war. He assembled a small band of followers at Ronchi near Gorizia crossed the Frontier and occupied Fiume.

Lighted The Spark

D'Annunzio's dramatic action was all that was needed to light the sparks of patriotism that leaped across the Adriatic and spread throughout the length of Italy. Mussolini's Popolo d'Italia was quick to grasp the significance. The newspaper supported the venture in glowing terms, bitterly attacked the government for its opposition.

On Oct. 8, at a Fascist meeting in Florence, Mussolini triumphantly announced that he had just returned from Fiume, from the side of d'Annunzio, and pleaded for indulgence as he had deprived him of time to prepare his speech. But in this address he nevertheless laid the groundwork of the power he exists today. He described it to his excited audience as a scheme for syndicates of agrarian and industrial workers. He said his aim was socialistic and collectivistic, but its methods aristocratic and based entirely on the community of national interests.

He's an iron man, but his laugh is human

"I do not tell you, O people, that you are as Gods," he said. "As I love you truly, so—I would say to you: that you are dirty, you must arise and cleanse yourselves; you are ignorant, therefore set yourselves to gain instruction. Strong hands are not enough to prove a man capable of guiding a state.

You can make a revolution in 24 hours; but you cannot in that time create a new social order for a nation which is part of a word order. You must not, however, mistake us for a kind of hotpurse of the bourgeoisie, which, in so far as it consists of prostitutes, is utterly vile and contemptible. These people should defend themselves, we will not defend them.

"We shall defend the nation, the people as a whole. We shall work for the moral and material welfare of the people. And I believe that with our policy we shall be able to make the masses one with the nation."

When d'Annunzio left Ronchi for Fiume, he had written a farewell letter to Mussolini, with the salutation "Dear Communist." He closed with the words: "Sustain the cause without stint during the conflict."

Orsiery Swayed Masses

This Mussolini did, making speeches throughout Italy, appearing on the rostrum before curious crowds which included a sprinkling of blackshirts. Many came to deride but remained transfixed by the fervor. Loud applause greeted his declarations; the man seemed to have a hypnotic grip on the populace.

But his cheers did not truthfully portend the elections. Few voted for Mussolini, although some of his party supporters were found in the clubs intellectuals who, although previously apart from politics, felt compelled to aid the struggling party.

When the votes were conted, the overwhelming victory of the Socialists sat in motion a reaction against Fascism. Blackshirt newspapers and headquarters were raids and searched. Scores of arrests were made. Complicity in the affairs of Fiume was branded "anti-plotting against the security of the state." The Popolo, in a glaring headline, greeted its readers: "Benito Mussolini guilty of having defended Italy after d'Aporetto has been thrown into prison."

D'Annunzio Surrenders

But the next day he was released. He looked over the shattered remnants of his organization. His central committee had been broken up by force of arms. Many of his staunchest supporters were in jail. D'Annunzio was still in Fiume, but the rising, although temporary, strength of the government brought his election nearer order.

It occurred on Christmas Day, 1920. Italian soldiers were hurled against the city. Scores were killed, many wounded, including d'Annunzio himself. He surrendered his authority to a committee of citizens, and left, Fiume, defeated but not disheartened.

It was then, as Mussolini writes in his own autobiography, that "the iron necessity of violence already had been confirmed".

Fascists' Gain Power

"Every one of us felt it." he declares, "How can the nascent Italy move to action with a clear sense of the definite issue. The formations of squads and bathing suits which I have drawn up by intuition had been accomplished. I had given them, in precise directions, well-specified tasks within clean limits, and with a clear work of discipline and retaliation.

Two months later, on May 15, 1921, political elections throughout Italy resulted in victories for Fascism. The national indignation over Fiume, carefully cultivated by Mussolini and Popolo and by his aides in pre-election speeches, bore fruit. Fascists were elected for Milan, Bologna and Ferrara. Thirty Blackshirts in all were returned to parliament. Mussolini's avengement of Fiume had begun.

"The march to Rome, must be Fascism's great act in modern history, is the subject of the next article, to be published.

LIFE STORY of WILL ROGERS

By Scott Cunningham

SIXTH INSTALLMENT

Buenos Aires by Way of London

In May, 1902, Will wrote his friends he was giving a dance. One of the letters, still preserved, reads: "I am going to have a dance at my place Tuesday night, June 5th. Now be sure and come. We'll have good music and I think a good crowd."

A dance platform was put up at the ranch-house, and a high-class string band brought up from Muskogee.

Will's father was dubious of this way of running a ranch, but said nothing. Clem Rogers had brought to go to look after his land in Claremore.

After accompanying a shipment of cattle to Kansas City in May, 1901, Will returned by way of Memphis, and startled the home folks by admitting that he (now 21) was behind arrangements for a gigantic roping contest to be given at Memphis that month. He would require forty cowboys for this.

The Memphis invasion was not financially profitable. Will talked about going to Mexico, and took a trip to San Francisco. There he fell into the clutches of another boy from the country, and was rooming with him. Will returned to the Indian Territory looking like a ghost, and taking in a husky squaw.

Upon his return Miss Betty Blake, Will had continued to be Miss Kate "Katie" Kane had another suitor, a doctor, whom her parents favored, and when Will returned home too late one night she was told she could never see the young cowboy again. But this must be the end of his romance, Will decided,he might as well go to Mexico.

"But why Mexico?" asked Dick Field, a cowboy friend, when he got now. "Why not South America?"

The matter was settled at once when Clem Rogers came storming into Ed Sunday's store in Oologah and demanded: "Are you going to that darn fool boy of mine Will? He has gone and lost two thousand dollars for me."

Will, in operating the ranch for his father, had begun to more intent upon pleasure than business. Hired by New York, he had shipped a train load of cattle there, at great expense, intending to get rich on the local market. Will sold the cattle on the ranch that was considered his own, and taking Dick Pare with him, went to New Orleans to seek passage for South America.

"That year's boat to South America had left a few days before," Will told later, "so we went to New York and could not get one from there. We did—by way of London."

London with its "cabbies," Rx Thames, and its Tower, thrilled them. "But it's not got a 'look in' with New York for speed," Will wrote home. "No electric cars and no street cars in the main squares of town."

With a Hereher engine to a string of covered wagons and you have an English train. Not fast, but comfortable and as handsome. "If you call that prosperity, excuse me!"

They saw King Edward at a distance, "I don't think he recognized us," Will told his friend.

The steamer "Danube" on which they left Southampton, deposited them at Buenos Aires May 8, 1902.

"Gosse," Will wrote home, "I was all built in the Spanish style, with an open court, clear to the roof. The street cars, trains, and almost everything is on the United States plan."

He had a long visit at Buenos Aires with Mr. Newbrey, the American consul, and told him, "I did intend to buy a ranch down here, till I used up about all my little paying dividends to these steamship companies."

Will traveled by rail far into the interior of the Argentine—eight hundred miles—and met Dick, his companion, quit him to return home. Will paid his friend's way, though it left him about penniless.

Will wrote Solms: "I am trying to learn Spanish, and can say six words. Did know seven but forgot one."

This was his cheerfulness at an hour when he was on the point of going broke thousands of miles from home.

Now that the Boer war was over mines were being re-stocked. Will got a job on a cattle boat headed for South Africa, and aboard the fleet of the Argentine from his feet on August 8.

On his trip from New Orleans to New York by boat, on the voyage from New York to Southampton, and from Southampton to Buenos Aires, Will had suffered terribly from seasickness. Now he suffered worse than ever.

A cattle boat is a smelly thing. The days dragged. How long though, Will, is this perfumed luxury liner going to take?

Cape Town finally was reached, and then Durban, in Natal. Will thought the Kaffirs in the Durban streets were "as crazy as snakes," but he wasn't there to watch them long. He helped in the drive of the stock from the boat. At Moor Spruit Station, he was through the drive ended, and Will tended the cattle while the boss went of the job and quit. He then went over into the Orange Free State.

There the formation of the Boer war was still to be seen. He had his saddle, bridle, and clothes belongings stolen from him on one of the trains. At Ladysmith, on his way back to Durban to get a "travel permit" which he had neglected to obtain before, he passed scenes of battle—"Where a mob of Englishman had died fighting." Will wrote, and "a Boer horse was killed, may be."

Back in Durban he got another job, but he didn't have to go to work at once. In his hotel-room he wrote a song which he gave the title "Old Place I Can Hang My Hat is Home, Sweet Home, to Me." His copy read:

I've traveled round this world a bit,
I've been from coast to coast,
Had every kind of food to eat,
From tough to quail on toast.
There's not a land discovered yet
But's good enough for me.
So when I'm asked where I'm from,
I answer, on the I. T.

Chorus.

I ain't got no regular place
That I can call my home,
I can't go back to America,
She's far across the foam,
Waiting there's nothing doing,
Passages ain't free,
So any place I can hang my panama
Is home, sweet home to me.

There's not a song I haven't sung
From the I. T. to the Zulu
'Twas me that left my happy home
For Port Said, Egypt,
But I ain't a-going to weep no more,
So good-by, Dolly Gray,
Just tell them that you saw me
And you heard me sadly say,
Oh—

Saved up and still with him he had kept the programs of every theatre he had been in from New York and London down to a magic lantern show in Zululand. So a few weeks later, he could read the signs advertising a "Wild West Show" in Johannesburg, South Africa. His heart gave a leap. Could he, Will wondered, get a job with that show?

He set out for the show grounds and found the manager.

(TOMORROW: "The Cherokee Kid").

MEDITERRANEAN SQUADRON SAILS

Ships Will Take Up Posts About Suez Canal

Valetta, Malta, Aug. 30.—(AP)—The British Mediterranean fleet, led by Commander-in-Chief Admiral Sir W. W. Fisher aboard the Flagship Resolute sailed Thursday on what is officially labelled the "second summer cruise" taking the ships to strategic locations in a semi-circle around the Suez Canal.

The Resolute headed for Port Said, Egypt, where it is due Monday. Present plans call for the ship to remain there until Sept. 20.

The Battleship revenge is going to Alexandria and then will head for Port Said where she is scheduled to arrive Sept. 21 and remain in Port until Sept. 30. .

"God-Chosen-Man" Roosevelt Called

Winnipeg, Aug. 30.—(CP)—President Roosevelt was described as a "God-Chosen man" delegated by the Almighty to wreck the present economic system and "he is doing a good job," Howard S. Rand of Detroit, Secretary-General of the Anglo-Saxon Federation of America, declared in an address before the annual convention of the British Israel World Federation here.

Bites Wife's Nose As He Likes Her

Toronto, Aug. 30.—(CP) —John Muts liked his wife Tina and wanted her to come back and live with him so he bit her nose, he told the court, when arraigned on a charge of assault.

The woman holding a handkerchief to the still-bleeding wound, said she had been separated from her husband three months.

"Why did you bite her?" asked the Crown. "Because, I like her. She's my wife and I wanted her to come back and live with me," answered Muts.

He was remanded for one day for sentence.

MAN NEVER ABLE TO REACH MOON

LONDON, Aug. 30. — Man will never be able to reach the moon, says Prof. E. V. Appleton, Chairman of the British National Committee for Radio Telegraphy.

Professor Appleton advanced the theory today that, in the upper atmosphere encompassing the earth there is a vast layer of intense heat hitherto unknown to science.

He was quoted in the Daily Mail as asserting that this "electrical inferno", of a temperature of 1,000 degrees centigrade, constitutes an impassable obstacle to the age-old ambition of shooting rockets with a human cargo to the moon.

BELGIAN ROYAL TRAGEDY

The world mourns with Belgium in the tragedy of the death of the young Queen, Astrid, who though a Scandinavian, had in the nine years since she wedded Prince Leopold, endeared herself to the Belgians and especially with the royal family which in the space of eighteen months has had to suffer two tragic accidents, the former being the death of King Albert in a fall while mountain climbing. The royal family and the people had not yet recovered from the bitter loss of the death of King Albert, one of the greatest figures in present day Europe when it is called upon to grieve in the second fatality which occurred when the young King Leopold was driving the car which crashed against a tree killing the Queen and injuring himself.

Queen Astrid was queenly and womanly in everything which mattered, in her family, in her private life, in her household, in her participation in the interests of her people. She was every inch a queen and a woman, and the world esteemed her at that rating. Her youth, her recently interest in the people, her love for her family and for her husband, her manner which so pleased the people because she was queenly and her attractive personality make the sense of her loss more poignant for she had reached the heart of the people of not only Belgium but of her own Sweden and of a large part of the world. She leaves a young family and husband and her throne is empty of one who had graced it with all noble parts. Her fatwone with the Belgians grew and her love of her Swedish people did not dwindle. The Belgian people so loved her that they copied her characteristic hand wave with the knuckles outward.

Her fine character was manifest in every deed, but perhaps in nothing more than in her romantic courtship with Prince Leopold. He courted in the guise of a servant, so as not to attract too great attention and she said that she had refused proposals of marriage three times in three weeks, she confessed she loved him but she dreaded being a queen. The match was a love match and the wedded life an exemplary one of which any family might be proud.

The girl who dreaded the responsibility of becoming a queen died a queen after the tragic death of her father-in-law and proved a true queen and woman.

Truly the world joins in sorrow for the brilliant young Queen Astrid.

TRAINING DOMESTICS

It is said that the Ontario Government may establish a training school for domestics, the present situation indicating that it is almost impossible to obtain help while in larger cities are many girls obtaining relief.

That there should be training for this class of service is claimed by many but they have to employ assistance of this type in the home. Many householders complain that much of the help they obtain is not competent. For this office qualifications are as necessary as for any other.

This brings up a strange situation. Woman is supposed to reign in the home and yet there are those girls who have not been trained by their mothers or others in household management.

Whether a training school would affect the situation of girls who enter service of this class only for a brief time under stress of circumstances and have no notion of making it a profession with them is a question. Most of this class of girls who use the opportunity of domestic service to aid them to other callings, are in a way qualified to do the duties which devolve upon a domestic. However there is nothing to show that it is the intention to make it necessary that to obtain domestic rank a girl must have registered at the government school. The school is planned to be a means of improving the fitness of the girls for the important duties of domestic service to help them and their employers.

In this day and age the profession of the domestic help is rightly being given a higher plane in the minds of the people. It is pointed out by the Woodstock Sentinel-Review that in good homes domestic servants are paid adequate wages, have their room and board free and are in a position to save considerable of the money they earn. "The thrifty girl in domestic service is in a much better position than those that are in commercial callings and compelled to spend all they earn to provide themselves with clothing, food, and lodging."

A nation's character is the sum of its splendid deeds; they constitute one common patrimony, the nation's inheritance. They awe foreign powers, they arouse and animate our people.—Henry Clay.

(War) the feast of vultures and the waste of life.—Byron.

Great Warriors like great earthquakes are principally remembered for the mischief they have done.—Bouves.

HOMELINESS

I have never been a castle but its beauty softly went,
Were it by a homely cottage with a chimney
heaven-bent;
I have never dwelt on orchids, but their rareness made me yearn
For the sight of timid violets hidden amongst the depths of fern.
Oh! I never knew a perfume that was even half as sweet
As the smell of wild white clover wafted
thro' the summer's heat;
I have never met a lady wrapped in velvet's gayest hues
Quite as lovely as my darling, in her faded gingham blue.

COSMOPOLITAN AS THE BUND AT SHANGHAI, is Front Street, Belleville, especially in Fair Time, remarked the Globe Trotter. In one block was encountered two flashily dressed gypsy women, several Indians of the Mohawk tribe of the Six Nations Confederacy, two Chinamen, one Japanese, two negroes, Four Greeks, one Italian, two Swedes, several scattering nationalities, besides the usual moving crowd of English, Irish, Scotch and Canadian. Street of All Nations, let us call it.

IRVIN COBB TELLS IN HIS BOOK, "Sickfuls", that the first thing he had to learn when he achieved the Big Time was that facts were non-essential than fine writing. The copy readers eliminated most of his adjectives and toned down his "fine" writing to the level of the average reader.

REFERRING AGAIN TO IRVIN COBB, top-notch journalist and author of several books, including "Judge Priest", played so well by Will Rogers on the screen, Irvin says that he knows he's not much of an author, because many critics have told him so in printed words, but anyone who says he is not a good reporter is a d—d liar and he can prove it. He says he is proud of being a good reporter, and knows that all the stuff about drunken reporters is the bunk—no good reportorial work was ever inspired by booze, says Cobb—and Irv knows the game for he was the highest paid man in the biggest of metropolitan dailies. All of which goes to prove that the old order passeth, if it ever existed save in the minds of fiction writers.

A steward stood at the gangway of a big liner, and as he stood there he kept shouting for the benefit of the arriving passengers:

"Second class to the right! Second class to the left."

A young woman stepped daintily aboard with a baby in her arms. As she hesitated before the steward he bent over her and said, in his chivalrous way:

"First or second?"

"Oh!" said the girl, her face as red as a rose. "Oh, dear, neither—I'm only the nurse."

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 30th, 1915.

Under the auspices of the knitting circle in connection with the R. T. of T. a successful and most enjoyable lawn social was held last evening at the residence of Mr. Anderson, Hillside street. The grounds were beautifully illuminated and the 15th Regimental Band was present and furnished excellent music.

Mr. Wesley Bullen has left for Mount Clemens Springs, Mich where he will spend some time.

Mr. and Mrs. William Davis of Montreal formerly of Belleville, are visiting relatives here.

Mrs. George Wilson and son Roy of Calder, Alberta, left for their home today after a month's visit with relatives in the city.

The Rev. E. N. Baker, D. D., has returned to the city from his summer cottage in Muskoka.

30 Years Ago

AUGUST 30th, 1905.

Mrs. F. W. Strong and young son, George, of Mexico City, are visiting Mrs. Strong's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Denmark, Alexander street.

Miss L. M. Emerson, bookkeeper in the Intelligencer office has returned after a three weeks' vacation.

Last night five wandering cows found their way into the garden of Mr. L. Stinson, Moira street, just west of Yeoman's street, and made it look like a desert, eating everything in their path. The cows will have to pay for the damage.

Dr. Ali. Coleman of Tacoma, Wash., who has been visiting his mother here and greatly enjoying the beauties of the bay and district for the past month, has left for his home.

Mr. Harry James, an old Belleville boy, now on the staff of the Evening Mail, New York, who has been home on a visit after an absence of twenty years, has left for his home.

40 Years Ago

August 30, 1895

Beechnuts, butternuts, hickory nuts and hazel nuts are very plentiful in the locality this year.

The work of erecting the trunk line for the Bell Telephone Company between Toronto and Montreal is progressing rapidly. It is within a few miles of completion between Toronto and Belleville and is finished between Kingston and Mallorytown.

This is the last of the Friday half holidays for 1895. The experiment has been an unqualified success and in future years it will, no doubt, be repeated.

Miss Gordon, superintendent of the hospital, desires to acknowledge the receipt of, $15.00 from Belleville Lodge No. 1, I.O.O.F. towards the city ambulance.

Mr. James Lowrie has returned from his annual outing at Little Metis, Quebec.

A large Newfoundland dog named Rover, belonging to Ald. W. Jefferson Diamond, was poisoned in Mr. Diamond's yard at the corner of Charles and Queen Streets, yesterday morning. Although a strong and powerful animal he was perfectly harmless and was the delight of the children. Mr. Diamond valued the dog highly. The act is too contemptible to comment upon.

Prof. E. T. Greene of the D. and D. J. has returned after his summer vacation.

The steamer Quinte took a large party of excursionists from the city to Napanee this afternoon.

A "Bargain" is Sometimes a Bargain

A GOOD MANY PEOPLE look on August as their lucky month—and we don't mean those who spend it lying on the sand and taking in salt air.

We mean those people who have formed the habit of buying things when other people aren't. . . porch rugs and luggage and towels and lamps and all sorts of things, for use now and for use next season.

Of course they have learned that "bargains" are not always bargains. They know how to recognize quality and style and worth, how to find the strong points and how to avoid weaknesses. And much of their knowledge has come from the advertisements in this newspaper.

All of us follow advertising, but some people study it so thoroughly that they know exactly what they want and where to get it. They are the ones who find the real bargains. Their money buys more things and better things—in August and all through the year.

DECORATION OF FRANKFORD CHURCH NEARS COMPLETION

FRANKFORD. — On Wednesday afternoon two Toronto Commercial men while driving up the Main street of the village noticed smoke rolling from the back of the car. Making a hasty examination the back seat cushion was found to be on fire. Water was obtained from a store nearby and the flames extinguished. It is thought that a cigarette thrown out of the front window was carried back into the rear of the car by the strong wind blowing at the time.

On July 1st in St. John's Church, Sterling, Ida Elizabeth Embury and Jack Arnott Rogers were united in marriage by Rev. A. S. McConnell. They were attended by Miss Doris Mayers (now Mrs. E. Airey of Lindsay) and Mr. Keith Hadley. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion. Miss Embury is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Embury of Frankford, and Mr. Rogers is eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Norman Rogers of Peterboro and Frankford and grandson of the late Dr. J. W. Simmons and Richard B. Rogers, C.E., of Peterboro.

Seeking love of a real "He Man"; Will go Where women are scarce; Or, and go over the hills and far Famous Authority on Love and Marriage

Mary comes directly to the point with a frankness that is engaging. She tells me she belongs to the old-fashioned type of girl who likes to keep house and can't imagine herself happy as a spinster.

She also tells me that she is 30 years of age, that she lives in a remote country district with her parents, and that there is not a man within a radius of 200 miles who is not married or altogether impossible. She had about resigned herself to her fate when Aunt Louisa died and left her a fairly comfortable legacy.

Bewitched by magnificent posters showing the glamorous life on ship-board, Mary thought first of taking a trip to Europe. But a wise cousin who has traveled much told Mary the eligible men were hard-er to find in Europe than they are in the United States, and that the laws of foreign countries would probably give any man she married possession of the legacy. This has changed Mary's point of view.

She writes me now that she would prefer to marry one of her own countrymen, and that she doesn't care if he does not hold down a kid-glove or white-collar job.

She thinks it would be thrilling in the extreme to marry a prospecor, and go over the hills and far away with him looking for gold. She loves camping, and would enjoy preparing out-of-door meals.

And she wouldn't mind marrying a cow-puncher, if any of the real, sure-enough type are left. Not even a dressed up male mannikin around a dude ranch, but a real man who still rides the range and rounds up cattle, if he had a small interest in a cattle outfit that would be all the better, and she'd be willing to contribute her legacy to help things along.

She feels the same way about a sheep ranch, or one of those great wheat-growing farms where things are done on a big scale. In short, this young lady now prefers the West, the great open spaces, where "men are men".

She tells me that her grandmother, a most estimable lady and a devout member of the church grew weary of the lack of men in her old home in Connecticut and went to teach school in Duluth, Minn., where girls were scarce, and there married a splendid husband.

Failing to find the right man in the West, this young lady would consider an Easterner if he were not mercilessly, loved sports, and would be willing to spend as much time as possible out-of-doors. So there you have all of Mary's requirements.

I admire the spirit of a woman who knows what she wants, who has not lost confidence in her ability to get it merely because she has lived under conditions where the was small chance of meeting her

RAWDON BRIDE-TO-BE FETED BY FRIENDS

Rawdon.—On Wednesday afternoon eight girls journeyed to the home of Mrs. Herb. David and spent a social hour with their eldest daughter, Jean who is a bride-to-be.

The bride's trousseau was on display and at the close of this happy event Miss Edna Thrasher read the following address and Miss Isobel Turner, presented Jean with a silver water pitcher.

"Mount Pleasant,
"August 28th, 1935.

"Dear Jean,—Hearing of your approaching marriage, a number of us folk of the community, felt we could not let this opportunity pass, without in some way remembering you.

Although you have not been in our midst very much, we feel that through the rest of the family living here, you are one with us. We ask you, to accept this silver pitcher with our kind regards, and may it ever keep fresh in your memory, the afternoon we spent with your fellows to your marriage.

"In the new home, you are about to establish may God's richest blessings, attend you, through, health, wealth and prosperity."

Jean very suitably replied thanking her friends for their remembrance and later Mrs. David and daughters served a delicious lunch. Those who attended this function were Misses Edna Thrasher, Vera McAdam, Betty Hoard, Isobel Turner, Francis McKeown, Eileen Mac-Mullen, Faye Andrews and Mildred Sharp.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Rainie and daughter Betty of Los Angeles, Cal., were recent guests of their cousins, Mr. John Rainie and Miss Bonna Rainie, Wallman's.

Messrs. Carleton and Irvin Potts attended Toronto exhibition on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Gould and Arthur, Rawdon, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gould, Bowmanville, spent a recent week-end at Loon Lake.

Master Gerald Bristol is holidaying at Mr. George McMasters.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gunner recently entertained Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Evanson and daughter Ruby.

The Misses Mildred and Annie Elliott and a party of friends spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Carlisle at Northport.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Allan and family of Kennor, New York, are holidaying with relatives at Wellman's.

Messrs. Angus and Merle Todd, Head Island, have returned to their home at Wellman's.

STEVENS' CLUB IS ORGANIZED

Richard Sandercock, Havelock, President For Riding

Marmora.—Supporters of the Hon. H. H. Stevens in the riding of Hastings-Peterborough, about two hundred and fifty strong gathered at the Town Hall, Marmora, on Thursday afternoon to hear the platform of the Reconstruction Party outlined. A Club was formed and officers elected.

Richard Sanderson of Havelock, occupied the chair, as opening speeches were given by J. A. Bersmith, ex-M.P., Judson Gunter (strongly favoured as candidate), W. Payne, D. M. Oxley from Organization Headquarters, Toronto, and O. H. Dawner, organizer for West Peterboro. The Club was then formed, comprising the following officers:

President—Richard Sanderson, Havelock.

Vice-President—J. W. Bronson, Mayo Township.

Secretary—Wilfred Smith, Madoc.

Treasurer—John W. Bonier, Marmora.

Executive—J. A. Bexsmith, Havelock; W. Payne, Dummer; B. Longmuir, Havelock.

Following their election the new officers each spoke briefly, pledging their loyalty and C. H. Young, Peterborough, outlined some necessary procedure.

Reeve Hosmer of Rawdon Township was appointed organizer for the riding, with W. Davis, Marmoth, as his assistant. Mr. Hoover stressed the necessity of having an open convention, rather than the common delegate system by ballot. His reason being the possibility of existing C.C.F. followers, wishing to lend their support to the Reconstruction Party in this riding. At the close of the meeting Col. C. H. Ackerman, candidate for West Peterborough, addressed the meeting enlarging on the necessary pro-

Marmora Gold Syndicate

Some work is being done at what was formerly known as the Richardson Mine, about four miles east of Marmora. The mine, one of the first spots where gold was found in Ontario, is being developed by Col. C. H. Ackerman of Peterboro. In 1871 some samples of ore were taken from the property which assayed an average of $121.00 per ton and again about two years ago extensive drilling was carried on which uncovered samples bearing up to $17.00 a ton. A number of local citizens are employed at the property at present and every hope is held out that the venture will be a success.

HOW TO MAKE ICED TEA
Infuse six heaping teaspoons of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh boiling water. After the infusion has stood for three minutes, strain into a pitcher containing 1½ pints of granulated sugar and the juice of 2 lemons. Stir well until sugar is dissolved; fill pitcher with cold water. Do not allow tea to cool before adding the cold water; otherwise iced tea becomes cloudy. Serve with sliced lemon and ice.

Cathcart Gratian Takes Race in Three Straight Heats

TIME IS GOOD

Junior Farmers Parade Winning Calves Before The Grand Stand

One of the most popular victories registered so far in the race programs was that of Cathcart Gratian, owned by the Quinte Stables of this city on Thursday afternoon, when the chestnut mare easily won the $15 class at the fair with The Admiral and Richard Hall following in her wake. The race was considered one of the best and the mare withstood many drives in the three heats in which she had to go before she made few mistakes.

Cathcart Gratian is one of the smoothest going pacers to be seen anywhere and yesterday she was at her best. The mare has also been given a real "prop" all summer and right now is at the top of her form, she won a race in Kingston on Tuesday sleeping one in the 2:26, which after her a new race record and on Thursday morning was shipped to Belleville by truck. The long jaunt did not seem to bother her as she was right in the three heats she ran.

Jennie Wren Wins

Odd Lill always manages to have a good race around the inside and Jennie Wren accounted for the 2:30 class in straight heats without any. Fields behind Peter B. was always dangerous, but in spite of the fact that the fields were small, which in a way accounted for the lack of excitement. The footing was none too good the hurt beating the mud under the hoofs of the feet due to the lack of rain on the racing strip. The time was, however, good, as Catherine Gratian in going the first trip of her race in 2:17 1-4 went the best mile she ever paced over the Belleville track.

Between heats of the races, the heavy draught horses were lodged in the ring and also the agriculture class in harness and many interested spectators were on hand. Some fine hitches were seen. The entire program of acts was given in front of the grandstand while at the close of the afternoon's performance lines of horses were paraded for the winning stock and the crowd were strongly pleased with the effort the fair board is exerting to foster junior farming. The results:

DAY BY DAY

The way things are shaping up for the local Stewart-Warners it behooves us to look as though Jack Williams and Rod Wilkins will have to shoulder the entire pitching duties in the C.O.B.T. semi-finals. Art Calhoun returned to the city after completing a home for ten days, but his infected finger, from which he had the nail removed, was still bandaged. Art was of the opinion, that he would be able to remove the cumbersome bandage and start pitching this week, when he was examined by the doctor this morning, and today we find Calhoun confined to his home under the care of a physician. The management of the Radios therefore are not counting too much upon the services of Calhoun for the semi-finals at least. If the Radios beat the Rod and Gun, he may be available for the league finals, they hope.

Tomorrow night James Stevenson's Furs in Northern the Radios and the Furs pay off the C.O.B.I. playoff tilt with the return game being slated for the local diamond next Wednesday. In all probability Rod Kitchen will get the pitching assignment for the humanists, although Bill Cuthbert always stands it tough going for the Millmen, but then Cuthbert would rather start in Belleville, as it looks like Kitchen and Starr as the Petroboro hurler with Williams and Cuthbert being answered by Umpire Woolley at the Bridge Belleville ballpark. Those looking over the league averages yesterday we pleased to see that Art

Old Country Newspapers Demand Accuracy a Chief Essential

J. H. C. Wallace Here With Maple Leaf Tour Party Voices Some of His Views—Reading a Rite in England, He States—Sensationalism Is Frowned Upon.

Canadian journalism to a certain extent is fast becoming American-ized, and some newspaper-reporting in this country is well on its way to being sacrificed on the altar of sensationalism, in the opinion of Mr. J. H. C. Wallace one of the leading members of the British Maple Leaf Tour Party who visited this city briefly in their tour of Ontario and Quebec provinces.

Mr. Wallace, editor of "Grocery and Provision Merchant" of Drury House, London, England, and whose experience in journalistic work has covered a wide field, is gaining first hand knowledge of newspaper publishing in this country, as well as other matters, during his overseas trip. He is conducting a story of the Maple Leaf Tour which will be printed in booklet form and distributed throughout the British Isles. Belleville, it was pointed out by him will have prominent mention in the manuscript.

Exactness Is All

"Undoubtedly your news-getting methods and coverage are faster and perhaps to a certain extent more thorough than the conservative methods of Old Country papers, but we do not bow down, nor are we held to the rigid requirements of the modern "dead line" as some have talked or in papers on your continent. What we do not get to-day we will get tomorrow. But what we do get must be exact. If an address is reported verbatim, it should be that—it must be reported as the speaker has said it, and not the sub reporter who may have his own ideas as to what should be said, or said, in preference to what was actually said," declared Mr. Wallace.

The English Way

In the Old Country, it was pointed out, the reporter is not allowed to pluck out of some high school class room and place in charge of his apprenticeship to the profession of straight journalism and reporting. In a literary sense, he knows, he must have more than a working knowledge of English, and before certain undersized tests in speed before he is accepted. His appearance, his diligence and tact and above all his sharpness, must be passed on by his superior who considers before he is entitled to take his beat or route and be given a free hand at work. The tenets of his profession, one of the oldest in the country, must be kept sacred and followed rigidly enforced. His ethics must be above reproach. And he must never mist he cover any speck or cobwebs through the simple method of taking notice.

Less Condemnation

"Of course," continued Mr. Wallace, "we in England, are not so keen on what you call sensationalism of your copy. If the address is worth reprinting, it is worth covering in full. If it is of no particular moment, the story is merely written up in very few lines. There is no attempt as a rule to condense it to the point where neither the reader nor the one reported knows just what is meant by the story that appears".

"Leading men and women of England, particularly, however, are not keen on the matter of having their names appear in print every time they go out some place. Here in Canada I have noticed the letters you are known the fairer game are you for the reporters and the newspapers. Each reporter may have a different idea of what to write about you, and naturally not all of them can strike the right note.

Caution Developed

"But in England when the well known person is reported the reports must be right. If it is an interview, it must be confined absolutely to what was asked or said or done. If it is wrong, then there is the very devil to pay. Naturally this tends toward caution both on the part of the reporter and the paper. This postage is the reason for much of the conservatism that we are told is so marked in our work. Of course not all our papers or news journals can be listed in this class. We, like you, have certain "periodicals".

War Talk Exaggeration

Recent war talk in which papers are indulging is just that—talk, in the opinion of Mr. Wallace, in this country and in the United Kingdom. The sensational free there are very much overplayed, overemphasized. In some cases they appear to be publicity mirrored for the "selling headlines" which accompany the article. Ordinarily routine order which might be issued at any time to any of the department corps or units overseas, can be translated by the sensation-seeking reporter to mean that the whole country is on the verge of war, that it was feverishly mobilizing, and that the last invitation to join the colors are desk man tack on blazing headlines. Then the 75 point type and the paper is on the streets. Eager people are buying them and war clouds mounds. If that paper could were issued when everything was quiet, then it wouldn't get a paragraph mention.

Reading a British Rite

There is a difference in the reading public of England and the United States, however, Mr. Wallace admitted. "In the British Isles, newspaper reading is a rite that is performed with all the seriousness of centuries of habit. In modern club rooms, in quiet houses and in smoky taverns, the daily paper is accepted without question as the medium of the truest, most uncolored and accurate happenings of the day. Canadians and residents of the United States have the speed bug. The daily paper is grasped feverishly, the news headlines are scanned, few stories are read and it is tossed into the ash can. To be sold —must never verge on the side of sensationalism.

Britain's far-flung imperial forces have moved to defend, if necessary, the Suez canal, the island of Malta and Gibraltar, key points to the Mediterranean, threatened by the ever increasingly critical Italo-Ethiopian situation. Gibraltar, at the narrow western end of the Mediterranean; the island of Malta, fortified base of operations squarely on the east-west navigation line, and the Suez canal, gateway to the east, give British control of this navigation route. The importance of this control is indicated by the fact that Britain has intimated that even possible international complications will not prevent her from making aircraft carrier H.M.S. Glorious, and submarine and aerial forces have been concentrated near the mouth of the Suez. Steps have been taken to further fortify Malta and Gibraltar from aerial attack.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

The mass rising we had so long prepared was now in blood, and higher, as each success armed more rebels. In two days' time we might have sixty thousand armed men in movement.

We snapped up further trifles on the Damascus road; and then saw heavy smoke above the hill which hid Deraa. A man cantered in from inferm Tafas that the Germans had set our fine aeroplanes and store-house, and stood ready evacuate the town. British planes dropped word that Barrow's troops were near Remtha, and that two Turkish columns, one of eight hours and, one of two thousand, were retiring towards us from Deraa and Mesereb respectively.

It seemed to me that these six thousand, with the half of the remained of the Fourth Army, from Deraa, and of the Seventh Army which had been disputing Barrow's advance, with their destruction would end our purpose here. Then till we knew, we must retain Sheikh Saad. So the larger column, the four thousand, we would let pass, only fastening on Khalil Pasha and his Rualla, with some northern peasantry, to harry their flanks and rear.

The nearer two thousand seemed more of our size. We would meet them with half our regulars, and two of Pisani's guns, and, if fate smiled, for their indicated route would bring them through Tafas, his own village. He determined us to make speed there and seize the ridge south of it. Unfortunately speed was only a relative term with men so tired. I rode with my troop to Tafas, hoping to occupy a shadow position beyond it and fight a retiring action till the rest came up. Half-way on the road, there met us mounted Arabs, herding a crowd of stripped prisoners towards Sheikh Saad. They were driving them mercilessly, the brutes of their urging blue across the bare backs; but I left them to it, for there were Turks on the police battalion of Deraa, beneath their iniquities the peasant faces of the neighbourhood had run with tears and blood, innumerable times.

The Arabs told us that the Turkish column—Jemal Pasha's third regiment—was already entering Tafas. When, we got within sight, we found they had taken the village from them which sounded an occasional shot and were talking about it. Small pyres of smoke were going up from between the houses. On the rising ground to this side, knee deep in the thistles, stood a remnant of old men, women and children, telling terrible stories of what had happened when the Turks rushed in an our before.

We lay on watch and saw the enemy force march away from their assembly ground behind the houses. They headed in good order towards Mikaiin, the lancers in front and rear, composite formations of infantry disposed to meet him with machine-gun support as flank guards, guns and a mass of transport in the centre. We opened fire on the head of their line when it showed itself beyond the houses. They turned two field guns upon us, for reply. The range was as usual over-fused, and passed safely above our heads.

Nuri came with Pisani. Before their rank rode Auda abu Tayi, expectant, and Tallal, nearly frantic with the tales his people poured out of the sufferings of the village. The last Turks were now quitting it. We slipped down behind them to end Tafas. Suddenly, while our infantry took position and fired strongly with the Hotchkiss; Pisani and Nuri, with half battery among them; so that the French high-explosive threw the rear-guard into confusion.

The village lay stilly under its slow wreaths of white smoke, as we rode near, on our guard. Some grey beings seemed to hide in the misty grass, embracing the ground in the close way of corpses. We looked away from these, knowing they were dead; but from one a little figure tottered off, an 11-or 12-year us. It was a child, three or four years old, whose dirty smock was stained red over shoulder and one side, with blood from a large half-fleeing wound, perhaps a lance thrust, just where neck and body joined.

The child ran a few steps, then stood and cried to us in a tone of astonishing strength (all else be ing very silent), "Don't hit me, Baba." And all Ads, choking out something—this was his village—and she might be of his family—flung himself off his camel, and stumbled, kneeling in the grass beside the child. His suddenness frightened her, for she threw up her arms and tried to scream; but, instead, gurgled a little blood, and while the blood rushed out again over her clothes; then, I think, she died.

We rode past the bodies of men and women and four more dead babies, looking very still and soiled in the daylight, towards the village, whose loneliness by now knew meant death and horror. By the outskirts were and walls, sheepfolds, and on one something red and white, a woman's body and the body of a woman folded across it, bottom upwards, nailed there by a saw through which her calf ran hideously into the air from between the naked legs. About her lay others, perhaps twenty in all, varyloued, killed.

The Zaagi burst into wild peals of laughter, the more desolate for the echoes and clear air of this upland afternoon. I said, "I'm glad to bring me the most Turkish dead," and we turned after the fading enemy, on our way shooting down those who had fallen on out by the roadside and came limping our pity. One moaned Turk, half naked, not able to stand, sat and wept to us. Auda turned away his camel's head, but the Zaagi, with cruelty, crossed his track and whipped three bullets from his automatic through the man's bare chest. The blood came out with his heart beats, throb, throb, throb, slower and slower.

Tallal had seen what we had seen. He gave one moan like a wild animal; then rode to the upper ground and sat there a while on his mare, shivering and looking fixedly after the Turks. I moved near to speak to him, but Auda caught my rein and stayed me. Very slowly Tallal drew his headcloth about his face; and then he seemed suddenly to take hold of himself, for he clutched his stirrups with the mare's flanks and galloped headlong, bending low and swaying in the saddle, right at the main body of the enemy.

It was a long ride down a gentle slope and across a hollow. We saw there like stone while he rushed forward, the drumming of his hoofs unnaturally loud in our ears for we had stopped shooting, and the Turks had stopped. The armies waited for him; and he rocked on in the hushed evening till only a few lengths from the enemy. Then he sat up in the saddle and cried his war cry, "Tallal, Tallal," twice in a tremendous shout. Instantly their rifles and machine-guns crashed out, and he and his mare riddled through and through with bullets, fell dead among the lance points.

Auda looked very cold and grim. "God give him mercy; we will take his price." Im lifted his rein and moved slowly after the enemy. We called up the peasants, now drunk with fear and blood, and sent them from this side and that against the retreating column. The old lion of battle waked in Auda's heart, and made him again our natural, irresistable leader. By a skilful turn he drove the Turks into bad ground and split their remainder into three parts.

The third part, the smallest, was mostly made up of German and Austrian machine-gunners grouped round three motor cars and a handful of mounted officers or troopers. They fought magnificently and repulsed us time and again despite our numbers. The Arabs were fighting like devils, the sweat blurring their eyes, dust parching their throats, and the flame of cruelty and revenge which was burning in their bodies so twisted them that their hands could hardly shoot. By my order we took no prisoners, for the only time in our war.

At last we left this stern section behind, and pursued the faster two. They were in panic, and by sunset we had destroyed all but the smallest pieces of them, gaining so and by what they lost. Parties of the dead men ran from us in advance. At first there were five or six to a weapon, then one would win a bayonet, another a sword, a third a pistol. An hour later these had all fallen, and took weight on donkeys. Afterwards every man had his rifle and a cartridge-horse. By nightfall the horses were laden, and the rich plain was scattered over with the dead men and animals. In a madness born of the horror of Tafas we killed and killed, even blowing in the heads of the fallen and of the animals; as though their death was a running blood could slake our agony.

However, what with wounds and aches and weariness I could not pass from thinking of Tallal, the splendid leader, the fine horseman, the courteous and strong companion of the road and after a while I had my other camel brought and was given a new pleading with the enemy. Each village, as the fight rolled to it, took up the work; and the black, icy wind was wild with rifle-fire, shootings, volleys from the Turks, and the rush of cheering as small parties of either side crashed frantically together.

The enemy had tried to halt and camp at sunset, but Khalil had shaken them again into movement. Some marched, some stayed. Many dropped asleep in their tracks with fatigue. They had lost order and discipline and were drifting through the blast in torn packets, unable to shoot and run at every contact with us or with each other; and the Arabs were as scattered, and nearly as uncertain.

Exceptions were the German detachments: and here, for the first time, I grew proud of the enemy who had killed my brothers. They were two companies and three lorries without hope and without guides, in conditions mad enough to break the bravest nerves. Yet their sergeants held together in firm rank, sheering through the Arab and Turk and Arab like armoured ships, bullet-hooked and steel. When attacked they halted, took position, fired to order. There was no haste, no crying, no hesitation. They were glorious.

BUREAU IS OPENED TO FIGHT NOISES

Hushed Atmosphere Pervades 20th Floor Offices, Where Complaints Invited

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—In its twenty-sixth-floor suite at 580 Fifth Avenue, where a hushed atmosphere is broken only by the whirr of occasional passing aeroplanes and a whispering secretary, the League for Less Noise prepared yesterday to establish a complaint bureau to handle the growing number of requests for aid in fighting the city's racket.

A staff of volunteer investigators equipped with noise-meters is expected to run down complaints of cases of barking dogs, blaring jazz horns and ruthless motors that attention of the league each week receives. "Don't want to bother the police."

Although the league is a "good-will" proposition, Dr. Harriet A. Lane, spokesman, Mark Hawley, and opposing one another, agreed that increase in public subscriptions, expected as the work progresses, may put the proposition on a self-sustaining basis.

The auto horn and the barking dog seemed to be the chief noise complaints, Mr. Hawley said, with Department of Sanitation trucks a close third. Hotels, garages and factories cause many of the calls. One complainant is a branch post office from a woman resident of a hotel proved he was a plot by the complained to have a permit indicted. The league has to be careful of schemes like that, Mr. Hawley said.

Most city departments and industrial concerns are willing to cooperate in attaining noise, he said, but about 95 per cent of the calls received approached are non-cooperative.

The first victim of the anti-noise campaign was scored by Magistrate Hamlin in Traffic Court yesterday and fined $5 with the alternative of two days in jail. The defendant, John Albright, 41 years old, of 264 Avenue A, admitted that he had made unnecessary noise with his automobile siren at Forty-second Street and Lexington Avenue last Friday.

KITTEN IS FREED AFTER 5 WEEKS

Police, Firemen, A.S.P.C.A. Cut Through Wall in Harrison, No. 1, for Rescue

Harrison, N.J., Aug. 30.—John Bilanti's Maltese kitten, called Pinky for no apparent reason, was released this morning after a five weeks of imprisonment in a narrow space between Bilanti's three-story frame home at 306 Harrison Avenue and the adjacent building.

A glass of water, expertly tossed by an A.S.P.C.A. agent, did the trick after the combined wiles of Bilanti and the Harrison police and fire departments had failed for more than a month to lure Pinky out.

The kitten slipped off the roof one July night, and dropped, despite frenzied clawing at the clapboard side-wall construction, into the dark recesses below. Apparently uninjured it grew to like its sombre surroundings, stalking rapacious rats and crickets while Bilanti faithfully lowered food and milk to it each day and thought up new ways to tempt his pet out.

The nice, he complained, were getting the better of him while Pinky was vacationing. Police and firemen tried various schemes to drop tasoe over Pinky's head, but in the kitten these devices were simply new playthings. Bilanzi lowered a long board, but Pinky refused to walk the plank. Even though a redolent herring was dragged temptingly along it the kitten was unimpressed.

Superintendent Harry Van Aist of the Hudson County A.S.P.C.A. finally sought out the three-story building at 310 Harrison Avenue, owned by the same landlord, and built on a brick foundation, while the house at 310 was chiefly of wood. On Bilanti's promise to pay for the damage," permission was given to cut through the wall. Soon a hole a foot square was opened and, agent Charles Linder took a position on the roof armed with a glass of water. Pinky was coaxed up to the hole, and the water rinsed the contents of the glass.

The water quenched right behind the kitten and the startled animal leaped through the hole into Bilanti's arms. Carpenters this afternoon were estimating the cost of repairs to the wall.

CATTLE, HORSES CHANGE HANDS IN BRISK TRADING

Fair Time Ideal to Bring Seller And Purchaser Together

PLOTS NOT DISTURBED

Flower Beds Not Robbed of Beauty as in Former Years

There was rowdyism in the poultry house at the fair grounds last evening. The feathered folk, perhaps a bit tired of the confining barred coops and the stares of visitors, together with the poking of inquisitive fingers voiced their indignation in a great combined chorus of sundry cackles, caws, bothering, hooting and just plain noises. Pete, the big-chested gander at the far end, whose melodious bat ear splitting calls would shame the most blatant motor car horn, started it. Across the line the big gobbling turkey took up the call, gobbling until his very wattles shook as he mounted the scale in noisy obligation holding the high notes in a sustained tenor. Four Pekin ducks which were awaiting only the slimmest excuse for a further outbreak, waddled on fat legs to the front of the cage and added their chorus to the mounting uproar. Even the pigeons, aroused from a brief nap, entered their note of indignation which by now had swept from tier to tier, gaining in strength as it rolled along. Even Tim, the tiny bantam, fluffed his feathery cape and standing on tip toe, broadcast his shrill defiance to the far corners of Pinkington cock across the way, with which a deadly feud had grown up in the last two days. It was a din such as only the stronger visitor could stand. As if with the single idea in mind, the crowd moved precipitately to the door at about the end. Only the odd person remained behind, oblivious to the ear rattling and rafter shaking uproar. The farm yard chorus continued unabated.

"It happens every so often" nonchalantly explained Chas. Tebworth, in charge of exhibits.

Horses love a parade. Furthermore the love of showmanship, the desire for the plaudits and praise of the crowd is an ingrained characteristic. Like human actors, they seek the spotlight of attention and are happiest when prancing proudly capariconed trappings before the judges' stand or the crowded grandstand. Dress up the homeliest old plug in fancy harness, deck him with ribbons, and immediately, like the old soldier donning uniform again, he becomes transformed. A gent that had been wooden and stiff takes on the spring tread of a show horse, says Mr. Harry Stevenson, exhibitor whose lifetime has been spent with the animal he loves best. "A cow is comparatively dumb. Put her in the judging ring and she doesn't care a hang how many ribbons they tack on her. But a horse, particularly if he is an old stager, or being exhibited regularly as the fall fairs approach, becomes jealous and cranky if he doesn't place up in the ranking.

Watch the race horses on the sidelines and see how keenly they follow some of the 'heats' they're not in, next time you get a chance, says Harry.

Time was in the not too distant past in this city when such an outwardly simple thing as the flower beds at the fair grounds were the cause of despair. But the part of members of the Board each year, at fair time, not unusual was it in years gone past on Children's Day, the opening day, to view the sad wreckage of the beds the previous night. Here and there could generally be seen only a few flowers remaining of the solid beds. But botany lessons must be one of the principal studies of the younger generation these days; either that or the kids are just getting more considerate. Out of the thousands of pretty flowers in the beds around the grounds this year, you could, say members of the Board, almost count on your fingers the number that have been missing so far.

Fair time means a time not only for the farmer and producer to exhibit his stock and produce and admiring hundreds, but also a period when handling reaches one of the highest points of the season. Not all the visitors who make the rounds, particularly of the livestock section, are the merely curious scores of others parade around with good hard cash in their pockets, spending freely when fancy strikes. These are the buyers. And buying and trading in livestock at the fair this year has reached the highest point in years, exhibitors declare. "I sold seven head of cattle yesterday," claimed one man. "Got paid cash, too, right on the line."

Sheep is more or less a mongrel collie with somewhere in his ancestry a trace of bull, but he has his own ideas when it comes to looking after the property he is supposed to guard on the grounds. It was all right for the visitor to enter the sheep paddock he was set to go guard in the absence of his owner on the grounds yesterday, but it was a different matter when the man started to leave after smoking the horse. Sheep barred the exit, with a growling threat. A persuasive hand and an attempted intervention on the part of the man met with a further growl and a head low for shiny teeth. Sheep was still guarding the exit and the visitor was still seated upon the fence a good hour later when his boss returned.

Some day some unknown composer will set himself the task of creating a deathless ode to the unknown market gardener who toils like the ant through the hot summer months in order that mace-dam-bound city folk may feast their eyes upon the annual exhibit at the County Fair. Not in any other building are the exhibits so attractive, so tempting and so eye-rousing as those of the Agricultural Building where gardener and florist and housewife have combined their labours to create a spectacle of sheer beauty. Not in years have the vegetables, the flowers and the finer arts been more colorful than this year, and never before has so much comment upon the splendid showing by Mr. Bamford been noticed. It is at this exhibit that Ripley of "Believe-It-or-Not" fame could get a steady supply of material for his freaks of the vegetable world cartoons.

6 MOUNTAINEERS GO TO COLLEGE

Five Kirtland Girls And Brothers of Alabama Hills Win Honors

The story of a Sand Mountain, Ala., mountaineer family of five girls and one boy, who have determined to make their place in the world and are already on their way toward doing so, was told by Fay Kirtland, a graduate of the University of Alabama, who spent a few weeks on the campus there this Summer.

Besides Miss Kirtland, her two elder sisters, Mattie and Lois, are graduates of the University of Alabama. They brother, George Max, will receive his B.S. degree in education this Summer. During their early days as children of a poor rural family on Sand Mountain, near Granville, Ala., Miss Kirtland was the motivating force in the family. Her ambition to go to college was responsible for the college education of her two older sisters. One gathers after talking to her that it also will be responsible for the education of the two younger sisters, Lillian and Grace. The former recently has finished high school with the record of all A's but two B's for the four years, and is planning to enter college.

All four graduates "worked their way" through college. "I came here without a thing," Miss Kirtland told an interviewer for the University of Virginia. "It was my luck in getting odd jobs that enabled me to finish."

Fay Kirtland is a strong-looking woman about 5 feet and 10 or 11 inches tall. She was dressed in a white linen suit with a red blouse. During most of the interview she confirmed her statements with the frank regard of her wide grey eyes.

Got Master's Degree in Education.

Following her graduation from university, she studied elementary education at Chicago, where she took a Master's degree. She is now working for her Ph. D. degree, and has been serving as head of the department of elemntary education at Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa.

Mattie, the elder sister, majored in mathematics. She took her M. A. degree as a teaching fellow, and this Summer is studying advanced education. She is teaching at Choclaw County High School at Alabama. Lois, the second sister, is taking her Ph. D. degree in social service work in Chicago. At present she is doing important social service work with relief agencies in Georgia. George has obtained a teaching position for this Fall at Cullman. Plans are being made to send Lillian and Grace to college.

Data concerning the civilization of Sand Mountain collected by Dr. R. M. Harper, who is with the State Geological Survey at the University of Alabama, reveal that the case of the Kirtlands is not typical. According to these statistics, "the average Yankee has had 6.83 years of schooling, and his wife 7.04."

Sand Mountain is a Northern rural mountaineer section with a population of about 34,000 scattered over a wide area. Dr. Harper says of it: "Sand Mountain is not a mountain in the ordinary sense, but a plateau about twenty miles wide, with its summit ranging from about 1,200 to 1,500 feet above sea level and 600 feet above the neighboring valleys. It is an extension of the Cumberland Plateau of West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee, which is the home of some of the most primitive white people in the Eastern United States."

From a Family of Farmers

Miss Kirtland's own parents are typical farming people, she said. Her grandparents were of that class which is generally known as "yonny", and were very much interested in education. When asked about the background of typical persons living on Sand Mountain, Fay said, "It makes no difference from who your ancestors are." Her family have always been farmers. They settled flat in Virginia then moved down into the Carolinas, then to Georgia, and finally to Alabama.

Miss Kirtland staunchly defended her people, who have been painted as decadent, in certain works of popular contemporary fiction. "The morals of mountaineers are above

Parents Turn to Dancing Classes To Teach Modern Youth Manners

New York, Aug. 30—Dancing lessons are coming to be used more and more as a means of acquiring a sense of etiquette, in addition to grace and poise, or just the knack of how to dance, is was revealed at the opening of the fifty-seventh annual convention of the American Society of Teachers of Dancing at the Hotel Astor.

Other views expressed by officials of members of the society, which calls itself "the oldest organization of dancing masters in America," were that young folks are growing tired of the fast modern dances and crave for a change of tempo (if not downright three-quarter time), that even the crudest "rags" are becoming a little passe and that the ancient ballet is about to float diaphanously back into theatrical favor.

The notion of the dance studio as a school of etiquette has originated with certain parents who think manners are decaying and want to neutralize this condition through an art in which traditions of elegance and formality still linger, according to the teachers. Incidentally, it helps to neutralize the effects of the depression among the teachers themselves, it was candidly admitted.

Dancing instruction is also essential for those who want to learn how to dance, officers of the society conceded. The teachers, numbering about seventy-five and representing twenty-five States were themselves taught by fellow-members an examination-professorship idea designed to increase each other's repertoire.

Then the class of teachers, almost exclusively women, dressed in shorts, slacks or ballet garments, was drilled in the hitch hike, the hand-jive, the shuffle and other polite mysteries of "tapa" (still popular though on a decline) by Miss Ethel E. Early of New York. Then Miss Early joined the class while a "Chinese tap" was expounded by George W. Lipps of Boston, acting president of the society.

Employment Increase Cheers, Exceeds Average Gain of 14 Years

OTTAWA, Aug. 30.—(CP)—Employment at the beginning of August showed an advance that considerably exceeded the average gain recorded Aug. 1 for the past fourteen years, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports.

On Aug. 1, 9,387 firms reported $43,940 persons at work, an increase of more than 13,000 or 1.6 per cent. compared with 234,633 on July 1. This moderately forward movement in employment has continued since the first of the year with but one exception, the only decline being a seasonal nature on April 1, says the report.

"Actually the gain was greater than the average," she said. "As for personal cleanliness, they are much cleaner than the foreign laboring classes of the cities."

INSECTS' HEAD ARE GRAFTED ON

Scientists Change Specimens And Find Insects Do Not Miss Own

Vienna, Aug. 30—Insects can grow along as well with other queer heads as if they had decapitated bodies as they can with their own, it appears from experiments performed here by Dr. Anna Malaboti of the Biological Research Institute of the Vienna Academy of Sciences.

Dr. Malaboti worked with the "nymphs" or young stages of grasshoppers, as well as with the larvae of other insects. He held their bodies secured in soft wax anesthetized them, cut off their heads and quickly substituted heads of other individuals of the same species. The transplants quickly "took," and presently the insects were as active as ever, apparently quite unaware that each one was made up of pieces of two individuals.

They fed and shed their skins in regular fashion. The female grasshoppers grew up and eventually laid eggs from which quite normal little grasshoppers were hatched.

All the insects had normal reactions and movements of legs and feelers. A few had somewhat abnormal wishs, and others showed a scar zone where head and body joined. But even these apparently were not abnormal in any other respects.

CROWN ATTORNEY DENIES REPORTS

No Evidence Revealed in Kidnap Solving Murder of J. A. Kennedy

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 30.—(CP)—Norman F. Newton, Crown Attorney, last night denied reports that investigation into the Labatt kidnapping had revealed evidence solving the murder of John Allen Kennedy, Carling Brewery accountant in London, in 1931.

Mr. Newton who has directed the activities of police in the Labatt case said he knew nothing of any evidence, that would throw any light on the seven-year-old mystery. It had not been adduced in the investigation of the Labatt case.

Kennedy was investigating records of exports made by Carlings to American rum runners. A Royal Commission was probing Brewery operations at the time. Kennedy had gone to Cuba, but returned to Windsor to work for a liquor warehouse.

He said he would testify at a second inquiry into the operations of rum runners. Shortly afterwards he disappeared in the company of two strangers. A few days later his body was found, shot through the head, near Toledo.

Reports here said the crime was committed on the Detroit-Toledo road, and police had information about the man who stood, gun in hand, at the slaying and of another who stood by and saw Kennedy killed. It was also said a quarrel over the pay-off for the murder ended in another Canadian kidnapping.

Mr. Newton, however, knew nothing of the reports.

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"Deborah," said Howe, "if you know—I say know anything about the death of Bannister Coote which you haven't already told, I'm here to listen to it. It's an advantage to withhold it until you're on oath. You can say it now."

He touched her gently on the shoulder.

"But let me give you a word of warning, the same as I warn anyone I arrest. If you bring in accusation of murder against anyone, giving facts or proof, and that accusation eventually turns out to be untrue and the charge false, then the accused person goes free, and the result is a charge against you of criminal libel, and if it is upheld in the witness-box — perjury. Penalty for that is just about as serious as for manslaughter. I think you ought to know that."

He glanced at McGinness.

"You are a lawyer, sir, if you represent this young woman in any sense, you can tell her I am right."

Mr. McGinness' face looked gray and shrunken; he was perspiring freely.

"You are undoubtedly right!" he said. "—I know nothing about the merits of this case, but it sounds to me preposterous that it is carried. Certainly Sergeant, an unfounded accusation of murder, if brought maliciously, is punishable with two years' imprisonment; you are right to warn her."

"Of course Deborah, you're free to do as you please," said Howe. "I'm advising you to think twice before you start telling the police their job . . . I don't particularly want to see you in the jug; your father could tell you what that means—if he were here. And your mother has trouble enough on her hands already."

Deborah was stricken dumbly; her face was very white. Whether or not it was due to Howe's warning, her tongue was sealed. Before she could say any more her mother caught her by the arm. Obedient for once, to the maternal touch, she allowed herself to be drawn to the open door.

"Get out of the house, Deborah," said Brian. "You have been here too long. Take her away, Mrs. Selby."

The elder woman was still crying as they went out.

"I'm sorry for you," concluded Brian, "but your daughter has been talking nonsense, and venomous nonsense at that. I didn't kill your husband." By what I've heard today, I'm far from being convinced that he's dead."

Mr. McGinnis thrust back his chair.

"For heaven's sake let's have an end of this business," he said, mopping his forehead. "As far as I'm concerned, it's finished. I'm very very patient, Chalmers. If there's anything further, and I'm wanted, you know where to find me—good-bye."

"Just a moment sir," said Sergeant Howe. "You came here on business concerning the late Bannister Coote?"

"He came here—a professional visit—to consult me about Bannister Coote's will," said Brian, "in which the Selbys figure; and very interesting it was."

"Ah!" said Howe. "I was just wondering if Mr. Coote had left anything of that sort behind him. We'd heard nothing about it. Mr. McGinness, I'm in charge of the case—Mr. Coote's murder—and I'll have a look at that will, if you'll step downstairs with me."

"Certainly, Sergeant," said McGinness quickly. "And I hope I'll be able to help you."

They went out together. Sonia closed the door. She came across to Brian, her eyes pleading.

"Good boy, Brian," she said. "You managed that well!"

She put her hands on his shoulders. Brian was deadly white, his jaw stuck out, and his eyes were blazing. She had seen him like that once before; in the moonlight on the night when he was up against Bannister Coote.

"Steady, dear," she said quietly. "It was tough, wasn't it. You must make allowances for Deborah."

"I've had all I can stand, Sonia! I wouldn't have cared what she said about you . . ."

"I don't think that matters. An angry woman will say anything. You noticed her mother didn't second her at all? Smooth it, McGinness didn't expect her to break out as she did. That scared him. He thought he'd got the whip hand of you; and he finds it's the other way round."

"That big growler! He's in it with them both. He's got a nerve!"

"He'll need it all. . . He's playing for his own hand."

"What did you make of him?"

"McGinness? I think he was more frightened of that girl's tongue than you were, by a rifle. He's scared of both those women."

"Why?"

"I should say they know too much about him. At present I've an idea that Bannister Coote must have let him down rather badly before this thing happened, and now he wishes himself well out of it."

"Why, the man stood to gain at least, sixty thousand dollars by Bannister's death; do they want to look any farther for motive?"

"But do you think he's quite that type of man, for the moment I'm feeling more interested in Selby! I'd like to hear a few more facts about Mr. Selby. And I suppose we can leave that to Sergeant Howe. But my ideas are heading in another direction meanwhile, Howe was fine, wasn't he? Really, Howe's a model. I'm very afraid he's more dangerous to us both, than any of those we've spent most of the morning with Howe, and I want to tell you about that before we go any farther."

She gave him a rapid account of all that had passed during the last two hours at the Stanbury Mine, clear and detailed. Brian listened eagerly; the telling took some time.

"Thank you, Sonia," he said quietly, at least, . . . "I don't know where I'd be without you. But I wish to Allah you hadn't gone there."

"It's lucky for us both I did. Now we're beginning to see what it all means. Only beginning—it's pretty cloudy yet. . . and it's later than we thought: Think it over, and you'll see it leads us straight back to James Selby."

She stopped short, as Howe walked in. He closed the door quietly and stepped across to Brian.

CHAPTER THIRTY

"Mr. Chalmers," said Howe. This reminds me of a visit that was preached on in Manchester Prison chapel last week. Where the case is, there will the eagles be gathered together." It doesn't seem thought, as if Bannister Coote's death is goin' to be as profitable as it looked."

"Meaning Lawyer McGinness?" asked Brian.

"Oh, Mr. McGinness claims a clean bill of health. Very unpleasant position for him, getting himself well out of it." Howe paused. "Baby, what I would you say is the faithful and devoted Selby, is he was here?"

"Plenty!"

"I bet you would. We find Selby where I'd an idea he might be found. In Coote's will. I was never much stuck on the notion that he had nothing to gain by Coote's death, five thousand pounds coming to the Selbys. And five hundred to Deborah."

"That had me beaten, at first!" said Brian.

"That he should remember Deborah?" asked Sonia dryly.

"No. That he should leave money to the Selbys. The last thing I'd have expected Bannister to do."

"Not at all, sir! He provided for the Selbys; and he didn't care a damn who knew it. He provided for them on the Coote family, or on any one of his own name he might leave behind him, even after he was gone. Under the circumstances quite natural."

"I think so too," said Sonia. "The only thing that surprises me is that Selby should have got to know the terms of the will—if he did. One wouldn't expect Bannister to—"

"There was plainly more over-done in that house that Selby didn't get to know of — or his wife either," said Howe grimly. "Selby has a nice little balance tucked away in the Hoxton and Leeds, by the way. They didn't do badly out of Coote, while he lived. But they couldn't tell how long that would last, and five thousand in a lump would sting hard in Selby's ear; he was just that kind of crook.

"Sorry! But the money question sings so loud to Mr. McGinness that he comes hurrying round here to try to get on — me, of all people — for the best expecting to run into you, Brian."

"What's in your mind, sir?" Sonia answered for him.

"I'd be rather interested," she said, "to know just where Mr. McGinness happened to be on the night of Bannister Coote's death."

"He told me," said Brian, "that he was in Amsterdam—any private detective he landed at Harwich yesterday."

"That happens to be true, sir," said Howe. "I'll say only this: that knowing McGinness was Coote's lawyer, and for other reasons—the first thing I did on hearing of the killing. And one of them—he's a fast boat tender. Brought white light in him now—is Selby."

"Just what I said!" broke in Sonia. "But are we any nearer knowing what's become of him?"

"We are pretty near it this morning, and we'll soon be clearer yet. The Mystery Man." He turned to Brian. "Do you know of a good recent photograph of Selby? I want it now. And I don't want to ask his wife for one—wouldn't get it if I did."

"Photo of Selby!" said Brian, and thought for a moment. "I'll snapshot's any good to you, Howe, I believe I've got the very thing."

He went out, and returned in a few moments with a 6-inch print.

The scene was a lawn-meet of the local Hunt; a pack of foxhounds on a winter morning in front of Kitty Kin House. Bannister Coote in riding kit, by his own front door, chatting with the Master . . .

In the centre, a conspicuous male figure, James Selby — the butler standing a trifle back in a canter and glasses. Howe chuckled.

"Fine! Couldn't beat that. I bet the Master of Hounds would have thrown a fit if he'd known he was being offered whiskey and Scowpes by a gunman and ex-convict. I'll take this sir; just what I need. Snapped it yourself, didn't you? Here's another Selby portrait that reaching me from Headquarters this morning, but it's no good. Out of date."

Perhaps it was fatigue, but more likely it was a fatal. But this does seem to put Mr. McGinness in one sense anyway, completely outside the field.

"I want to know who actually killed Bannister Coote. There are two or three people in my mind; I regard them as principals, all of them on or near the spot at the time of the killing. And one of them—he's a fast boat tender. Bright white light in him now—is Selby."

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Lady Tobbe"

Double Bill of Unusual Excellence Proves Highly Entertaining

Not in many a day has there been a more entertaining comedy presented to local theatregoers than the rollicking farce, "Lady Tobbe," in which Alice Brady creates so many laughs.

In conjunction with the feature picture, "Awakening of Jim Burke" the starring vehicle for Jack Hoxie, "Lady Tobbe" is delighting well-filled houses at the Capitol this week end.

The story opens on a new railroad under construction in Kansas and then shifts to the luxurious beauty of a Long Island estate, where the former railroad camp cook is masquerading after inheriting a considerable fortune, as a titled lady. After efforts to assume the position of an aristocrat are ludicrous in the extreme.

Her masquerade in snubbing her "snooty" neighbors bring forth many humorous situations and laugh-provoking situations.

Miss Brady is ably assisted by Marie Louise, Douglas Montgomery and Allen Mowbray.

For sheer value in entertainment is the second feature on the same program. The story in which the stride and stalwart Jack Holt is featured, "The Awakening of Jim Burke." It discloses a poignant stirring drama of understanding between a father and son.

It almost leads to tragedy as the two characters battle for what they think is right. The father, as played by Jack Holt, attempts to turn his carefully-nurtured son into a prodigy into a granite chip of the old block. Through the offices of an understanding young girl, who is living in the rough construction camp, the young son finds a heroine-for-whom in time overcomes the father that his interest of the boy is all wrong. The climax comes when the latter is completely converted into the real identities of the young man who sympathizes with the boy.

The talented young son is sequisitely played by young Jimmie Butler, an accomplished violinist. The two female leads are handled by Alice, daughter of the well-known sports writer, Grantland Rice, and Kathleen Burke, attractive young lady who is best known as "the panther woman."

A Fox Movietone Newsreel offers several topical events that of have headlined the daily papers.

On Sunday night, the Capitol management will present their High Midnite Preview, with doors opening at 11.30 p.m. The feature presentation is the latest and funniest, feature comedy of Joe Penner, entitled "Bright Lights" and said to be the most humorous of all of his releases. He is ably supported by a cast that includes Ann Dvorak, Patricia Ellis, Joe Cawthorn and William Gragan.

AT THE BELLE

"Every Night At Eight"

Musical Comedy Brings Radio Amateur Hour Idea to Screen

The brightest spot of light entertainment in town will be found at the Belle Theatre tomorrow and Monday with the presentation of the hearty, musical comedy "Every Night At Eight," at this popular playhouse.

Highly hilarious, with tuneful, toe-tapping tunes and an original-ity of story that will be as black-chasing, heart-warming piece of funny business as has come along in a month of musicals.

The picture stars a gay octet with Frances Langford, Alice Faye and Patsy Kelly as a stenographer, a switchboard operator and hotill packer respectively in a mint julep factory getting tired, from their jobs for practicing their harmony singing in the boss's office. Broke and bounced they decide to try their luck as singing trio on an amateur hour. At the radio station they lose the prize to George Raft who appears this time in a new kind of dramatic role, that of a conceited band leader. Attracted to the girls and seeing their possibilities he starts them on their career as the Frame Sisters. He builds them up to a trio of swank, sophisticated southern girls, makes them dress alike, look alike and in general manages their lives for them.

Under Raft's severe discipline they rise from their lowly amateur standing to prominence on the waves, sponsored by their ex-employer on his mint julep program. When Miss Langford believes that Raft does not return her love, she weds with the other two girls, deserts the nightly broadcast and goes off on a swanky yachting party. A climax, packed with thrills, romance and action, brings the trio to their senses.

Raft reveals a new side to his talents and gives the best of his performances to date in the role of orchestra leader, injecting into his performance a sympathetic understanding and charm that the part demands. Frances Langford, radio star, makes her screen debut in the film. Glitter-ed with a splendid voice and lyric-netic beauty she can definitely be classed as having potentialities for future stardom. Alice Faye contributed admirably to the musical as a skillful actress and an able singer. Patsy Kelly carries off comedy honors on the feminine side in a part made to order for her particular kind of hilarious wise-cracking.

The Radio Rogues, famous ether stars and comedians of no mean ability, with Walter Catlett, contribute the laughs during the amateur hour sequence. Such tunes as "There You Are," "Soon Been Blue", "Take It Easy," "I Feel a Song Coming On," "Swing Goldilocks-tically" and others provide a bright, romantic, musical background.

In addition to the shows, a second feature attraction will be shown at the Belle Saturday and Monday, both matinee and evening, a picture packed with thrills, sensational horsemanship, red-blooded action and heart-stirring drama, "Hopalong Cassidy" by Clarence E. Mulford Western story featuring William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison and Paula Stone with a host of other cowboys that contribute much to make this an outstanding picture of the old west.

Directed by Howard Bretherton, "Hopalong Cassidy" deals with the exciting adventures of the cowpuncher "Hopalong" and his two range-riding pals, in the days of the old, lawless West when cattle barons and cattle rustlers fought for supremacy with a quick draw on a six gun. How "Hopalong" and his buddies round up a desperado, ruthless gang of rustlers and avenge their crimes against honest ranch owners, makes up excellent entertainment that will thrill both adults and children alike.

Sunday Midnight Show

Clark Gable, Lorrain Young and Jack Oakie will be seen for the first time together in Jack London's adventure story of the Yukon, "Call of the Wild" which will be shown at the Belle Theatre Sunday, September 1st, commencing at 12.05 a.m. Doors open at 11.30 p.m.

TWEED

Tweed—The Department of Highways engaged in some re-pair work along Road No. 37 where Mrs. James Mason, Pte. Mr. Chas. Simpson of Plainfield, has charge of the repair gang.

Mr. Mitchell, young son of Joseph Collins of the Township of Hungerford, sustained a bad fracture of his right arm while cranking a car at his home on Thurlow St. The injury was reduced at the office of a local doctor.

The enjoyable picnic tea held on Tuesday afternoon by the members of St. James' Anglican Sunday School at the local park. They entered enthusiastically into a program of sports, under the direction of Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne and Mr. D. H. Morrison. Supper was served by the ladies of the congregation.

The little two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orvil Thompson of Madoc, had the misfortune to badly with an axe while playing with the implement at her home but it was found necessary to have it amputated at the office of a local surgeon.

David Paul, six-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. Paul, while trolling in the bay on Sloco Lake on Wednesday afternoon hooked a four-teen pound fungus. After the fisherman had hauled with his quarry until he was quite exhausted, his dad took a hand in the argument and hauled the fish into the boat. Needless to say, David is a proud youngster.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McTague will be leaving for Toronto in a short time. For the past four years Mr. McTague has been employed in the jewellery business in Tweed. He is disposing of his business to accept a position with a firm in Cobourg. Mr. and Mrs. McTague have been very active in many community activities since coming to Tweed. This is true particularly of tennis, as both are rated among the best of local tennis players. Mrs. McTague, as a member of Tweed Public Library Board has been very helpful in all undertakings. Saturday evening Mr. and Women's League of which she has been an active member.

At 3.30 on Saturday afternoon Mary Ann and Mr. Felix Rashotte were united in marriage at St. Gertrude's Church by Very Rev. Dean Kelly, P. P., O'Horday. A few close friends of the contracting parties were present. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. James Kitchen. The bride was gowned in a blue ensemble with matching hat and accessories. Following the wedding breakfast which was served at the bride's home on Victoria Crescent, Mr. and Mrs. Rashotte left on a motor trip to Dr. Cathartes and Buffalo. They will reside in Tweed on their return.

Miss A. M. Rayburn was again taken to Kingston General Hospital a few days ago for another tedious operation.

Among the visitors to the Exhibition are, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dark, Alton Foster, Michael Merrow, Mr. La Fontaine, Miss Frances Graham, Don Barnett, Frank Thurmon, Wilfred Savage, Norman Champaigne, Miss Betty Akey, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Mitchell.

Dr. A. C. Locke has returned to New York after spending a short time visiting his uncle and the children.

Miss Doreen Pobert, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Pobert who has been a patient at Hotel Dieu, Kingston, returned to her home on Sunday.

Mrs. S. B. Rollins and Borden, enjoyed a short motor trip through the Adirondacks.

Two thousand homing pigeons were released at the local C.P.R. station on Sunday morning at six o'clock. At nine o'clock word was received from Montreal that they had arrived covering two hundred miles in three hours.

PLANE CRASHES IN BENDIX RACE

Union Air Terminal Burbank, Calif., Aug. 30.—(AP)—Nine trim monoplanes headed by that of Amelia Earhart, sped away into a fog-bound sky before daylight today in quest of $12,500 prize money in the Bendix Trophy race with Cleveland and New York their goal.

The number of entrants was quickly reduced to eight when the plane of Cecil Allen, had to get away, crashed and was demolished a mile from the airport Allen was killed. The machine apparently never gained altitude."

Says Bible Says Italy May Fail

Toronto, Aug. 30 (CP)—Dr. O. J. Rolls who for 10 years was dean of the New Zealand Bible College and who trained men for missionary work in Ethiopia, will sail for Ethiopia Sept. 4, accompanied by Dr. T. A. Lambie of the Sudan Interior Mission, he said today.

Dr. Rolls is replacing Rev. R. J. Bingham, founder of the mission in Ethiopia.

Passages in the Bible which forecast the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, intimate Italy may not be successful in her designs, Rev. Rolls said.

"In Isaiah, chapter 18, 3, it intimates an appeal on the part of Ethiopia to all inhabitants of the earth," he said. "Isn't that what Herlie Selassie has just done? In the strong European powers refuse to act upon it will be directed by God as stated in Psalm 96, verses 30 and 31."

THREE JOIN CABINET

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—(CP)— Lucien Cardinal, Montreal lawyer, was appointed Minister of Marine and sworn into the Dominion Cabinet today, succeeding Hon. Alfred Duranleau who, was appointed to the Quebec bench. Two ministers without portfolio were also sworn in, Cosme Gagnon, former member of Parliament for Dorchester, Que. and W. Earl Rowe, former member for Dufferin-Simcoe.

D. H. Morrison Named School Board Official

TWEED, August 30.—(Special)—Mr. D. H. Morrison was named Secretary Treasurer of the High School Board at a meeting held on Tuesday night, to succeed Mr. W. H. Burgh, who recently removed to Kingston. Mr. Huyck had served for a period of ten years and his resignation was accepted with regret. Twelve years as a member of the High School Board qualify Mr. Morrison for the responsible position which he has assumed.

BRITISH AND STANDARD OIL GROUPS

Vast Oil Developments Foreseen—British Interest Given Perpetual Control of Lake Tana Region Feeding Nile Territory

By JAMES A. MILLS
ASSOCIATED PRESS FOREIGN STAFF
(World Copyright, 1935, by The Associated Press)

Addis Ababa, Aug. 31—Emperor Haile Selassie, seeking to block Italian penetration into Ethiopia, has turned over more than half his Empire to British interests and the Standard Oil Company for exploitation and general development, says Francis M. Rickett, British promoter.

In addition, the promoter said, the Emperor has entered negotiations to grant a corporation known as the Lake Tana Conservancy Syndicate the right in perpetuity to construct a dam and pumping stations at the famous Lake Tana.

Rickett said an initial investment of $60,000,000 would be made in the oil and mineral exploitation enterprise, to be controlled by an African Exploration and Development Company owned by the Standard Oil Company.

The affairs of the corporation, the promoter said would be directed by an American Board under an American President.

50 MILLION INVESTMENT

The Lake Tana project involved an investment of $50,000,000, Rickett said, and would be controlled by interests representing Ethiopia, The Sudan and Egypt, with capital apportioned among them which would be forthcoming from London and Cairo.

Capital of $500,000,000 was estimated by the promoter to be behind both enterprises.

A 75-year charter, authorizing its holders to exploit the soil and mineral resources and develop an area of 150,000 square miles, was signed just before midnight Thursday, Rickett said.

This correspondent saw the charter, bearing the Emperor's official title "Anointed King of Kings". There were two versions, one in English and the other in Amharic. They bore the great Imperial seal.

Work Will Begin Shortly

Rickett, known for having acquired great Mesopotamian oil fields, said work would begin in a few weeks. He said the Emperor would receive a substantial share of the profits which would be devoted to road-building, education, hygiene and general improvement of the country.

The concession area embraces the entire eastern shore of Lake Tana running from Lake Rudolph in a north-easterly direction towards Eritrea, including the oil fields of Ertasues and Jigligga.

Rickett declared the emperor's plan, on the eve of an apparent war, was to prevent the Italians from being control of Ethiopia with its resources of petroleum and mineral, as well as Lake Tana, source of the blue Nile waters of Egypt and the Sudan.

Ethiopians assumed even if Italy occupied Ethiopia, she would not attempt to challenge British and American rights in a concession area.

Lake Tana Output

The proposals made to the Emperor regarding Lake Tana involve construction of a gigantic dam and pumping station, increasing the output from the lake to the Nile and not only would provide added water supply in perpetuity for the Sudan and Egypt but also ensure ability cultivation of thousands of non-sterile acres.

This correspondent was informed the Government, which studied the proposals carefully, considered them the most satisfactory possible solution to the Lake Tana problem which has long been an international bone of contention.

Rickett said that the new company, if this concession was granted, would be to confirm surveys by W. C. D. White Company of New York, financed by the Egyptian Government at a cost of $500,000 and completed only last June.

Rickett said he would be glad to confer with White concerning that company's participation in the enterprise and the emperor also was believed to be anxious that White participate.

Rickett insisted development of the oil fields would proceed, "war or no war".

Boom For Italy, Says White

As he boarded a special airplane for Cairo yesterday, Rickett said:

"I should like to say to Mussolini and my friend Grandi, there is plenty of room for Italy to participate in the exploitation of such a hospitable land as Ethiopia without resorting to war."

Rickett said he had had relations with Italy in connection with the marketing of Mesopotamian oil.

Rickett defined the exploitation area as extending from the frontiers of Italy's colony of Eritrea in the north, along the 40th longitude to the Hawash River, where it is crossed by the Addis Ababa-Djibouti railway over a deep gorge forming the boundary between Shoa and Harar, straight line southwest to lake Rudolph where it meets the Kenya frontier.

Rome, Aug. 31.—(AP)—A belief prevailed in Fascist Italian quarters today an economic concession such as Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia was reported to have given Anglo-American interests would not alter Italy's military program.

Informed sources said Italy recognized the task of materializing on Ethiopian resources was long & simple one and for the time being the right strategic move against colonial enterprise of a neutral nature undertaken in the East African Empire.

No Official Aid Given by Britain, Says London Puzzled

London, Aug. 31 (C.P. Cable) — Reuters, in a despatch from Addis Ababa, today said reports of huge Ethiopian concessions to Anglo-American oil interest, first advanced by the Associated Press, were officially confirmed.

The government cabled Sir Sidney Barton, British minister to Ethiopia, asking an immediate report.

No official or even unofficial aid had ever been accorded Francis Rickett, the British promoter who negotiated the gigantic deal, it was said authoritatively.

British Interests Unrevealed

Rickett has long been a mystery man in Egypt, Mesopotamia and the Near East. The identity of the British industrial interests" associated with Standard Oil in the concession was still unrevealed.

The promoter was once a director of a British oil development company granted concessions along the Tigris by Feisal of Iraq but his name did not appear on the directorate of that company or the concern which later absorbed it.

The government has repeatedly stated it has no imperial nor economic interest in Ethiopia, other than Lake Tana, source-waters of the Blue Nile.

London Puzzled

The identity of the group still appears to be puzzling London. Official inquiries produced no positive information. Experts assert, however, that Rickett is well known and that one line he was formerly with British government "some little difficulty" over an oil deal with Mesopotamia.

While waiting further enlightenment, officials in Addis Ababa might happen the "purchasing group" in Ethiopia and the stress on the official support of the government.

SHREWD STROKE STATE DIPLOMATS

By JAMES A. MILLS
(World Copyright, 1935 By The Associated Press)

Addis Ababa, Aug. 31—An Ethiopian Government official communique today announced a concession had been granted to the Africa Development Exploration Company, incorporated in Delaware, U.S., for development of oil resources over virtually half of Ethiopia.

Francis M. Rickett, British promoter who negotiated the concession with Emperor Haile Selassie, said the African Development Exploration Corporation was controlled by the Standard Oil Company. (Which of the numerous Standard Oil companies was not known was not designated).

Concession Duly 11 Last

The African Development Exploration Corporation was chartered at Dover, Del., July 11, with a capital stock of 5,000 shares of a par value of $100 a share. The incorporators were Alfred W. Britton, Edward F. Williams and Vincent W. Wolinsky.

The charter authorizes the Corporation to drill for oil, and mine precious stones, gold, silver and asphalt and to engage in the work of general development. The head quarters are given as New York with a representative in Ethiopia.

Tana Interest

Rickett said in addition the Emperor had entered negotiations to grant a British controlled corporation known as the Lake Tana Conservancy Syndicate the right in perpetuity to construct a dam and pumping stations at the famous Lake Tana, headquarters of the Blue Nile.

Empire Haile Selassie's action in granting vast concessions was generally regarded here as closing the door to Italian economic penetration of Ethiopia.

It created a sensation in diplomatic circles, especially in the Italian legation.

Many of the diplomats appeared too stunned at the event to make considered comment but the general impression among non-Italian sources was the "Conquering Lion of Judah" had made a shrewd stroke which would have not only profound political and economic significance but would greatly affect the course of the Italian-Ethiopian controversy.

BORDER FORT WHERE 12,000 DESERTED TO ETHIOPIANS

An Italian fort on the frontier of Italian Somaliland and Ethiopia, near Dolo. More than 12,000 Somali natives are declared to have deserted the Italian forces to volunteer for service in the Ethiopian armies. Italy is demanding return of rifles and machine guns they took with them.

GIRLS' WAY PAID

Seventy Men Start From North Bay on Home Trek to Kirkland Lake

North Bay, Ont., Aug. 31.—(CP) —Boarding three Canadian Pacific Railway box cars early today seventy homeward bound lumber marchers attempted to get out of North Bay but were foiled, when C.R.P. police locked them in the cars until the next outbound freight had pulled out for Sudbury.

The trekkers were then released and returned to their headquarters at Wallace Park. It was expected they would leave on foot this afternoon.

"Ray" 30-year-old Timmins girl who accompanied them, went home by train this morning, her fare being paid by the city of North Bay. Sixteen are making ready to continue their homeward march to Kirkland Lake.

Italy May Leave League At Moment's Notice, Report

With Addition of 200,000 Men Italy Will Have Over Million Men Under Arms, Il Duce Tells

Geneva, Aug. 31 (CP)—Italy has completed preparations to quit the League of Nations, and is ready to do so at a moment's notice, it was authoritatively learned here today.

The Italian foreign minister — Premier Mussolini — has drawn up a lengthy indictment of the League which will be used by Italy if it finds it necessary to quit Geneva, it was said.

The document contains, it was added, a list of the grievances of Fascist Italy against the International Labor Office which it claims would quit at the same time as the League of Nations. A long attack against the Second (Socialist) International and the Workers' Group at the Labor Office would be used as justification for Italy's move.

It was understood here Labor Office officials already have been warned by Italy such steps will be taken about the Italo-Ethiopian crisis being an open break between Italy and the international organization at Geneva.

With the Italian army, Bolzano, Aug. 31 (AP)—Premier Mussolini told the soldiers of his army today 200,000 more men will be called to the colors next month to bring the number under arms to more than 1,000,000.

"The world should know yet again," he said, "that as long as one Italian remains alive the provocation of sanctions we will not give up one soldier, one officer or one aviator."

The British cabinet at a session in London last week was reported to have decided to ask the League of Nations Council that sanctions—penalties against an aggressor—be invoked if necessary, to enforce a settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

Men Not Going Home

Mussolini said he had mobilized soldiers they would not be permitted to go home. "Some of them are in small number ordinary field practice.

The manoeuvres which have been going on for the past week on the Austrian border, he said, demonstrated the morale of the army and had shown "if tomorrow the country requires you to perform duties necessitating more sacrifices, you will do it with enthusiasm, courage and ready decision worthy of the Italian army."

Military authorities said they believed Il Duce's mention of the recruiting of 200,000 more men in December included 150,000 already announced as having been called to arms recently.

O.M.A. REQUESTS PART OF GAS TAX

Also Wish Larger Contribution Towards Mothers' Allowances

Toronto, Aug. 31 (CP)—The Ontario Municipal Association was committed today to proposals inviting a read by municipalities on the Provincial Treasury. Delegates to the 37th annual convention of the organization want the government to give municipalities a share of motor car gasoline tax and to contribute a greater share towards Mothers' Allowances.

Members felt, according to the declaration of Chas. Sudbury and St. Thomas delegates at yesterday's session, three-quarters or gasoline used by city residents powered cars on city streets and therefore those municipalities should have a share of automobile registration fees and the six-cents a gallon gasoline tax.

Request for a greater government contribution to Mothers' Allowances was contained in the resolution of C. W. McCree, Sault Ste. Marie city treasurer, which the association passed.

BRITAIN BARS WAY TO ITALIAN PLANS IS FRENCH VIEW

Concession in Ethiopia is Virtual Protectorate Says Newspaper

ITALY SAYS 'FORWARD'

British And Italian Views Minimize Importance of Concessions

Rome, Aug. 31 (AP)—Ethiopia's concession of a vast portion of her territory for development of British and American interests can in no way deter Premier Mussolini's plans regarding that kingdom, a government spokesman said today.

Officials said, however, they had received no official reports from the Italian legation at Addis Ababa and minimized the importance of the concessions as war deterrents.

The spokesman, expressing surprise at the "temerity" of business concerns in planning large scale developments in Ethiopia at the present time, said he had not framed any official opinion concerning the future legal status of the conceded territory.

How Italy May View Situation.

Although international codes provide generally for continued validity of concessions despite a change in regime Italy, it was explained, might readily protest the concessions once she had entered Ethiopia because it is thought here they may have been made as a last minute effort to keep Italy from what she considers her logical expansion of the East African kingdom.

On the other hand, it was said, Italy may easily take the view British and American concessions will furnish valuable channels in a territory which she feels it her responsibility to civilize and develop in all its possibilities and resources.

Rome, Aug. 31 (AP)—British officials today treated with reserve reports Ethiopia had granted vast concessions to British and American concerns but said the last thing the British government would want to do under the present circumstances would be to give any support of any nature to the enterprise of the character reported.

Government departments, in the presence of official reports, were inclined to minimize the importance of the concessions. Officials pointed out the government had given no indication it was backing to any concession in Ethiopia.

Lake Tana Guarantee.

They recalled even on the subject of Lake Tana, source of irrigating water for the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign minister, told the House of Commons July 9 the government favored an international treaty agreement regarding its development because it would be the best way to adjust which might aggravate the Italo-Ethiopian controversy.

French View "Strategy"

Paris, Aug. 31 (CP)—The vast concessions in Ethiopia granted there are really to British interests, L'Echo de Paris said today in an editorial.

The editorial said: "The British ruler has put down its paws on Ethiopia. Let anyone touch it who watches its claim.

"Let us see later the brutal conclusion of interests that takes place."

Called Protectorate.

Apparently accepting the concessions as British strategy, the Conservative French newspaper added: "The Ethiopian concession secures Great Britain has consolidated its Empire. The British government has established a veritable protectorate over Egypt and has barred the way of Italy in that land."

Rivalry between the owners of these crafts is keen and if weather conditions are favorable two fine races will be seen.

WINNING CHEESE FINELY FINISHED

Prize winning cheese exhibited at the Canadian National Exhibition from throughout the Dominion this year were slightly inferior in quality to those exhibited on previous occasions, it was stated today by Mr. James Irwin, local Dominion Dairy Grader who returned to the city this week after having spent a three day period of judging at the Toronto Fair.

Most of the cheese were finished beautifully. They looked as if they had been made by an artist, but they were so round and uniform, but we noticed that the quality was slightly off. They were not up to the standards of other years," declared Mr. Irwin.

Seasonal conditions were given by Mr. Irwin for the deterioration. The majority of calls are for single girls who are asked to sleep by the side of a dead person, and for this work are listed as the office.

$85,200 IN PERMITS ISSUED FOR AUGUST

"No, for some time have we been able to report as satisfactory a construction month as August just ending," stated Mr. Ross Mott, city engineer in releasing the figures for building permits for the 31 day period. "It has been one of our best months on record," it was added.

Total expenditure, estimated in the permits issued was given at $85,200.00, the greater part of which is accounted for by the construction of the Entomological Laboratory addition on East Dundas Street, at an estimated cost of $81,000.00.

Four other permits for alterations and minor construction were given. Alterations to the Evangelical Temple $500; flat, Dundas St., alterations, $4,000; a George Street home, $500 and a garage on Bell Street at $200.

Total of permits issued for the same month in 1934, 4934, $6,525; August, 1933, $3,625; August, 1932, none issued.

Total expenditure in permits issued so far this year was given at $171,780.00.

GIRL KNOCKED OFF RUNNING BOARD

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 31.—(CP)—Knocked off the running board of a car by a motor transport's trailer, Miss Muriel Landrain of Pembroke had a narrow escape from death near here today. She is in Hotel Dieu Hospital with two fractured ribs, cuts and bruises.

Miss Landrain was enroute to Pembroke from Ottawa in a car driven by Miss Monica Moore of Toronto. On Highway No. 16, 10 miles north east of here, the top was very heavy load on the Landrain car on to running board to wipe the windshield.

The trailer of the transport sideswiped the car and knocked her to the roadway.

West Playgrounds

Friday afternoon the closing events of the West Belleville Playground were held. In spite of the drizzling rain the attendance was very good. Games were played after which a treat was provided for all the children.

Every two weeks during the playground's season, the children brought their lunches and took part in races and games. Points were given to the entrants in these races and on Friday the children of the greatest total number of points received their prizes which were presented by Mrs. W. A. Woodley Secretary-Treasurer of the Playgrounds Committee. The following were the winners:—

Boys, 5-12 years—Eugene Barnum

Boys, 8 years and under—Carl Ostrom.

Girls, 9-12 years—Evelyn Reid.

Girls, 6 years and under—Ines Lundberg.

Handicrafts were taught through the summer and prizes for the best work were distributed by Mrs. Woodley to Phyllis Gibson for a cushion, to Lois Liddle for flower pot cover or stitch, to Ruth Cooper for a Dutch Cleanser can cover and to Helen Brown, for recipe book.

FRUIT DISPLAY ON MART LARGE

Prices Show Little Change From Close of Last Week

Fruit, consisting of peaches, plums, of various kinds, pears and apples, grapes predominated the Saturday's market, the display being exceptionally large. Prices were reasonable. The market on the many respects the best held here for some time with little changes to note in prices.

During the past week there has been a slump in the Bartlett pear with a decline of about 50c per hundred weight for five bags now offered here.

There were no changes to note in the prices of grain over those of a week ago.

The display of vegetables was exceptionally large and fine with but slight changes to note in prices. In the interior of the market building dairy products were offered for sale in considerable quantities as was also home cooking, which was successfully tempting considerable trading was done in this part of the market. Poultry was plentiful with prices fair.

FLEMING FAMILY MEET AT OAK LAKE

Sports And Softball Game Enjoyed by Large Gathering

In the coolness of the shores and the shade of the Oak Lake on Wednesday afternoon the descendants of Robert and Samantha Fleming held their fifth annual picnic. The reunion which always attracts an attractive attracted more than sixty persons who thoroughly enjoyed the day's outing.

At noon a perfectly prepared lunch was served by the ladies on the grounds, and after the dinner a program of sports of varied nature was carried out. Winners of the events were as follows:

Boys' race, five years and under—Norman Douglas Reid.

Girls' race, five years to ten—Doris Cooks.

Boys' race, five years to ten—Maurice Rollins.

Girls' race, ten years and over—Mrs. Don Campbell.

Boys' race, ten years and over—Sheldon Rollins.

Ladies' Shoe Kicking Contest—Miss May Simpson.

Ladies' Walking Race, 40 years and over—Mrs. Wm. French.

Ladies' Race, ten years to fifteen—Carl Rollins.

One of the feature attractions of the afternoon was a bang-up softball game between Harry Rollins' Blue Shirts and Clarence Rollins' Never Sweats. The latter team clad in sharp uniforms defeating their opponents by the score of 12-12.

While preparations were being made for the afternoon supper, two games of quoits were played, Mrs. Annie Reid well known pioneer aunts as Will, Robert and Richard Fleming, who showed that these players many of the finer points of the game. The day was closed by participation in further games, and a halt to the day's festivities was called until time had settled over the district.

It was decided by the members of the family to invite all the Fleming family to join in a reunion next year. The family was left in the hands of Secretary Harry Rollins, of Foxboro.

Only one note of sadness tinged the day on Wednesday. Since the last reunion one year ago two of the immediate members of the family, Howard Fleming the late Mr. W. H. Rollins of Ivanhoe and Mr. Alexander Fleming of Cookshire, have passed on. Special tribute was paid to their memory.

POLICE BLOTTER

While patrolling their beat early today local police found two new lawn bowling balls lying alongside the bench in front of the post office. The bowling balls are at present reposing at the police station awaiting their rightful owner.

As is usually the case upon the breaking up of the Belleville Fair, local police were busied run around, during the night. John Morris, 21 R. R. No. 7, of Belleville, complained to the authorities of the theft of his overcoat. The coat had been stolen out of his automobile. Two drunks were picked up on the grounds and escorted to the police station early in the evening, later being liberated with instructions to appear in Tuesday's court.

Harry Crosson, Belleville, was taken into custody at the fair grounds by Sergeant Boots, after James Shaughnessy, Shannonville, had reported the loss of three pairs of sox and a pair of leather gloves. The articles were found in Crosson's truck, police stated today, but Crosson denied any knowledge of their presence.

Melville Carney, Belleville, parked his bicycle at the fair grounds last night to take in the sights, upon his return two hours later, however, the "ride" was among the missing. Young Carney notified the police of his loss.

Wet slippery pavements and the sudden application of the brakes is attributed to be the cause of a motor accident that was committed at the west end of the upper bridge yesterday afternoon. A large truck, being driven by Carl O'Hara of this city was proceeding westward when he applied the brakes of his truck. The vehicle skidded and collided with an automobile, parked on the left hand side of the road, and drove the lighter vehicle across considerable distance north on Front street. Fender and bumper damage was all that resulted when the accident was investigated by Traffic Officer Noe. The motor car was owned by Elroy Post, 25 Dundas street.

HALF OF ETHIOPIA DEEDED TO ANGLO-U.S. TRADE

Reaction in United States Over Ethiopia's Move Emphatically Expressed

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—Emphatic comment that the people of the United States are determined to steer clear of foreign wars was heard among Senators today as they read of Emperor Haile Selassie's deeding of half his kingdom for exploitation by Anglo-American interests.

Senator Borah of Idaho, widely known for his stand against "foreign entanglements," heard the news with displeasure. He characterized such transactions as buying an "interest in war."

Borah, ranking Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared: "The fact American citizens have purchased an interest in war would not change, I believe, the country's neutrality policy."

Senator Johnson (R-Cal) said it would be "perfectly silly for the United States to enter into any partnership with England which will put us in the position of pulling chestnuts out of the fire for the British."

Senator Bulkley (D-Ohio) declared he saw no reason why the acquisition of property in Ethiopia by the Standard Oil Company should involve the United States in any prospective hostilities."

Oil in East Ethiopia

Among diplomatic observers there was a disposition to believe such a transaction most likely would not involve the United States directly in any conflict between Italy and Ethiopia.

Officials of the National Geographic Society recalled today the keen interest American explorers have displayed in Lake Tana."

Rivalry between British and American interests was reported in 1926 but as early as 1902 Great Britain's representatives discussed with Ethiopia the purchase of control of Lake Tana. Only recently American engineers surveyed routes to the lake and possible dam sites.

Oil found thus far has been in eastern Ethiopia, the society said. The potential value of mineral sources was described as unknown but gold has been found in streams of southern and western provinces. A goldmining firm has produced 3,500 ounces annually.

ITALIAN AIR CHIEF

Squadron General Guiseppe Valle (above) and not Marshal Italo Balbo, transatlantic armada leader, is expected to be commander-in-chief of Italian air forces being assembled for Ethiopian service. He has been undersecretary for air.

FATHER DISOWNED

H. BEDFORD-JONES

Because of an article which she alleges is about her, Nancy Bedford-Jones, daughter of the Napanee, Ontario, millionaire author, charges in another magazine that, though she always loved her father, his story about her is a fabrication.

The possibility of war between an Italy and Ethiopia leads to much discussion of the physical features of the country ruled by Haili Selassie. I. of the obstacles which they would present to an invader, and of the opportunities the Ethiopians might have of waging an effective guerilla warfare in such terrain, even against a better-armed and better-equipped enemy. The drawing published here by arrangement with the London Illustrated News and Central Press Canadian, shows how the country consists mainly of an immense plateau, mountainous and riven with gorges, fringed on the south and east by hot, dry, inhospitable deserts. Through these an invading force, penetrating from Eritrea or Italian Somaliland, would have to make its way before reaching the central table-land. And even there Ethiopia has few vulnerable points. Addis Ababa, the capital, Harrar, the centre of the emperor's own province, and Dire-Dawa are the only towns of considerable size. A vivid description of the country is contained in Mr. James E. Baum's "Savage Abyssinia". Extensive level, or almost level, regions are the exception, and the country as a whole, is a mass of mountains and canyons, a torn and riven jumble of peaks and cliffs and escarpments piled helter-skelter on a high table-land. And the thing is on so massive and grand a scale that its ruggedness becomes depressing after a few months of travel. Miles give out and the distance covered in a day's trek shows so small upon the map that the traveller begins to wonder whether or not he will ever reach his destination. It is impossible to make long marches because of the difficulties of the country; the deep canyons and steep ascents..... There are all sorts and conditions of terrain in this last independent African Kingdom, for its boundaries extend east into the Somali desert, west into the fever-haunted jungles of the Upper Nile drainage basin, and south into the arid wastes around Lake Rudolf. But the low hot fringes, outskirts, are not the real Abyssinia. That, as we have said, is the high, rocky, giant's table that stands a titanic bulwark, its peaks and buttresses thrust into the African sky, a monument to the ancient geological forces that created it when the world was young. And among those peaks, plateaux, escarpments, and abrupt plains dwells the unconquered high land race the children of the Queen of Sheba." From this description it becomes plain that effective use of aircraft by the Italians would be as difficult as any other military activity. There are few places where landing is possible in the plateau country, and the air there is so rarified, being 8,000 or more feet above sea-level, that taking-off is always hazardous. It is not of interest to draw attention, finally, to the position of Lake Tana, amid the hills in northwestern Abyssinia. Lake Tana is the source of the Blue Nile, and for that reason closely affects British interests. On its waters depends the irrigation of much of the Soudan.

Man's First Flight By Muscle Power

Frankfurt-on-Main, Germany, Aug. 31 (CP)—What was claimed to be the first flight of a man by the power of his own muscles succeeded at the Rodelsee aerodrome on Friday.

A local flier named Dusenbell flew an airplane with his propeller driven by muscle power.

The airplane, at an altitude of three feet, was recorded as covering a distance of 164 metres (about 600 feet) on the first attempt and 235 metres (about 725 feet) on a second flight.

The flier piloted a highwing machine fitted with treadles which turned the propeller. It was constructed by engineers Hasselen and Villinger.

Briton, Who Became Zulu Chief, Leaves 79 Children and Problems

Cape Town (Reuter)—The South African Government has started its difficult task of rounding up the scattered descendants of John Dunn, the Briton who became a Zulu chief.

John Dunn came to South Africa and settled in Zululand during the last century. He adopted the native mode of life and eventually became a recognized Zulu chieftain.

His had seventy-nine children, and when he died the government was faced with problem of dividing up his land among them. Great difficulties were encountered, and finally a bill, known as the John Dunn distribution of land Bill was introduced into the House of Assembly, providing for a commission of three to investigate the case.

R. Stuttaford, the Acting Minister for Native Affairs, declared that everything would be done to protect Dunn's descendants from exploitation. Provision had been made in the bill, he said, that the land could not be alienated, transferred or sub-divided without the consent of the Governor General.

The commission, presided over by H. G. Lugg, Chief Native Commissioner for Natal, has decided that on November 5 all claimants to this land shall meet at Mtunzini, in Zululand, near the coast.

Descendants from all parts of the Union are expected to attend, in what number no one knows, though it is thought that they will run into several hundreds. Not all of them, however, will have a valid claim to the land. As many of them are unable to write, it has been arranged that the clerk of the court at Mtunzini shall prepare the necessary documents for them if requested.

SAYS HEAT BAND GIRDLING EARTH

Briton Says Temperature of 1,000 Degrees Centigrade Bars Use of Micro-Waves

London, Aug. 31.—Professor Edward Victor Appleton, chairman of the British National Committee for Radio Telegraphy, is reported in The Daily Mail to have discovered in the upper atmosphere a vast layer of intense heat hitherto unknown to science.

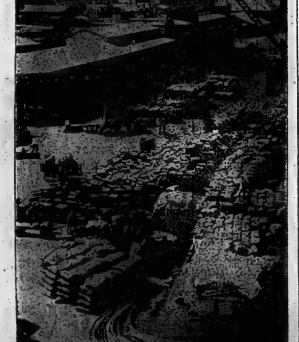
Professor Appleton declares the temperature of this layer is 1,000 degrees Centigrade. Therefore, he holds, man will never be able to fly to the moon, nor will ultra-short radio waves be of real use for broadcasting.

The Daily Mail says it is Professor Appleton's opinion that his discovery will upset the whole research now being carried out on radio short waves and the possibility of harnessing micro-waves for radio transmission.

"Professor Appleton," says The Daily Mail, "claims to have proved that instead of the atmosphere becoming colder the further one travels from the earth's surface, it becomes much hotter after the first seven miles. He bases his conclusion on extraordinary calculations made by sending wireless waves into the atmosphere 150 miles from the earth. At this distance they impinge against the ionosphere and are then reflected back.

"Professor Appleton states that the behavior of these waves has proved they are affected by a layer of intense heat and robbed of their vital properties. He also has found that the layer becomes cooler during the Winter.

Requisition 121 Girls For CCC Camp Dance



Pocatello, Idaho, Aug. 31— The quartermaster for the CCC boys at Camp Stewart had a real order today—one for 121 girls. It read:

"Ship to each enrolee of Company 910, The Flats, Soda, Idaho, one each, girls. GI, complete with shoes. Total number required, 121."

They are wanted for a party. The quartermaster explained that a "GI" girl is about 5 feet tall and may be blonde, brunette or red-head. "GI" means government issue," a term used on all government requisitions.

The quartermaster will try to fill the order.

YOUNG PRINCE PREPARES FOR WAR

PRINCE MAKONNEN

Although he is at the age when most princes are learning their school lessons, Prince Makonnen, son of Emperor Haile Sellasie of Ethiopia, is pictured at Harrar, astride his black stallion, while being groomed for war. The helmet of his officer's costume is trimmed with the mane of lion. The prince plans to fight at his father's side, if and when Italian troops invade Ethiopia.

TMOMASBURG

Thomasburg, Aug. 31.—Thursday afternoon the funeral of the late Mrs. Richard T. Porter was very largely attended by relatives and friends. At two-thirty o'clock a brief service was conducted at her late residence in the village of Thomasburg by the Rev. F. C. Beazer after which the funeral procession proceeded to the Anglican Church where the burial office of the church was completed by the rector, Rev. F. C. Beazer, assisted by the Rev. H. Herrington, pastor of Thomasburg United Church. Rev. Mr. Beazer chose his text from Isaiah 26:3, "Thou will keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee; because he trusteth in thee". During the service Mrs. Steven sang as a solo "Peace Perfect Peace".

Interment was made in the Church of England Cemetery, the committal service being conducted by Rev. Mr. Beazer. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful showing the high esteem in which the deceased was held by her many friends. Acting as bearers were Charles Jeffery, Edward Carter, Herbert Mouck, Albert Powell, William Coulter and George Clare. [illegible]

The flower bearers were Messrs. Lewis Morton, Harry Carleton, Kenneth Jeffery, Fred Porter, Graham Mouck, William Geen and Harry Kennedy.

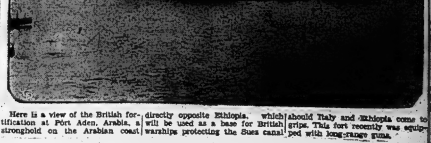
Girl Gets Boyish Bob Leaves Barber Shop by Side Door, Disappears

Stratford, Ont., Aug. 31 (CP)—Police yesterday announced they had been asked to search for 18-year-old Martha Campbell, Stratford domicile, who disappeared on Thursday.



Police said they had received information that the girl visited a barber shop, had her hair shorn in a boyish bob, then emerged from a vacant room at the shop dressed as a boy.

She was last seen, according to police, buying a ticket for Guelph at the C.N.R. station, dressed in a red windbreaker.

Dairy Inspectors of Fruit

Canada, the United Kingdom, France, Germany and Austria are leading world importers of fruit. Canada does not require to import apples, but the average annual imports of other fruits into Canada from 1926-33 included: 94,000 tons of bananas; 72,000 tons of oranges; 30,000 tons of dried grapes; 12,000 tons of lemons; 21,000 tons of grapes, and 8,000 tons of pears.

EDUCATION PROBLEMS

Education has a big task before it according to speakers at Oxford, England, where the World Federation of Educational Associations met this month. The world has changed greatly, has new demands which must be satisfied and which must be studied by education.

Educationists of the federation frankly admitted their perplexity in facing the changing conditions. They were not definite in what they thought should be the changes in educational methods. They did however agree that the type of instruction which was thought good enough for generations was inadequate for today. One speaker from the United States admitted "Our thinking about education is chaotic in these days of rapid exchange" and he looked to education to do great things for the world, for on teachers he said rested the great responsibility to bring about stability and define true values. He declared that it was necessary as a foundation to believe that mankind has sufficient intelligence to plan and create a great society.

Teachers condemned the strictly utilitarian in instruction. Some criticized technical training which put youth to work with tools and left them suddenly of training and left them stranded in a world which required more than mere immaturity of knowledge and craftsmanship.

KIPLING IN MOVIES

Rudyard Kipling has gone into the moving pictures with a rush. No fewer than six of his books and short stories are in the hands of producers on the two sides of the Atlantic, including "Kim", "Soldiers Three", "Captains Courageous", "The Light That Failed" and others.

Editors generally credit the reason for the arrival of Kipling in the sound pictures as personal, though they see also a possible reason in the political color of world events. Kipling's is a world of drums and trumpets and of the soldier, which he has quite dead as many thought it—as the roll of drums, the salutes to the chieftains and world news every day would indicate.

It is a fact to be noted that much of the news of this day has a military color. Moving pictures contain a great deal of military news, for two reasons, they cover the facts and because military display is so striking to the eye and ear. One has but to think of the numbers of pictures portraying sympathetically either in background or as the main theme, the life of the navy or the life of a soldier. From general observation of the moving picture one would say there is less than formerly appreciation in audiences. Bernard Shaw is still coy with regard to the moving pictures, yet literary as he is and given to the drama of ideas, Shaw is one of the most striking of forces in the world today. One has not have to accept his doctrines to accept this as a fact and whether Shaw is a political thinker or not, he is dealing in subjects which are very much to the fore. He gave a striking picture of Joan of Arc in his play "Saint Joan" and the play would make a great hit on the screen for its scenery and its dialogue it would be this remarkable drama of the life of one of the greatest figures in the history of the earth.

Mr. Shaw also dealt with war in the play "Arms and the Man" which was turned into musical comedy under the title "The Chocolate Soldier". Everything knows the "My Hero" waltz of the comedy. It would make movie drama except in war time.

How far Shaw's witticisms would 'go' in the film has to be shown. Could the audience take the dialogue as fast as it is given and would his plays submit easily to cutting for cutting cuts not only the picture but the sound, and the dialogue of Shaw, even if stretched out too far in places, is yet a vital part of the kernel. His play of "Caesar and Cleopatra" enshining the infatuation of "the hook-nosed fellow of Rome" the great dictator, who became the mighty Julius, one of the greatest men of all time, for the girlish Cleopatra might make excellent film drama. Yet it would is too bad some people of this day who do not go to a Shaw play cannot hear Shaw dialogue in movies. He has many other dramas which might go well in the movies.

Sir James Barrie allowed picturization of a number of fine plays such as "Peter Pan" and "What Every Woman Knows". The movie caught the whimsy and indefinable charm of these dainty plays. The movie has also taken in a number of Galsworthy's plays such as "Old English" with success.

It may be that Shaw will be coaxed into the films. Anyway Kipling's stories are on the way to being pictured with sound.

It is heaven upon earth to have a man's mind move in charity and providence and turn upon the poles of truth.—Bacon.

Although a soldier by profession, I have never felt any sort of fondness for war and I have never advocated it except as a means of peace.—U. S. Grant.

SMOKE DREAM

Give me my youth again and let me live
In fairy palaces with ivy walls,
O'erlooking water near some shining cliff,
The rugged stones of those quaint elfin halls
Where pixies dance and all the gay wee-folk
Will prance and caper in a magic ring
Which disbelieving mortals take for smoke,
The color of the bee's translucent wing.
But let the grave, the hoary and the sage,
Who seek to rule my life with maxims wise
And spread the bitter wisdom of old age,
Deny my fancy and shut mortal eyes.
Let them condemn my words in gibberish—
A dream, unknowingly, they also wish!

—Jean Lascelles-Ranson.

IF WE WERE ASKED WHAT IMPRESSED US MOST AT BELLEVILLE FAIR we would have to give first place to—

x

The boys of the Junior Fair and the parade of the Calf Club. The calves looked their prettiest and the boys were worth looking at too. Each boy led his favorite prize-winning calf and it was hard to tell which looked the proudest, the boy or his calf. There were fine Holstein calves, all white and black, beautifully marked, one with a mark which resembled a black swastika, against the white background. Then there were the little white and brown Ayrshires, stepping along as daintily as deer. The parade was a beautiful sight, worth going to the Fair to see, alone, if there were nothing else.

x

Came the thought, this Junior Fair is a step in the right direction, and calf clubs have great possibilities. Supposing a farmer was to give each of his boys a calf each year. The boy would take an interest in raising a herd of his very own, take more interest in the farm—it wouldn't be so hard to keep the boy down on the farm if he had a real live interest in it, such as the Calf Club seems to indicate.

x

Thirty-seven girls and 45 boys took part in the Junior Fair program, and they made excellent judges.

x

It has always seemed to us that there was more of interest in farm life and work than there could be in stuffy offices or factories—there should not be any trouble keeping the boys and girls down on the farm—the trouble would be getting them to come from the farm. Seems to us the answer is in providing the interest which will make the youth see something worth while in farm life and work, such as taking them into partnership, giving them a financial interest in the farm as well as a human interest.

x

Among the things we particularly remember at Belleville Fair was a heat in the speeding events, when a perfect start was secured the first time the horses came down. The starter was the veteran, Mayor George Tice, who knows his horses from stable to homestretch. Ordinarily a starter would hardly look at the first scoring attempt but ring his "go back" bell through habit. Starter Tice caught the situation as the horses came bunched to the post and his "Go" kept them on their way. That's the first time we ever saw a race start without more or less scoring, tiresome for the spectator and possibly so for the horses.

x

You will no doubt remember, as we do, the laughs generated by the antics of those two colored boys, calling themselves "The Goldust Twins"—that boxing match was better than many a professional bout we have seen—Oh, Boy! Could those lads take it—and anyone who couldn't laugh heartily at the marvellous gyrations of these nimble boys certainly has something wrong with the interior machinery and should see a doctor, a veterinary surgeon preferably, for he would be able to give them the horse-laugh at any rate.

x

Another thing about the Fair folks will not soon forget—those French poodles clever and funny—the top in the act where the two male companions were more or less the "stooges".

x

It wouldn't be fair in discussing the "Specia. Acts" at the Fair not to mention the Four Laddies, who certainly were different and very entertaining. The entire program before the grandstand was clean and clever, and from the laughs and applause of the daily and nightly audiences the efforts of the entertainers to please was duly appreciated.

x

Taking the Fair all in all the biggest and most promising thing there and capable of great development is the Junior Fair, and the lads and lassies who took part in it will certainly look forward to next year's Fair with pleased anticipation.

RUST DAMAGE ON WIDE SCALE SHOWS IN WEST

Cutting of Wheat Slow And Wheat Becomes Tough

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 31.—Cool showery weather with some high winds has made cutting and threshing slow and rains in some districts have been so intermittent that wheat is becoming tough. Some localities report frost but only to a very limited extent and mostly in districts where grains are far enough along to be immune from frost, according to the weekly crop report of the agricultural department, Canadian National Railways. Rust damage is distinctly growing up over a tremendously wide area and some yields are even more disappointing than anticipated. Grades are low. Wheat cutting with sixweek or good weather will be practically completed and threshing should be general early in September.

Threshing operations in Manitoba have been held up by rains but in some districts 45 per cent. of the grain has passed through the Separator. Yields of barley and oats vary from poor to good but common bread wheat samples are of inferior quality in Southern Manitoba.

In the Dauphin-Swan River territories cool rainy weather prevented wheat cutting being finished this week. Yields of coarse grains in the until next week, even while favorable weather. Hail damage has cleaned out a few strips in widely scattered strips. In Alberta, along the Drumheller, Oyen, Stettler, Three Hills, Red Deer subdivisions warm weather is necessary to speed up operations. Yields in these districts will be quite variable, some localities estimating the return of wheat at from 30 to 40 bushels and others only from 5 to 15 bushels.

In North Central Alberta weather has been cool and cloudy with a light frost but little has commenced and will be general next week.

The damage which accrued from the frost on August 15th is now becoming apparent and in some districts it will make yields lighter and grades lower.

In the Peace River Territory grain is ripening slowly as weather has been unsettled and frost has caused damage estimated at 25 per cent in districts south of the peace but no damage is noticeable north of the River.

Western cattle markets remained fairly steady this week as there was a good demand for available supplies which, during the peak of harvesting, are never exceptionally heavy. The stocker and feeder market remains strong and all good quality individuals change hands quickly. The hog market is all steady and the demand for sows is a feature of this trade.

JOINS LEAGUE STAFF

Ottawa, Aug. 31 (CP)—Robert B. Inch, Secretary of the League of Nations Society in Canada, has been appointed to the staff of the League of Nations at Geneva as a "temporary collaborator" for the duration of the coming League assembly, it was announced today. Mr. Inch leaves at once for Geneva.

A "Bargain" is Sometimes a Bargain

A GOOD MANY PEOPLE look on August as their lucky month—and we don't mean those who spend it lying on the sand and taking in salt air.

We mean those people who have formed the habit of buying things when other people aren't . . porch rugs and luggage and towels and lamps and all sorts of things, for use now and for use next season.

Of course they have learned that "bargains" are not always bargains. They know how to recognize quality and style and worth, how to find the strong points and how to avoid weaknesses. And much of their knowledge has come from the advertisements in this newspaper.

All of us follow advertising, but some people study it so thoroughly that they know exactly what they want and where to get it. They are the ones who find the real bargains. Their money buys more things and better things—in August and all through the year.

This is the sixth of a series of articles on the one dynamic highlight in the career of the modern Caesar.

The March on Rome! A dramatic interlude in Chapter, the career of Benito Mussolini reached its apex on Oct. 27, 1922, when after a near paralysis of strikes, riots and political disorders, which inter party government failed to check, his armed revolution actually began.

Like an ocean wave gathering momentum with each rise and fall until it crashes at length against a cliff-wall to fall in stand it, the Fascist movement swept on the capital.

It started, like so many other movements, in Italy. The stage had been set and all Mussolini had added his time. He had accomplished a part of his purpose. The government, laughingly describing himself as "Fascist in effect to shield the ministers from the rain of party shots.

But his ears heard the shouts of "revolution" growing louder daily. Slowly and surely he made preparations for the final blow, endeavoring to assure his followers that no great resistance to them would be possible ,when the time came.

Started on 27th

On Oct. 24, he addressed a gathering of Blackshirts at Naples.

"It is a question of months, or of days, perhaps only of hours," he said. "Either the present situation will be handed over to us, or we shall seize it by force on Rome."

The Congress broke up with the cry "To Rome" issuing from hundreds of throats. The march was planned to wait, perhaps a week. But the aggressive spirit could not be restrained, and on the evening of the 27th he was seen attending the theatre in Milan, an aide brought him a telephone message. All Commander Blackshirts, anticipating his plans, had seized the telephone and telegraph lines and the public offices. The march had started.

Mussolini hastened to the offices of Popolo. From the cellars were dragged out printing presses and material withdrawn, prepared in secret for some days past for placarding all over Italy. They were distributed to the people—mailed on telegraph poles and pasted on cafe walls.

Came From Three Sources

The next day, Fascio announced that a great part of northern Italy was already in the hands of the Fascisti. From three strategic points, Blackshirts armies were sent on toward Rome, one from Milan, one from Perugia and one from Leghorn, three divisions—Rome of armed, enthusiastic fighters. Under the command of Civitavecchia, else from Perugia to Monterotondo, they began to march the Padman valley along the coast of the Adriatic from Rimini to Ancona and Castelfidardo.

Facta, then prime minister, urged armed measures and declared martial decree declaring Italy in a state of siege. Orders for mobilization were issued to sign R. He saw the hopelessness of combating a superior force and calling up 200,000 armed men on a moment's notice.

During the night of Oct. 28, the government, sensing the certainty of defeat, summoned the Chief of Mussolini's army rallied only wood from the hills to converge with the Fascisti forces, and began offered concessions. Mussolini refused them all. To the offered he brought the message from Premier Salandra that he was dismissed. Mussolini said:

"I will him I will not come to power to discuss and compromise. Unless I am given an absolute mandate for a government exclusively my own ministry—I will not leave Milan, and I shall myself at the head of the legions."

King Calls Bluff

Throughout that night, the "decisive" hour of the 28th at which held them from Rome, Mussolini had given the government a period of two days to comply. At 10 a.m. Oct. 28, General Cittadini, aide-de-camp of the King, arrived at Milan and on the telephone. Half an hour later a long telegram from Facta—official confirmation of a request from the king that he go to Rome to form a ministry.

Mussolini greeted the summons characteristically. Over the steps of a flower-decked special train prepared to take him to the capital, he said:

"To-morrow Italy will not have a ministry—she will have a real government."

It had at least a ministry. Days before, Mussolini had prepared his cabinet, drawing his aides from the ranks of men he thought would serve Italy, regardless of party.

The moment he had his first government completed, Mussolini issued orders for the return of his Blackshirt legions to their posts in the provinces within 24 hours. There were 40,000 who had come to Rome, and 20,000 men prepared to celebrate in fitting fashion their victory of their movement and their leader.

Fascism Spoiled Up

Many had been in the Eternal City for the first time in their lives. Many had thought they would be selected to remain by the side of Il Duce. All were doomed to disappointment. Thirty special trains took them back to where they came from—to aid in organizing and securing order in a Fascist regime, a final utilitarian, prepared in secret for some days past for placarding all over Italy. They were distributed to the people—mailed on telegraph poles and pasted on cafe walls.

Weddings

WILSON—STOKES

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Stokes, Deseronto, a very pretty late summer wedding took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon when their daughter, Marion Florence, became the bride of Mr. John Edward Wilson, of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson of Consecon. Rev. W. J. Wallace of St. Andrew's Church officiated.

Colorful flowers decorated the charming rooms. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a graceful frock of navy sheer wool and lace, with navy hat and accessories. The young couple were unattended.

Wedding music was served following the ceremony. Mrs. Stokes, mother of the bride, wore navy lace and Mrs. Wilson, mother of the groom was attired in black georgette with corsage of velvet trimmings and lace.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left on a motor trip to Collingwood and will spend the next two weeks camping. The bride travelled in a suede of wool brown silk with matching hat and accessories. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

RICHEL—HOARE

St. Andrew's church, beautifully decorated with Autumn flowers, was the scene of an interesting wedding this morning at eleven-thirty o'clock when Dorothy Margaret, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hoare became the bride of Mr. John Richel, Calgary, son of Mr. J. J. Richel and the late Mrs. Richel of The Maples, Bridlewood. Rev. T. Walker officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. W. D. Hutchinson of Montreal, wore a lovely gown of white net over satin. Her lace veil was a family heirloom and had been worn by her aunt, Mrs. W. J. McCutcheon, Montreal, at her wedding. She carried a shower bouquet of roses.

Miss Rita Stevens was bridesmaid and wore a charming gown of pink organdy with touches of blue, and miss hat. Her flowers were pink roses and blue bachelor buttons.

Mr. Bernard Richel acted as groomsman for his brother. Wedding music was played by Mrs. R. A. Wilson, sister of the bride.

At the ceremony's wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, 183 Charles Street.

The bride and groom left later to spend their honeymoon at a summer resort near Toronto, the bride choosing for travelling a navy blue chiffon frock with red and white accessories.

Upon their return they will reside at Calgary.

Library Corner

John Milton, the man, is newly revealed by Rose Macaulay, in her study "Milton". She pictures the poet as the magnificent and cultured idealist, in a world with which he was never in touch. His genius, although largely emphasized on the conflict and changes in the literary world, it is the conflict in political and religious thought which interested him, and caused distress. To understand Milton, she suggests, one must understand Milton's times. She thinks scarcely much of the rabid in Milton from youth as "underground, bold, arrogant and egotistic". This opinion, she maintains, prevented him from becoming a poet of the heart. "His tremendous imagination penetrates chaos and the sphere, but never the human soul." The New York Times reviewer predicts that "this little book should take its place among the larger works on Milton."

Mary Brinizer, a Russian war nurse, tells of her life at the front with her husband a Russian surgeon, and in Leningrad under the Soviets, in her book "One Woman's Story." Ever fearful of being "liquidated" with other remnants of the "old regime", she stayed on in Soviet Russia. The story of her life there, her comparisons of the 'old' and the 'new', offer many new angles of the Bolshevik rule.

The author of "Life Begins at Forty" believes that the one remaining obstacle to present day happiness is physiological. His book "The Secret of Happiness", Walter B. Pitkin, Professor of Journalism at Columbia University, has diagnosed, in this book, many failures and many successes among people striving for happiness. These "causes"—some of whom he names and who are well-known figures in world-affairs are divided into groups: the Biased, Anoured, Happy-mores or less, Dwellers in Limbo and the Unhappy. Professor Pitkin does not attempt to fathom fully the secret of happiness but calls his book "the first brief chapter of the longest story that will ever be told."

The story of a group of men who struggled to maintain and increase the North American food supply, is told in his usual vivid style, by Paul de Kruif in "Hunger Fighters". "There is no true start to the history of hunger-fighter", the author asserts. "Theirs is an earthly science born ten thousand years before there was such a word as science, beginning in the completely dark days when men first found nature by their wits". The men of whom he writes differ only from the average farmer in that they have kept written records of their work and discoveries. They have made wheat grow on millions of acres where failure was expected, they have saved animals from attacks of serious diseases, they have caused unheard-of yields of corn to rise from ill-favored varieties of maize. It has been said that all great enterprises are based on work that has been done by individuals whose past is lost in oblivion. Paul de Kruif has rescued many individuals from such a fate in his book "Microbe Hunters"—"Men Against Death" and "Hunger Fighters".

"The Gardener's How Book", is a volume giving the authoritative advice of a garden expert, Mr. Cheals C. Sherlock for five years Editor of "Better Homes and Gardens", has lectured widely on gardening and given many radio talks in this way he came in contact with thousands of people trying to solve problems. Mr. Sherlock has made an attempt to set down, in concentrated reference form, the information that he has been asked. His has covered the whole field of garden problems, with many useful color and planting charts.

A book recently appeared in the field of building ventilation is presented in "Fresh Air in Air Conditioning" by A. C. Mellish. The author has treated the subject authoritatively. He has been interested to design an air conditioning plant, using the equipment available.K.G.

ST. JOHN'S GUILD

On Monday evening a very pleasant and unusual programme was sponsored by the Woman's Guild of St. John's Anglican Church at Frankford Avenue, Belleville, giving Rev. Newlyn Thomphreys a genuine surprise with a miscellaneous shower that had been quietly arranged by the members of the Guild, as he is leaving shortly to take up the church at the Plevna appointments and will be keeping bachelor's hall there.

Mr. Gladstone Manore invited Rev. Humphreys to come to the front of the hall and in a few well chosen words, congratulated him, and declared the object of the meeting, and ushered him to the well-filled and gaily decorated table, telling him it was the custom at each shower the gifts were always unwrapped. And so the fun began and thoroughly enjoyed as the last gift was placed on the table. Rev. Humphrey thanked them for their kindness in helping him in his new home in a generous and thoughtful way and trusted he would become efficient to them.

Congratulations are surely due the ladies on their thoughtfulness in extending that service to one who has been in their midst past two months. Following a social half hour, lunch was served and much enjoyed.

Miss Roberda Wallbridge is spending the week-end with her cousin, Miss D. Jones at Fair Haven Cottage.

Miss Eleanor Gilmour was a supper guest Thursday evening of Miss Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone Manore, the Misses Beatrice and Edith Wallbridge were callers at Rathern-ville on Wednesday evening.

A number from here attended Belleville Fair and enjoyed very much the great number of fine exhibits.

Mystery Child Resembles Lindbergh Baby?

On the LEFT is a picture of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., first-born son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, the baby whose kidnapping on the night of March 1, 1932, brought sorrow to the world. On the RIGHT is the photograph of a baby boy who bears a striking resemblance to the unfortunate Lindbergh child. Who is this baby? Two weeks after the kidnapping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., it has been learned a child bearing a striking resemblance to the Lindbergh baby, was placed for adoption on Long Island. So great was the resemblance and so mysterious were the circumstances attendant on the uncertain origins of the child that was farmed out, that neighbors reported the appearance of this child to the New York authorities.

Mr. Jarrell was a sailor and years ago was a captain on the Bay of Quinte boats. He retired. He had been ill in hospital since April.

Mary Pickford and Lasky Join Forces

By RELMAN MORIN

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 31 (AP)—The happy ending of a story that started with a "wrong guess" just twenty years ago this month was celebrated today in the reunion of Mary Pickford and Jesse Lasky as producing team.

The two announced the formation of their new company last night.

In the summer of 1915, their first association began. Lasky was their vice-president of the old Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Mary Pickford, golden-curled, had not yet become "America's Sweetheart."

"I picked a story for her called 'Less Than the Dust,'" he said.

The picture was a colossal failure.

Bangs Attractive to Some Types

By HELEN FOLLETT

Bangs belong by rights to the girl with the short forehead, says Vogue. They are placed neatly, and require considerable attention in the summer season to look their best. But nothing matters in the cause of beauty. Look at the girls who get their bangs curls every night. Their heads are as comfortable as if they are resting on monkey wrenches. One can get a laugh out of that.

Forming a cross line the forehead fringe is no help to the full moon pink, makes the lower part of the face look broader and the nose look shorter. Some pair off her head appearance when there is a centre parting, but draw every smoothly and close to the head.

Bangs are the solution when the forward hair line is not attractive. It goes scooting toward, leaving bobbing pins on either side. The manner of their arrangement is varied. They can be brushed, curled, cut in a dark, twirled into beat catchers, or cut wide and made into shapes to suit and curl after the "Little Women" mode.

Nail polish in nasturtium shades is popular now. It is said to match up and hands that have been gardening or getting toasted to a tawny brown.

When ordering groceries, Madame Housekeeper, don't forget lettuce, spinach, asparagus water cress and leeks. These vegetables are rich in valuable mineral salts that have a vitalizing effect upon the blood. Also they add greatly to the complexion of healthy coloring.

The farther eyebrows are away from the eyes, the more youthful it is that vacant facial expression. There has been no more diverting of eyebrows going on. The inner end should be on a line with the inner corner of the eye.

Like every other beauty fad, tweezing eyebrows down to a faint line has had its day. In its day, the fashionable lady displays eye lampbearings that are beautifully outlined, that are not over heavy, but precisely what suits her features.

SWIM POSTPONED

Toronto, Aug. 31—(CP)— Finding Lake Ontario still too cold, Canadian National Exhibition officials today again postponed the five-mile lake registered 57 degree and race conditions call for a minimum temperature of 60.

TORONTO MINING CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 31 (CP)—Trading was dull for a Saturday session on Toronto mining market with a few issues from each group holding in the trade.

Top point was Lake Lamont, Beaver and White Eagle, each active in the silvers at higher prices, and Sylvanite Gold, also active issue of the golds. Sylvanite touched 2c on the up side and the average close of the base metals Ventnor and Beaver Metals Corporation showed a fractional gain.

Senior golds were again slow and Dominion Gold price adjustment was a loss of 35 cents for Wright Hargreaves.

Trade was slow in the oil stocks. Texas Gulf Sulphur was the only issue up 3 and Ajax at 51 was steady. Chemical Research dropped 2 cents to 93.

TORONTO STOCKS—Close

Toronto, Aug. 31—Traders held aloof from buying in industrials during the week today and business dwindled to around 8,000 shares. Trade was light in the golds and base metals.

Base metals closed mixed with Dominion Steel up a fraction. Gains elsewhere included Nickel and Tobacco and a few Bonanzas.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—The stock market today moved listlessly through the last session of the month but showed signs of a firmer undertone. Utilities and specialties lifted their heads from the long spell of inactivity.

Canadian Pacific and Imperial Oil (Canada) led about even among Dominion stocks. On the Curb, Hiram Walker got up 1¼ points, Standard Oil shares lagged a trifle. Government 4s were fractionally higher.

Commercial funds held firm and changed at 99 1-3 cents.

Shares of Coca and Columbia Pictures were run up about 2 points each. Other gainers of fractions to around a point included Paramount pictures, International Harvester, Du Pont, U. S. Steel, Allied Chemical, Columbia Gas, Standard Oil, American Water Works, Socony Vacuum, Schenley, Du Pont, Montgomery Ward, American Can, Ferro-Tie Paso, Briggs Mfg. Santa Fe and N.Y. Central.

Edged a shade in either direction.

HOGS

Toronto, Aug. 31 (CP)—Steadiness prevailed on bacon hog prices from reporting market points today at $8.50 at Chatham and Peterboro, $8.00 at Hull, Brockville and Kitchener and $7.90 at Stratford. Weights brought $8.50.

COMMERCIAL BRIEFS

A useful export outlet for Canadian dressed poultry has been opened up in Great Britain, Trade officials are having gone forward during the first week of August.

Canadian consignments of both barley and rye during the first six months of 1935 were each more than double those of the corresponding period of 1934.

Canada, the United Kingdom, France, Germany and Austria are the principal importers of fruit. Canada does not require to import fruit, but the average annual value of ports or other fruits into Canada from 1926 to 1930 included 74,000 tons of bananas, 73,000 tons of oranges, 30,000 tons of dried grapes, 11,000 tons of lemons, 8,000 tons of figs and 8,000 tons of pears.

From January to June, 1935, Canada exported 18,139,440 pounds of wheat flour, 3,722,981 pounds of which went to the United Kingdom, 532,000 pounds to British West Africa, 22,895 pounds to British West Indies and 112,000 pounds to Belgium, and 7,112 pounds to other foreign countries.

The bulk of the international trade in canned fruits is in the hands of three countries, the United States, British Malaya and Australia, but increasing quantities are coming from Canada and South Africa.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Cranford by Plaunell Services.

The market has been a discriminatory affair for some months as a glance through the list indicates that some issue have entirely failed to attract a number of the uncertainties overhanging the market. Here should be out of the way within the next two months or so after which stocks as a group, should be ready to lead.

Resistance is accomplishing in the manner suggested by Jesse Livermore's "Don't-like-the-way the market acts" On the other hand, the slight attempt this as an indication that the reaction was nearing an end. It should be noted, however, that over 90 per cent of the "bears" on the books are those of small brokerage accounts in most instances bear this out.

Bank clearings and Dock Canadian Dredge and Dock, it is reported, has operated on much more active basis this year to date, and with a sufficient volume of business on the books to keep the plant operating close to capacity for the balance of the year. Statement of next prospects appear distinctly bright. There is a move afoot definite (notice) for further work accruing before the end of the current year.

CARDS' MARGIN ONLY ONE GAME OVER GIANTS

Pittsburgh Defeats Hallahan But Lloyd Waner Is Hurt

TIGERS LOSE GROUND

Browns Put on Rally After Trailing by Five Runs

It hardly seems possible that Pittsburgh Pirates will win or even threaten the National League pennant in their belated rush but their effort to get into the thick of the struggle already has made things hot for two of the three contenders and the third is next in line.

In the course of rolling up a nine-game winning streak and placing themselves only six games behind the lead, the Buccaneers have knocked off the Giants three times in a row and the league leading Cardinals twice. Today they come up against the third-place Cubs in another short series that may cause a disturbance in the standings.

When they trimmed New York the Pirates put the Giants as far as 2½ games behind the leaders. Then they made up for that against the Cards, shaving their lead to a single game with a 4-3 trouncing yesterday. The Cubs, who venture into Pittsburgh with a record of 13 victories in 18 games with the Buccos, are only a game and a half behind the Cards.

Again First On Halladay.

Following up Thursday's rout of Dizzy Dean, the Pirates opened first on Wild William Hallahan in the first inning, when Lloyd Waner scored a run but injured his ankle going home and put himself out of action for a week or more. They needed the six scrub southpaw with three runs in the third, after the Cards had tied it up, and finished with a four-run outburst against Phil Collins in the eighth.

A couple of surprising rallies by the last-place, St. Louis Browns cost Detroit Tigers, American American League leaders, all the ground they had gained the day before but a 2-7 defeat left the Tigers still nine games in the van.

Trailing 5-1 after three innings, due largely to the wildness of Sugar Cain and Jim Weaver, who each began pounding Tommy Bridges and wrested the count in the sixth when Hartnett Clift hit a homed. Elon Hogsett, who relieved Bridges, gave only one hit that count but the ball game. He crammed the cor-ners with two walks and a wild throw in the eighth and a fly and Ray Pepper's single brought in two runs. Swoboda got one back in the ninth but the Browns bore down and out came a Tiger rally.

Only two other major league games were scheduled as the clubs traveled toward their week-end engagements but rain stopped both the Cleveland-Chicago encounter and the Red Sox-Athletics meeting.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Weather permitting the Belleville Stewart-Warners and the Peterboro Sea Horses pry off the play-off lid of the C.O.B.I. today in the Ambitious City, but the game the fans have been waiting for so long will not be played until next Wednesday afternoon at Exhibition Park. The reason when the second game of the league play-offs gets under way at the local Exhibition Park. The Radios have been idle for over two weeks, not having played the least resemblance of baseball since August 18 last. There's one thing certain, the local lay-off will prove one of two things, either the lay-off was needed by the Radios, that is if they win, but if they lose—well, then the lay-off will naturally have been too long and attributed the paramount cause for any defeat of the Radios. As say rain the Millsmen are in a tough spot today and only by the concerted efforts of the entire team can they expect to attain the end they today are in Peterboro to conclude. Our guess is that Williams and Kitchen will be the starting pitchers.

Our third and last choice for the proposed all-star game, to be played at the conclusion of the league play-offs and versus the league champions, is providing the Belleville Exhibition Park management. Previous to this selection we published our choice of Peterboro or Kingston men. At any rate it's Knotty Lee's charge on the boat-fac, here's our choice of an all-star team: Pitchers, Jack Williams, Belleville; Red Chaney, Kingston, and Wylie, Oshawa; catcher, Ross, Belleville, spare, Arnold, Kingston; first base, Wallace, Oshawa; second base, Belleville, Clark, Belleville; short stop, Ford, Belleville; left field, Scrutton, Kingston; right field, Matthews, Oshawa; spares, Osborne, infield, and Hurst, outfield. This selection may not meet with the hundred per cent approval from Oshawa or Peterboro, but it's still a good enough team to give the league winners a merry chase to the wire.

Today question—There are runners on second and third, with one out. Batter flies out to left field. Runner holds third until ball is caught and then scores. Runner on second, however, thinking ball will not be caught, does not return to the bag, but scores. He is doubled off second. Does run scored by runner who had been on third count? H. H. M. wants to know.

Run counts because action of runner on second does not affect status of runner on third, who proceeded in proper manner under rules. If third out had been made on a force, run would not count.

Negotiations have been copped to have the grunt and groan-grapplers return to the Belleville Arena the next month. Nothing authentic has been meted out in the matter as yet, but the wrestlers are comin' to town. Incidentally a new wrinkle is being tried at the Belleville Arena starting tonight, namely the arena has been turned into an up-to-date and modern dancing pavilion. A spacious polished floor has been placed in position and with the orchestra elevated, the acoustics are all that can be desired, audibility being excellent. The arena dance floor is gayly lighted with colored lights, while uniformed young lady attendants will look after the welfare of the patrons. Dancing will continue nightly, and will in no way interfere with the wrestling which will be staged at the south end of the arena this fall.

Two outstanding sporting events are on the calendar—to Belleville on Labor Day, the annual Scotch doubles at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club and the mammoth aquatic and athletic meet to be staged at Victoria Park by the Belleville Yachting and Athletic Club. For the first time in many years power boat racing will be staged in local waters, the class already being well filled with craft from Napanee, Picton and other Bay of Quinte ports. Labor Day promises the termination of pent sailing races and the year's awards being announced in each class.

Jupiter Pluvius stepped in and rudely interfered with the last day's racing at the Belleville Fair, rain falling sufficiently long to cancel both classes to have been raced yesterday. Naturally this proved a hard blow to the horsemen as some real classy harness horses had entered the fast 2.14 class. The Belleville Fair is over for another year and except the fact that some of the attractions were not exactly as good as anticipated, the exhibits of live-stock, fruits, vegetables, poultry and manufactured merchandise surpassed anything ever presented previously in Belleville along these lines. Already plans are under way to further elevate the Belleville Fair for 1936.

"Dopey", the office boy, still thinks that football coaches have wheels.

TORONTO AND BISONS SPLIT

Both Games Are Won by The Shutout Route

The fifth-place Toronto Maple Leafs, fighting desperately for a place in the final division, may have a lot to do with deciding the ultimate pennant winner in the International League.

Last night they spilt a double header with the second place Buffalo Bisons, taking the first twilight game 1-0, and dropping the night contest 3-0. The even split did neither the Bisons nor the Leafs any good.

The Leafs are one game to the rear of the fourth place Baltimore Orioles but have the opportunity of making up ground on the Orioles. They have won three less games than the Birds, but what is more important at this stage of the campaign is that they have lost one less.

The Bisons finish up with the Leafs today while the league leading Montreal Royals are meeting Rochester Red Wings, and then to go to Montreal to meet the leaders in a five game "croche" series. The lead is two full games behind the Royals. Following that series — should the Bisons still be in double-the Bisons have the edge. They face a six game series with the seventh place Rochester Red Wings while the Royals are batting it out in a six game series with the Leafs.

Whitey Ritcher, star Toronto hurler, was the only 1935 win of the season as he limited the Bisons to five hits in the opener. Fritz Ostermueller, Buffalo hurler, lost the Leafs to the same number of hits but two of them, a double by Jimmy Shevlin and a single by Lee Handley, sent the only run of the game across the plate in the fourth inning.

Big Bob Kline came to the rescue of the Bisons in the second game, stopping the Leafs with five hits and striking out seven.

GENE KUNES IS WELL IN FRONT

Grip On Canadian Open Golf Title Quite Firm

Summerlea, Montreal, Aug. 31 (CP)—The general idea among 65 or more of North America's greatest professionals here today was to regard young Gene Kunes of Pennsylvania whose grip on the Canadian Open Golf Championship was as firm as any the field wanted to see.—Gene had six strokes on his closest challengers with 36 holes to go.

The idea was that Kunes who never has won a major tournament might explode after tying two rounds of 76 and 68, that placed him well in front of the field.

The old story about inexperienced youngsters getting nerve trouble on the stretch won't hold with Kunes, a confident 26-year-old, who has battled the big fellows without success for three years.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Paul Waner, Pirates—Clouted two triples and two singles in victory over Cardinals, scoring two runs and batting in four.

Sam West, Browns—Drove in two runs against Tigers, one out of the tying counter in ninth with shoe-string catch.

NATIONS WHO UNDERSTAND

When representatives of two nations who share the North American Continent, stood in the historic fortress of Old Quebec, whose name is as old as Canada's story, there was a symbol to all the world of happiness in peace for two peoples on the Continent. President Roosevelt of the United States was a guest of Lord Tweedsmuir and there met Prime Minister King, Premier Godbout of Quebec and the Mayor of the city of Quebec as well as many Canadians.

The Viceroy said that "through thinking the same purposes, the Republic and the British Commonwealth might help to restore the shaken liberties of mankind." Prime Minister King in his greeting spoke of "the beauty and the blessings of peace."

One of the signs of that close relationship of the Canadian and United States peoples is that the word "foreigner" does not apply to either, said the President. That says a great deal in little.

Difficulties which are "enormountable" are unthinkable as far as the relations between the United States and Canada are concerned. For there is absolute trust because the sense of security has not been shaken in a century and a quarter.

In such a ceremony, which culminated as the result of a friendly holiday visit the world has an object lesson of the folly of misunderstandings and international rivalries. Prime Minister King spoke truth when he referred to fact that "the place of armament on land and water has been taken by international parks and bridges, expressive not of fear, suspicion, or hate, but of international peace friendship and goodwill." That is what the United States and the British Commonwealth hope to see in a sorely torn world which is arming and overarming when all nations in humanoverarming when all nations in humanity". It is sad to contemplate that while this is the fact which stares every nation in the face, wars are not yet an impossibility. In Mr. King's words "What to the United States and Canada has become the priceless possession of this continent, we, like you, wish to see a part of the common heritage of mankind."

Unfortunately not all races have had the same development which would make these ideals understood. Liberty such as we enjoy, diverse views, are ready to war for ideals which to the British race are long since discarded as outworn in a world which is now one, and that is what causes the difficulties of this age. Some of them know not what prices treasure our peoples who spring from similar roots possess.

This meeting at Quebec fittingly in a New World exhibited what is best in other form and in other words was shown at Vimy Ridge on Sunday this week—the growth of friendship and tradition for cooperation and peace and understanding. At the dedication on Vimy Ridge, the world saw pilgrims from another continent who had crossed the seas, mingling with the people of a land, France, whom they had helped to defend in her hour of danger. Here was a sign of brotherhood. And Friday's scene brought again leaders of different governments and peoples together, in a French-Canadian city, where the Anglo-Saxon and the French spirit of co-operation was again exemplified.

It was fitting that it was at the site of the treaty fortress of the North, the Gibraltar of the new world, where Englishmen and Colonists and French Canadians fell in strife in the middle years of the eighteenth century and where later English-speaking and French-speaking Canada struggled with the American States for mastery that these peaceful felicitations should be passed from one to another. In place of battles has come the understanding and in that peaceful understanding the peoples are happy.

This Continent and the British Commonwealth in other parts of the world will not forget this day.

BANK DEPOSITS GROW

Deposits in the mutual saving banks of the United States have crossed the ten billion dollar mark, which is near the highest on record. New accounts have risen rapidly for the first six months of this year to create a new high in the total of depositors. The total in all banks, commercial as well as savings banks is forty-nine billions of dollars. It is pointed out by one critic that a good deal of the ground lost through the depression has been regained.

In the pre-depression year 1929 total deposits in banks in the United States amounted to $54,000,000,000, at which point they remained until the second half of 1931 when they began to decline. The low point of deposits was reached in midsummer 1933 with $38,000,000,000 deposits—a deflation of sixteen billions.

Business has felt the stimulating effect of these deposits for the money which counts in business is that which is on deposit and which can be drawn upon by cheques to pay for goods and services.

Bank failures are the lowest in the neighboring county for years. Not a member of the Federal reserve system has been forced to suspend and the number of non-member banks failing is only 26 as compared with 365 failures of member and non-member banks which took place in the prosperous period of the first half of 1929 before the depression began.

Thrift is not a lost art in the United States or in Canada as can be seen in the heroic manner in which so many have set tables financially in order.

TWIN OAKS OF WAYSIDE INN

A thousand years you've held your ground
As side by side you grew,
Your branches clasping hands above,
Your roots entwined below.

While yet no white man ever saw
Your wind-vexed stalwart arms,
The redskin's tocsin neath your branch
Had sounded war's alarms.

For in your shade brave warriors sat
Here on their ancient trail,
While in their councils oft was heard
Some young blood's gruesome tale.

The breeze that blew from Plymouth Bay
Caressed your topmost leaf
And whispered stories of the times
When Samoset was chief.

Then later when Longfellow knew
The charms of Wayside Inn
Your epic forms still caught and held
Some mystic voice for him

And now today your time-knarred trunks,
Your limbs scarred by the storm,
Are symbols of abiding strength
Where struggling is the norm.

VISITORS FROM THE LAND OF UNCLE SAM HAVE SOME QUEER EXPERIENCES IN the land of Jack Canuck. For one thing they are accustomed to travelling faster than the leisurely Canadians and in their hurry frequently come a cropper more or less expensive in manuna and bodily comforts. A woman driver collected a hydro pole on Murney Hill Thursday afternoon to add to her souvenirs and a testimonial from her husband which, perhaps, she did not appreciate. She was driving her car westward and trying to read the road signs, an extremely difficult task as the signs on Murney Hill seem to have been placed by a committee to see how the twisted her neck so far that it must have stalled and the car swung off the road across a lawn and into the hydro pole which gracefully, or otherwise gave way for the car but slowed it up sufficiently for the occupants to reach terra firma. Said the husband, "I've been living with that woman for twenty years and as a general rule let her have her own way, but by jing, this is the last time she'll chauffeur for me." After settling for the hydro pole and repairs for the car the couple proceeded on their way with the husband driving. Other motorists say that the highway signs on Murney Hill are very confusing and many visitors get sidetracked and roam around sidestreets until someone puts them back on the highway. Why not reroute the highway past the fair grounds, bowling green and Front Street, via upper bridge.

RAMORE GOLD AREA ON Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway is attracting considerable public interest and shafts are being sunk on promising mining properties. This recalls the fact that about twenty years ago two prospectors spent considerable time looking for pay ore in this district and holed up for the winter in a shack. They failed to find anything promising and quarrelled, resulting in the death of one from a rifle bullet. Tried at North May for murder of his pal the accused prospector was convicted and hanged.

THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA were in more than four full of paper money which had little value when printed and less when the war of Secession was over and the slaves were freed and the south prostrate and bankrupt. However, Confederate money is still in existence in large quantities with promises to pay by officers of the late Confederacy long since gone hence and as extinct as the government they proposed to erect. Rackateers carry this money around and frequently find folks who do not know the war is over, apparently, and take the bills at their face value. That's what it costs to neglect acquiring a liberal education. Even a fair ability to read the newspapers would protect people from such an obvious graft.

50 YEARS AGO

Aug. 1st, 1886

Two games of baseball were played in the city yesterday. The second nine of the I.L.I.'s played the Red Rose nine on the hospital lot before a large crowd of spectators. The score was 26 to 15 in favor of the I.L.I. team. A team from Brown's foundry played a nine from Walker's foundry on the vacant lot near the stove foundry. Walker's men were victorious by 13 runs. The score was 27 to 14.

A horse attached to a buggy and owned by Cronk's livery became frightened on Front street yesterday afternoon and ran away. It turned into George St. and ran to Dundas Street where it collided with the fence in front of the McAnnany property. The animal was badly injured, a leg being broken, and Dr. Foster shot it. The horse was valued at $150.00. The same horse ran away with the same persons last winter and left them in the snow in front of the Windsor Hotel on West Bridge Street.

'IRON SECOND' HOLDS REUNION

25 Veterans From This District Join Comrades at Ottawa

Red berets will perch at rakish angles on graying heads, medals will glisten from coat lapels, and the "Red Patch" will again stand pin to scarlet prominence when the veterans of the "Iron Second" Battalion of the First Division C. E. F. holds its annual reunion in Ottawa on Saturday and Sunday.

Twenty five Belleville ex-members of the famous fighting unit boarded the train here at 7:30 this morning enroute for the Capital City where they will meet again the comrade, who stood shoulder to shoulder with them in the dark days of 1914-18.

Down in Bytown the "Red Patch" lads will be royally entertained by the Governor-General's Bodyguards during their sojourn, and on Saturday night will be the guests at an elaborate banquet at the Chateau Laurier where the Mayor of Ottawa and other distinguished guests will speak.

The "Iron Second" will be taken on a city tour and will visit the famous Experimental Farm. Sunday morning, the battalion will attend a church parade following which they will lay a wreath on the Altar of Remembrance in Memorial Tower.

GREAT BENEFIT TO THIS CITY

Belleville Metal and Waste Co. Render Service That is Unusual

Belleville Metal and Waste Co. is a strictly up-to-date concern, which renders a real service to this city in salvaging of scrap materials. Such a business plays an important part in the progress of the community. Every community is faced with the question of such grades of merchandise as scrap iron, metals, etc., or there would be a much less iron and waste materials. This prominent establishment very ably salvages this waste, handling iron and Waste Co. is equipped with all modern machinery and appliances for the handling of continuous tonnage anywhere.

The satisfaction they have given is responsible for the outstanding success of this firm.

"The management wishes to announce to the public generally that they have a very comprehensive stock of iron pipe, angle iron, channels and T bars, which scrap material may be purchased at a very nominal price.

All waste materials bought by them is melted in their open hearth and space alotted in their yards. They pay the highest prices for all scrap metals and will gladly quote prices upon request, upon materials. They also handle cast iron, malleable and sheet iron, brass, etc. Through the efforts of this firm much waste materials that have been lying around useless worthless are transferred into cash, and through them it is again put into useful material for the reproduction of its qualities.

Quite obviously, Belleville Metal and Waste Co., which is owned and operated by Mr. Sam Mollard, acts as a two-fold benefit to the community and the management is to be highly commended for their efficient business methods and the service they render. The efficiency completeness this concern operates a credit to the community, which is managed by Mr. Mollader, Jr., Do you know of waste materials in your premises demand?

TROPICAL STORM CLAIMS 5 LIVES

Blows Itself Out in Southern Alabama Today

Valparaiso, Fla., Aug. 1 (AP)—A tropical storm charged with at least five deaths blew itself out in Southern Alabama today.

The Red Cross reported last night the tug Minnie Lee sank in Choctawhatchee Bay and that the crew of five was rescued.

Lack of communication with other vessels gave rise to fears the death toll might be even larger.

Coast guardsmen searched still tumbling Gulf waters for the fishing schooner Miss Gulf unreported since she left Tampa July 25 for Dry Tortugas. The Sea Gull also had left Pensacola.

The auxiliary schooner Ketchum with Commander Frank Muldoon, coast guard district commander, aboard, was off the northwest Florida coast when the hurricane hit yesterday and was unreported today.

A number of Florida communities found the damages relatively light in view of the hurricane's force. The State Road Department estimated road damage at $10,000 to $15,000. Many dwellings were leveled, but their occupants had sought safe places.

Mechanized Transportation Now Used by Gypsy Bands

Mechanized transportation while facilitating travel between various points, contributing to this age of speed, and being a prime factor in the progress of fair time and labor-saving devices, has at least robbed one method of travel of its color and glamor.

The last evening a convoy of decrepit cars of pre-war vintage, of all colors and sizes, rattled, rumbled and belched their way through city streets. At the wheel of each dilapidated conveyance sat a swarthy son of Romany. Beside him, or atop dark recesses in the car, strips of black hair dangling from beneath gaily colored red and yellow bandannas which served as a head-dress. The rear seats of some of the cars were packed with dismantled tents, pots, dirty looking blankets, were strapped to running boards and rear ends of the cars. Dishes and pots rattled a tinny fanfare from the south end of a delapidated touring car.

In several of the cars, groups of dusky, laughing-eyed children peered. Mothers, with babies in arms, tossing hair out of their eyes as the cars swept along.

A group of handsome teen-age youths and maidens occupied another car, the clothing of petticoat dimensions swung from the cars windows, skirts stained purple, red, yellow and green blouses or dresses worn in sharp contrast to the sombre khaki shirts of the youths.

"Gee, ma, aint they gypsies?" excitedly exclaimed a small boy to his mother as the motor cavalcade swung by.

The inherent fear of wandering gypsy tribes evidenced itself in the mother as she grasped her son and drew him to her.

"Yes, son, they are" she replied, and she was right. The gypsies were on the move, but shorn of the color which characterized the movements of these nomads of the country decades ago.

Gone were the numerous horses, which featured their trading activities, gone were the colorful broken down cart and covered wagon, but they still retain their glamour if if unkempt appearance and mode of dress. The bright light still burns in Romany eyes and the gypsy violins still wail their mournful tunes beside evening camp fires.

But the pungent smell of horses and cattle has been replaced by the modern odor of gasoline; the gypsy youth smote at least part of the time to the "innards" of a motor car, while the aged members of the tribe no longer wrangle over the difference between horse-trades, but wonder how many miles their gasoline "steeds" can wrest from a gallon of the inflammable fluid.

NEW CONCEPTION OF PEACE SEEN IN BORDER AMITY

Bonds of Century-old Peace Given New Strength at Quebec

U. S. FLAG ON CITADEL

All Honors Paid Ruler of Another Land Shown Roosevelt

By JOHN LEBLANC

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 1 (CP)—Canadians welcomed a new conception of peace with their neighbor republic to the south as President Franklin D. Roosevelt travelled homeward at the end of the first visit a United States President ever paid a Canadian Governor-General.

The bonds of century-old peace uniting the two nations were given new strength yesterday when the president visited Lord Tweedsmuir in this historic city.

Both called for continued amity and, in speeches that carried thru both nations, they held up the peace between the United States and Canada as an example and inspiration for the world.

When the day of meeting was over the President and his party embarked by special train for New Brunswick and Mr. Roosevelt's vacation, most of it spent cruising thru the Canadian islands, was actual vacation.

He was to stop off in Vermont, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts for flood control conferences before going to Hyde Park, N.Y.

In Quebec, an official presidential visit for the first time since Warren G. Harding touched Canadian soil on the trip that ended in death, the visiting chief executive had been accorded all the honors due a ruler of another country.

Guns from the old citadel, Quebec's bulwark against invasion in years gone by, boomed a royal salute across the St. Lawrence River. The United States flag flew from the citadel for the first time in history. Full-dress militiamen formed a guard of honor and top-hatted statesmen were on hand.

But the president did not want "all the honors customarily rendered a foreign ruler," he told the Governor General. To Prime Minister King, Lord Tweedsmuir and a crowd that welcomed him on Dufferin Terrace the president said what he wished was to be welcomed as a "good neighbor of Canada."

Tidal Project

No disclosure was made as to what the president and Canada's representatives had said to each other about the Passamaquoddy tidal power project and the St. Lawrence Seaway Treaty. Earlier in the day the president had announced he wanted to take up these affairs when he conferred with the Canadian heads at Ottawa.

Closest to his heart, perhaps, is the vast "Quoddy" development, a plan for harnessing the unleashed power in the lift and fall of the tides in Passamaquoddy bay between New Brunswick and Maine. More than $1,000,000 had been spent on it beginning when Congress shut down. Engineers supported the president Roosevelt has announced he would like Canadian co-operation on the project.

What aspects of the seaway he wanted to talk about were not divulged. That project, to provide enormous power development and stretches of the St. Lawrence River and furnish a 27-foot waterway all the length of the stream, hangs fire now awaiting the U.S. Senate has refused its ratification.

President Leaves Montreal

Montreal, Aug. 1 (CP)—President Franklin D. Roosevelt left Montreal today, headed homeward on the special train that brought him here from Quebec City where he paid Canada's Governor General, Lord Tweedsmuir, an official visit.

The president's first stop, after leaving Montreal, was to be Waterbury, Vt., where he was to inspect flood control projects. Several flood conferences were to be held in Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

SHARPSHOOTERS AT LONG BRANCH

Most of The 300 Snipers Are From Province of Ontario

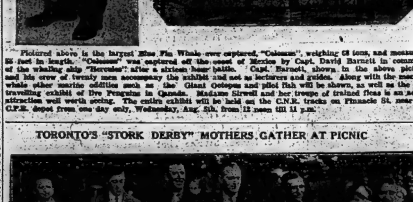
Long Branch Rifle Range, Long Branch, Ont., (Aug. 1.—(CP)— More than 300 marksmen, schooled in all shooting angles, converged here today for the annual meeting of the Dominion Rifle Association, which will open here Monday and continue for a week.

The riflemen, veterans and youngsters making their first start in big time competition, sharpened their aim in spare moments today for an attack on rows of targets and scores they hope would bring major money awards, medals and trophies. Forecasts for the start of the five-day meeting opening Monday call for clear, bright weather.

Most of the shooters are from Ontario, but about 30 or 40 westerners, travelling toward Ottawa for the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association meeting at Connaught Ranges, will compete. They are eligible for most matches, but may not win the Lieutenant Governor's gold medal, reserved for Ontario competitors.



Among the west's representatives will be Sergt. Maj. Thomas Innisfail, "King" of Alberta shots. Lt. M. Miller, Winnipeg, and Lieut. D. A. Molecy of Vancouver.

GIANT WHALE AND ITS CAPTOR

Pictured above is the largest Blue Fin Whale ever captured, "Colossus", weighing 78 tons, and measuring 85 feet in length. "Colossus" was captured off the coast of Mexico by Capt. David Barnett in command of the whaling ship "Hercules" after a sixteen hour battle. Capt. Barnett, shown in the above picture, had his crew of twenty men accompany the exhibit and act as lecturers and guides. Along with the monster whale other marine oddities such as the Giant Octopus and pilot fish will be shown, as well as the only travelling exhibit of live Penguins in Canada. Madame Sirowi and her troupe of trained Seals is an added attraction well worth seeing. The entire exhibit will be held at the C.N.E. tracks on Pinnacle St. near the C.P.R. depot from one day only, Wednesday, Aug. 5th, from 12 noon till 11 p.m.

Police Power Increased.

Strict discipline inside the capital was decreed by the ministry of the interior with drastic power placed in the hands of the regular police forces. Activities of the civilian armed militia were reduced sharply.

Streams of Fascist reinforcements were reported flowing into rebel Spain north on the Guadarrama Mountains for the start of a fresh assault on the capital, gateways manned by loyalists.

The last detachment of British refugees from the capital left for Valencia last night by train.

Our navy bombarded Huesca, carrying out a difficult feat as a rebel warship had penetrated into the very harbor," Premier Jose Giri Pereira declared.

Fliers Bomb Rebels.

"Loyal fliers are also continuing intense bombing of rebels in the Guadarrama."

The cabinet leader asserted factories confiscated by the Liberal government were "all functioning normally, salaries being paid to workers with complete regularity."

"All churches are busy with republicanization of public functionaries and monday dismissals have been decreed."

The government several days ago ordered a drastic purge of governments and semi-public positions of all Fascists and suspected rebel supporters counted from their jobs.)

More than 3,000 children, most of them abandoned in religious buildings, were taken into protective custody by the Board of Children's Protection. Three hundred of the boys and girls were sent back to their families.

Madrid's stern measures came from the ministry of the interior to prevent indiscriminate searching and shooting at arrests of suspected rebels.

"No member of the militia or group of militia is authorized to effect house searches or make arrests," the ministerial order declared.

Mary Anne Marshall lifted her eyes mechanically to the clock on the tall building. One-thirty! The heavy night air hung dank and torrid over Times Square. Her mouth twisted pitifully. Three hours before she had stood on the same spot, eager eyes full of the pulsating miracle that was Broadway and Forty-second street. Her heart had been throbbing madly to the exciting beat of it all. Soon her name would blaze in lights along with Lane.

At the memory, unwanted tears overflowed her eyes. She pushed back quickly from the edge of the curb as a cruising taxi swerved sharply to avoid her stumbling figure.

The cry of a flower hawker cut through her consciousness. "Only a dollar the week-end at his home in Bannockburn.

WILLIAM ABERHART NAMES CABINET SWORN TUESDAY

Necessary to Find Two Seats For Those Going Into Government

STATEMENT ISSUED

Calgary, Aug. 31.—(CP)— Eight men who never sat around a cabinet table before will join the first Social Credit Administration in the world when Premier Aberhart announced a swom into office next Tuesday.

William Aberhart, the Calgary High School teacher, who swept his province last week as leader of the Social Credit Party, announced his cabinet slate last night. The men will take over the government of the province next Tuesday, after the decision of office before Lieutenant-Governor Walsh at Edmonton. The final administration ceremonies will be by defeated at the polls, resigned two days after the election.

The new cabinet will form Alberta's government:

Premier and Min. Consell and Minister of Education—William Aberhart, Calgary.

Attorney-General —John W. Hugill, Calgary.

Minister of Agriculture, Trade and Industry — William N. Chant, Cardston.

Minister of Lands and Mines—C. C. Ross, Calgary.

Minister of Public Works, Railways and Telephones—W. A. Fallow, Vermilion.

Minister of Health—Dr. W. W. Cross, Hanna.

Provincial Treasurer and Minister of Municipal Affairs— Charles Cockroft, Edmonton.

Provincial Secretary—E. C. Manning, Calgary.

Open Probe Soon.

At the same time he announced his choice, Aberhart said he would open an investigation into Alberta finances as soon as the new cabinet is sworn into power next Tuesday.

It will be necessary to find seats for two of the new ministers, Aberhart and C. C. Ross of Calgary. It is expected they will run in the Okotoks-High River and Ross in some northern district.

It will be a tyro government, not one of the Ministers ever sitting in a Legislature, and only one in a Cabinet. In fact, not one of the Social Credit candidates ever sat in a legislature before, a record for Canada.

Asked about the general condition of the Alberta Treasury, Aberhart made the following statement, based on his investigations in Edmonton:

Statement Made

"From a general survey, I have every reason to believe that a problem is before me. Upon careful analysis I am satisfied that every government can bring the province to its feet. We are determined to carry out in its credit and meet all obligations.

"I have been very much impressed with the fact the people of the province and especially the City of Edmonton) are cognizant of the difficulties that lie before them and their confidence in the new government is very helpful and encouraging. Immediate steps will be taken to investigate the whole financial situation and the cabinet will be sworn in on Tuesday."

The time of the Inauguration ceremony next Tuesday is 2.30 p.m. M.S.T., (3.30 p.m. E.D.T.)

Earlier in the week Premier Reid, whose United Farmer Government was swept from power, announced a temporary shut-down in redeeming provincial saving certificates.

Dividend Not in Money

Aberhart's scheme for a Social Credit platform. He promised $25 monthly to every man and woman in the province, not in money but in non-negotiable "credit certificates"—a dividend on the national wealth. On the other hand, the $10,000,000 monthly will be withdrawn from the credit stream by a turnover tax, described as a method of increment levy. The object is to increase the purchasing power of the people and provide them with the necessities of life without stepping up prices. The same plan in the Aberhart platform is a price control system, to be set up by a board of experts.

Aberhart has stated it will be 15 or 18 months before the first dividend is paid. He has declared that through price-books, like bank-use. Every month, the book will be presented to a government bank, the house where a credit of $25 will be written in. The banks will be able to pay it out but, because it will be non-negotiable, the individual must present the certificate to the clearing house and secure a credit in return. In this manner, the credit will circulate.

Tax So Every Deal

The proposed dividend will be more piecemeal. A tax or levy will be made on every transaction. When a farmer sells a bushel of wheat, will pay a tax which will be collected by the local baker. Aberhart has estimated he will collect 6 cents, when a bushel of wheat is processed into bread.

To all his campaigning, Aberhart has stressed he will not confiscate wealth or destroy individual initiative. He promises not to repudiate debts or damage the financial integrity of Alberta. On the contrary, he has promised to pay 100 cents on every dollar of debt and will use the power of the government to see that others follow the example of the province.

Two Britishers in Maple Leaf Party Praise Local Product

What was the first and one of the most pleasing impressions at least two members of the Maple leaf party now in this city received on their entry to Belleville.

Not the beautiful tree shaded streets; not the friendly welcome that has been so audibly and repeatedly commented upon. Not even the hum and bustle of the chief manufacturing plants which were observed.

The thing that struck us most forcibly was the quality of Belleville bread. The Dutch Quisine supplied us with the best bread for breakfast this morning that we have tasted since we entered Canada, declared Mr. Charles Inns, London, England, and head of the large chain of "Purus Bakeries," which is the result of the breadth of the British Isles.

"This bread, which I found out later was baked by the Canada Bread bakeries—I took pains even to learn the man's name—was just bread. It wasn't a mixture of flour and sweetening that we have been offered at other places, and we highly enjoy it for our meals. If I had known of such bread sooner I would have had some sent on to the next stop," stated Mr. Inns.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

At last I found Khalid, and asked him to call off the Rualla raid. He threw this cool in the face of my peasantry, Hesrier work, perhaps, by to the eastward, to chase a rumour had passed across our plain that Deras was empty, and Trad, the head of the Abu Tayi, with the best of the Anazeh, had ridden off to Damascus. I feared a reverse to him, since there must still be Turks in the place, and more struggling to get away by the railway and through the Irbid Hills. Indeed, Khalid's own people, when the raid as delayed in Remtha; had lost contact with his enemy, and drawn off a fighting rearguard yet to follow.

I wanted Khalid to support his brother. After an hour or two of shouting his remarks drew in the winds, hundreds of horsemen and camel-men had rallied to him. On his way to Deras he met Nasir through and over several detachments of Turks in the open think, and arrived to find Trad in secure possession. He had won through in the night twilight, taken the station at a gallop, jumping trenches and wires, and then swept on to establish elements which still tried to resist.

With local help the Rualla plundered the camp, especially finding the Turkish Secretly hospitals and houses whose flaming roofs impertified their fired; then the stores of the nights in which mansion went, crazy, when death seemed impossible, however many died to the right and left, and when discovery only became toys to bread and throw away.

Sheikh Saad passed a troubled evening of alarms and shots and shouts, with threatenings from the peasantry to murder the prisoners, an added price of Talial and his village. The active Sheikhs were out in force, and their and their absence with their retainers deprived the Arab camp of its experienced chiefs and of its eyes and ears. Sleeping Turks were bayoneted and killed in the blood thirst of the afternoon or killing, and Nasir and Khalid had to spend the night in what had to strain every nerve in keeping peace.

Nasir left in after midnight and found Trad's messengers just arrived from Deras. Nasir left to join them. I had wished to sleep, for this was the crucial night, but my mind would not let me feel how tired my body was, so about two in the morning, I mounted a third camel and splashed out towards Deras, down the Tafas track again, to windward of the dark village.

Nuri Said and his staff were riding the same road in advance of their mounted infantry, and our parties, burned together till the half-light came. Then my impatience and the cold would not let me travel horse pace any longer, so I left my camel—the grand, rebellious Baha—and she hastened herself out against the field, racing my wearied followers for mile upon mile. The desert strides like an engine, so that I entered Deras quite alone in the full dawn.

CHAPTER XXXV.

BOUNDING THE BRITISH

Nasir was at the Mayor's house, arranging a military governor, and I joined him and the Acting Governor of the place; I supplemented his knowledge with grants over the pumps and engine sheds and when remained of tool shops or stores. By an hour or talk I took up publicly a programme of what the Arabs could reasonably do and they were not to lose hold. Poor Nasir arrived in bewilderment.

I inquired about General Bartow. A man just ridden in from the West told us he had been shot on by the English, as they deployed to attack Deras, and he questioned if those who were left, hurt me.

Sleep would not come, so before the Turks in Stirling and my drivers, and we four climbed into the Ford cars, filled up with petrol and set out for Damascus, along the first road which was free from the French railway, whose old ballast pits and cuttings had been made by the English, as they deployed to attack Deras, and I

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

He opened an envelope and produced an official Records Office portrait; the face of a coon-looking, balding man, many years younger, barely recognisable as Selby.

"What are these?" asked Sonia, pointing to some cards wrapped in tissue paper.

"Selby's finger-prints. The only marks that don't change with the years; and can't be disguised. Like to see 'em?"

Sonia examined the cards with a thrill of interest. Finger-printing she knew had brought many a murderer. These were colossal; they seemed to be the thumb-balls of a giant negro, for they were photographic enlargements many times magnified, every line and whorl standing out sharply in black.

"I never thought fingers could look so hideous. Would they print mine that way, if I got on the records?" asked Sonia.

"Just like that," replied Howe. "While we're about it, here is Sam Barber's portrait, too." He unwrapped a second package.

It was Barber's dark face, to the life, that looking up at them from the table; a recent C.I.D. portrait; to Sonia it seemed that she saw it again peering in at her through the window at the inn.

"Could you get me a copy of these finger-prints, Selby? They're fascinating. I'd like to have them just as a souvenir," said Sonia. "I'll trade you Brian's snap-shot for them; a fair bargain, isn't it?"

Howe's eyes flickered as he looked at her with a queer smile.

"That would be a bit irregular. But—I'm having some copies made, and I'll see what I can do for you." He wrapped up Barber's portrait. "Oh—by the way; here's something that turned up after you left us," he ate the mine this morning. My lads found it buried deep in the mud in the old shed. What would you say is left?"

He laid on the table a little broken ring of nickelled metal, crushed flat, with a fragment of a broken glass sticking in it.

"Say, That's the lens-cap from a cheap pocket-torch," said Brian. "It slipped off, of course, and got trodden off! That was in the old mine shed!"

"Far. Who's torch would you say?"

"Barber's of course. Barber, up by the dark-pound clicked a torch to get a look at his watch; it gave very little light—Ben the shepherd saw it, so . . . Sam had lost the lens in the shed; nothing left but the little bulb."

"O.K. Mr. Chalmers. You'll make a sleuth yet."

"Barber's you think?" said Sonia.

"Barber's, I do think. Mr. Chalmers, your young lady doesn't let much pass her either, but here's something she missed this morning, perhaps through being in such a hurry to get and join you. I don't mind showing you."

Howe unrolled a bandanna handkerchief, and laid on the table three little rough porous stones of the same stone shale, dark grey, but tinged with a darker dull brown.

"See that stone?"

"Iron-ore stain," said Brian. "I could tell it! I tested it."

"The divisional doctor'll test it; not that I need any test. That's blood."

"Blood? Where did those stones come from?"

Howe nodded to Sonia.

"Near by where you and I were standing at the edge. On the path in the mine gully, below the shed just about where we made the shot bullet was fired from. These stones took a bit of flinging. I wouldn't have found 'em if it hadn't been for you.

"Blood was spilled there; plenty of it, I should say. The rain washed it clear, but the stones prove that there'd be a lot of water runnin' down that path, more than you'd expect to find any traces left. Most of the stones there are hard limestone and grit, that would wash clean as slate. But here an' there you get bits of this soft shaley stone. When dry it's so porous that it soaks up any kind of stain an' holds it. Same as these bits were done. I've had them out from among the grit and rubble on the path—rain, you see, didn't wash this out. Blood is like sweet sawdust to the hard-set things to get rid of, once it gets a hold."

"So we get our next link. Some one was wounded there, by the shed."

"So you told me," said Sonia.

"But who? Selby? Barber? Or—"

"Leave it at that for the present," said Howe, wrapping up the scraps of shale. "I think it over. They say spilled blood cries from the stones, you know. Or it whispers. When I know a little more, another fact or two, I'll shout. He looked at his watch and put it in his pocket. "Well, I'll be going."

"Then you think that Sam Barber—"

"Keep to Selby," said Howe. "The way, thing have gone, Selby looks a lot bigger in the Corfe case than Barber; I'm doubtful if they are going to find Barber. Concentrate Selby for me—"

"You're satisfied not only that Selby's living, but that you can bring it home to him?" persisted Sonia.

"I'm not satisfied with anything or anybody in this case," returned Howe, buttoning up his jacket. "Which sounds a bit ungrateful. Doesn't it? I'm not even satisfied with Deborah Selby, and I call me you're not, sir. The way she called you down just now was a bit trying on the nerve, I expect, you needn't worry; I don't need any teaching my job by parliamentals. Yet I'm not satisfied with my own theory, sir. The curtain is only waiting for Selby, dead or alive—and it won't, I hope, have to wait long. Goodbye Miss Nell, for the present."

"Are you going back to the mine?" exclaimed Sonia.

"No," said Howe, and before she could question him any further he went out.

On the drive outside the house, Howe gave no more than a glance at a car which was loaded up with the Selby baggage and effects waiting for the sunshine. He passed it and walked down toward the main road; before he reached the gates somebody rustled out of the shrubbery and intercepted him. It was Mrs. Selby, in hat and shawl. A pathetic, tragic figure.

"Sergeant," she said huskily, and Howe halted.

"Want to speak to you. Come out of sight," she whispered. Howe allowed her to beckon him into a recess among the bushes, though they were already alone. Mrs. Selby seemed too overcome to speak.

"Well?" said Howe. "Just off, are you? Where?"

"Going to Blake's Cottage—up the village. We'll be stayin' there."

"Oh. . . . Not intending to leave Kim's Elm, then?"

"No. We'll be wanted, won't we?" She hesitated. "Sergeant, there's something I must tell you. . . ."

"So I supposed," said Howe. "But you're rather late with it. There's still time to come across," he added gently, "if listening."

She hesitated again, and turned away. The tears were running down her cheeks.

"I got to speak" she said under her breath. "Will I ever see—him again—he's dead!"

"Dead!" said Howe. "Jim Selby dead? Now what makes you think that?"

"I know it—I can feel it! I was dreamin' of him last night. I saw his face, white . . . and red . . . and wet. Plain as I see you now. And he was tryin' to speak to me. Sayin'—I was to tell you something—"

"Come now," said Howe quietly. "Out that out, Sarah." His hand closed gently on her arm. "You didn't call me over to talk this sort of stuff. You wanted for me to tell me somethine about Coote's death . . . something that you know. I can guess what it is. You're thinkin' about Jim, and you're scared. Maybe you're right to be scared. But —to hold of yourself, Sarah Selby." He pulled her on the shoulder, "Come across with it! Do you care for you."

The woman's eyes were like the eyes of a hunted animal. But she seemed to find the big man's body comforting. He could sense the struggle in her mind, between fear and doubt, as she was trying to force herself to speech.

"I'm—I'm sure—" she said, and checked herself. "Not till tomorrow! I'll know then. I might be makin' an awful mistake, Sergeant. I'll see you tomorrow—"

"Tomorrow," said Howe, "may be too late. I'm warning you. It'll come out, for all you or any of you like you can do. The line's now. Think of Jim."

She looked around her fearfully.

"I darn't" she said under her breath. "Not here. Not to-morrow, Sergeant; can I come an' see you then privately? I give you my oath I'll come. Don't you come to me."

Howe controlled his exasperation; the woman was in state of terror.

"Very well," he said abruptly. "I'll be in my office ten to ten thirty; it's then or never. If you don't speak then, Lord help you."

He turned away, and passed out through the gate.

"These women" said Howe to himself. "They always think they can beat you."

He had learned much during the day. Selby there was still wide gap left in the puzzle of the Coote murder, but he believed that he had been on the brink of learning something vital if Sarah Selby had spoken. However, the police are taught patience. He had a watch on another suspect, Blakeham, watch set over Blake's Cottage, which was within a few minutes walk from the Ring O'Bells, as soon as he could get a telephone message from the station.

He was thinking of this, and of nothing else, when he was suddenly aware of a figure standing in the path before him. It was Mrs. Selby, who had slipped out of the house and followed him

TARZAN THE INVINCIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

"No!" cried Zora, as Zvei aimed at Romero, "disgust was wrong and so were you, but to shed blood—! The two of you shake hands and forget the matter." Romero hesitated, and then extended his hand. The Russian took it. "Let us forget it, Comrade," he said.

Little Nkima, frightened at these strange scenes and accents, swung away through the forest. He knew now more than ever that he must find his beloved Tarzan. In his pink palm, little Nkima held the fate of Africa, but he did not know it.

As he swung rapidly from limb to limb, he stopped, startled again by the voices of Tarmangani. "Not far to the camp now, Tony," said Wayne Colt, the American, marching at the head of his safari. "No, sir" said the Filipino. "Forget the 'sir' stuff," replied Colt. "We're both good Comrade now."

As their voices faded into the distance, from the foot of Nkima's tree came a sudden sound. It was a roar of recognition from Jad-bal-ja, the lion—Tarzan's friend. Quickly he leaped onto the mane of the great beast. Off they went into the jungle to find their beloved master.

BRITISH SPEED UP PRODUCTION

Aircraft Factories Adopt Schedule of 24 Hours

London, Aug. 31—(AP)— British aircraft factories adopted a 24-hour schedule to speed up production of fighting planes today. Meanwhile reports from Rome said Italy was concentrating air forces and submarines in Sicily, directly opposite the vital British naval base of Malta.

The air ministry sounded an urgent call for more pilots to operate 3,000 new machines. It was announced five new training camps will be established within six months, Sir Philip Sassoon, Under Secretary for Air, arranged to leave for a tour of factories throughout Britain to supervise the development.

Tobacco Exports

From January to June, 1935, Canada exported 6,102,448 pounds of leaf tobacco, 6,792,961 pounds of which went to the United Kingdom; 238,400 pounds to British Africa; 33,866 pounds to British West Indies; 11,580 pounds to Belgium, and 7,313 pounds to other foreign countries.

ERECT CAIRN TO SIMON NEWCOMB

Became Most Productive Astronomer of All Centuries

(By George C. Murray)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Wallace, N.S., Aug. 31.—(CP)— A cairn marking the birthplace of Simon Newcomb, the poor country boy who became "one of the most tries and all centuries," was unveiled near here in the presence of a distinguished gathering including Norman Armour, United States Minister to Canada.

Making his first public appearance since his appointment, the Minister yesterday said the historic friendship binding Canada and the United States was never closer nor firmer than at present.

"The problems confronting us are in very many cases similar," he proceeded, "springing from like conditions, social, climatic and economic. I hope you will agree with me in my feeling that we are confronting those problems with much the same spirit and determination to find a solution of them".

He paid tribute to the countless sons and daughters of Nova Scotia who contributed to the scientific, educational, commercial, and political life of his country and stressed the debt the United States owed this province for the services of Simon Newcomb.

"The story of how Newcomb was born in humble surroundings at Wallace Bridge, two miles from here, 100 years ago—the son of a teacher who walked barefoot to school, saving his shoes until he entered the class room —and how he ran away after serving two-year apprenticeship under a doctor at Salisbury, N.B., was told by Prof. George H. Henderson of Dalhousie University, speaking as a representa-

Comrades of "Iron Second" In Belleville for Re - Union

Will Parade to Cenotaph, Hold Banquet at The Armouries

Displaying that same comradeship that, welded them through all the major battles in France and Belgium during the Great War, veterans of the 2nd Infantry Battalion, C.E.F., who were arriving in this city today from points throughout the Dominion by train, bus and private car, were preparing to renew their annual convention being held in Belleville today the largest and most notable in the history of the unit.

Indications, at noon pointed to what is expected to be the most impressive gathering of members of the Belleville district since disbandment. After disbandment. Swelling the numbers of individuals who arrived during the day, a solid contingent of 100 or more, members from Toronto, Belleville Municipal Band, will parade to the cenotaph from Memorial Park, where a wreath will be laid in honour of departed comrades. Appropriate services of brief nature will accompany the placing of the wreath by the Rev. Chaplain-Major Beamish Payne. On the return to the Armouries the veterans will partake of an especially prepared luncheon held on the main floor. This will follow the official welcome to and the freedom of the city given them by Geo. O. Tice, included among the guests of honor.

The banquet which will be presided over by Major L. J. Gilmour, this city, chairman of the evening, will be addressed by Lt. General Sir Archibald McDonnell, K.C.M.G., C.B., D.S.O., Kingston, former Commander of the Canadian Corps Division and will be featured also with addresses by Brig.-General Garnet B. Hughes, D.S.O., Toronto; Lt.-Col. McLaughlin, former officer in command of the Battalion; Bowmanville; Lt.-Col. J. Winterbotham, Peterborough; Lt.-Col. F. Alexander, Toronto; Lt.-Col. F. Curry, Brockville; Lt.-Col. J. Chrysler, officer commanding the Governor General's Footguards, Lt.-Col. R. A. Ponton, this city, and others.

Business Meeting

Following the banquet a brief business meeting will be held, after which the remainder of the evening will be devoted to the reunion proper and the following out of a well arranged program of entertainment.

On Sunday morning veterans will leave Belleville for Bowmanville where memorial church services will be held. It is in Bowmanville that the official Battalion colors are kept.

onto alone is expected to arrive here by train 44 for this evening. An estimate given by Sgt.-Major Wm. Jack, D.C.M. and bar, M., M. and bar of this city, and Chairman of the committee in charge of the convention, placed the expected attendance at between 250 and 400 veterans.

This afternoon in the flag decorated armouries the new arrivals were greeting various comrades departed since the last convention one year ago. Registrations were also being taken as fast as the visitors arrived. Many will be little official business transacted until the early evening.

ITALY WILL CALL 200,000 TROOPS

Mussolini to be Prepared For an Eventuality

LONDON, Aug. 31. — (AP)— A Reuters dispatch from Rome, Italy, said yesterday that Mussolini, in speaking of his troops, 200-000 more troops will be called to the colors "in case of need to meet any hostility that might arise".

The dispatch said know once again that while there is talk so absurd and preposterous as sanctions, we will not give up a single soldier, a single sailor, or a single aviator but will keep all of the 500,000 men now peace of all armed forces of the nation," the dispatch quoted Il Duce.

Concluding the 200-word speech, Mussolini was quoted as saying: "You have given during the last few days evidence of the very high morale with which you are inspired, making it certain that if tomorrow the country calls you to accomplish harder tasks, you will undertake them with enthusiasm, courage and resolution, determined to the end."

THREE KILLED AS BOATS COLLIDE

Bodies Brought to Portsmouth by British Battleship

Portsmouth, Eng., Aug. 31 (AP)— The 29,000 ton battleship Ramillies today landed the bodies of three German sailors, killed in a collision between the warship and the little German steamship Eisenach during a gale in the channel last night.

The Ramillies arrived tonight harbors members of the crew of the North German Lloyd steamer, picked up after the crash. The Ramillies was not damaged save that the Eisenach was towed stern first into Dover, badly damaged about the bow and riding low in the water. Thugs had steamed all-night the night to keep off the dreaded Goodwin sands in the teeth of the gale.

North German Lloyd officials said two of the dead seamen were engine room hands on the Eisenach, named Jagow and Hinrich. They said another sailor was missing (he was presumed to be)the third victim carried by the Ramillies and added an unnamed oil-room hand was badly injured.

The Eisenach's ship's dog was also among the rescued brought by the big British warship.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"Every Night At Eight"

Excellent Holiday Attractions Combine Romance, Comedy, Songs and Adventure.

To those who attend the Belle Theatre today or Monday (Labor Day), a treat in fun entertainment will be their good fortune, as the management has arranged an ideal two feature program that will be thoroughly enjoyed both by the adults and children. It truly is a show for the whole family.

The first feature, "Every Night At Eight", a Walter Wanger-Paramount Special musical comedy drama, featuring George Raft, Alice Faye, Patsy Kelly and the Three Radio Rogues will be presented each afternoon at 4.30 and each evening commencing at 8.30.

Directed by Raoul Walsh, the film pictures the hectic adventures of a feminine singing trio who fight their way from amateur night tryouts to National fame. Frances Langford, a new screen find and a former N.B.C. singing star, has a splendid and important role in the production. Audiences are taken back of the scenes to the inside of a radio studio during an amateur hour. A major portion of the film's action is furnished by the Three Radio Rogues, popular radio broadcasters.

Miss Langford, diminutive star of the air waves, plays one of a singing trio who rises to fame on the radio with Alice Faye and Patsy Kelly. George Raft is cast as an orchestra leader who manages the girls' careers, lives and, romances.

The production boasts six popular song numbers, including "I'm in the Mood for Love", "Hot, It Easy", "Then You've Never Been Blue", written by Jimmy McHugh, James McHugh and Ted Fio Rito.

The West, one of the most colorful spots for many individual deeds of daring in its early days is the locale of the first Clarence E. Mulford story to come to the screen, "Hopalong Cassidy", the paramount Western special which is also being presented at the Belle today and Monday. Starring three days day at 2.55, 7.25 and again at 9.55.

William Boyd plays the title role and is supported by a host of excellent players including Jimmy Ellison and Paula Stone in the leading roles and Robert Warwick, George Hayes, Kenneth Thomson and Charles Middleton.

"Hopalong Cassidy" is based on one of the Mulford "Best Sellers", and deals with the rivalry of cattle kings and open range war brought about by hustlers in the days when the law was carried out by a six-gun.

"Sensational horsemanship, exciting gun battles, red-blooded action and heart stirring drama are all combined to make "Hopalong Cassidy" an outstanding western attraction.

Starting Sunday Midnight Show.

The Belle management is ushering in their new season productions with the presentation Sunday night commencing at 12.05 of the first big hit "Call of the Wild", Jack London's greatest adventure story!

The leading characters Young and Jack Oakie, well known stars, are cast together for the first time in the leading characters of the story and Oakie comes through with a smash.

He is in the type of role that first made him famous! Red-blooded, virile, adventurous. We urge you to be among the first to thrill to the flaming love drama of the new season. Doors open at 11.30 p.m. Tickets now on sale.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Flame Within"

Season's Best Picture to Inaugurate Fall Season at Capitol

The unofficial new movie season will be ushered in at the Capitol with a gala list of screen attractions that are considered among the outstanding productions of the year.

Starting with a Special Midnite Preview on Sunday evening at 12.01 (Labor Day morning) of the latest musical comedy of Joe E. Brown, called "Bright Lights".

For the regular holiday program on Monday the management offers the highly successful drama, "The Flame Within", in which the popular Ann Harding gives her finest performance. In her support is Herbert Marshall, the screen's most popular leading man, also features O'Sullivan and Lewis Stoward and Henry Stephenson. "The Flame Within" plays Monday and Tuesday only.

On Tuesday, September 4th, the long-awaited engagement of the universally acclaimed Cruze Movie, "Ruggles of Red Gap" occurs. "Love Me Forever" will start, for a limited two days run.

Other previews will be shown for three days only.

For the Midnite Preview on Sunday night, "Bright Lights", with Joe E. Brown, ably supported by Ann Dvorak, Patricia Ellis, Dee Parmelee and William Gargan, will provide a hilarious laughs that this funnel-mouthed comedian has manufactured.

"Bright Lights" is a hilarious comedy of "back stage" with songs and dances and all the fun of the fair of a theatrical troupe. Scores of beautiful chorus girls appear in typical and fascinating dance numbers. Joe himself sings, dances and does acrobatic stunts with the famous tumblers, the Maxellos.

Doors for the Midnite show open at 11.30 and the performance will start at 12.05 Monday morning. Final show will be at 9.55 p.m. Tuesday evening with the concluding performance. Both previews will be given to drawn large crowds to the Capitol. "The Awakening of Jim Burke" and "Cabin in the Cotton" in which the inimitable Alice Brady is a veritable riot.

Smythe Will Not Part With Clancy

Toronto, Aug. 31—(CP)— Conn Smythe, Manager of Toronto Maple Leafs announced today the club would not sell or trade "King" Clancy, veteran defenceman, at any time unless Clancy himself was convinced the change was for his betterment.

Smythe said the Leafs were anxious to acquire Eddie Goodfellow of Detroit and Hershey Bears money: Manager Jack Adams had out for Clancy as part of the deal so negotiations were dropped. Clancy wished to stay here.

SLIPPERY ROAD ACCIDENT CAUSE

Parties Amicably Settle The Matter of Damages

Considerable commotion followed a serious motor accident that was committed at the corner of George and Bridge Sts. about 5.00 p.m. last night, when a motor car driven by Russell White, 252 George St., collided practically head on with another motor car being driven by George Andrews, 10 Harriett St. Upon the arrival of P. C. Frank, who investigated, the vehicles were still somewhat badly damaged.

According to the stories related by the parties implicated, when the matter was reported to the police, Mr. Andrews was driving westerly on East Bridge St. with only the cowl lights of his automobile lighted. Mr. White was proceeding in the opposite direction and assured the police he did not observe the oncoming Andrews car as he turned left to proceed northward on George St., from the fact the White car struck the left front fender of the Andrews' vehicle, both cars becoming incapacitated and skidding some distance. The wet slippery pavement is attributed as the cause of the accident.

Mr. Andrews' car was badly damaged during the accident, the left front fender, wheel, tire, front bumper, axle and mudguard being all damaged. The White car also was badly damaged about the radiator and front fenders. The matter of damages was left in the hands of the two parties concerned and amicably settled.

Sister of Dead Flyer Waited at Airport

Wichita, Kas., Aug. 31 (AP) — The sister for whom he not seen for 20 years waited in vain at the airport here Friday for Cecil Allen.

Allen, was killed when his plane crashed shortly after the takeoff on the Neville Barfield-to-Cleveland race yesterday.

Mrs. Robert Young of Wichita was the waiting sister.

Horace Gillespie Mafeking Survivor

Edmonton, Aug. 31—In addition to K. H. McDonald, Edmonton's lone survivor of the relief of Mafeking, who proved a popular guest at Government House in honor of Lady Aberdeen, Fowell, heroic defender, at least one other survivor resides in central Alberta, Horace Gillespie of Lone Glade in the Provost district.

Mr. Gillespie had to be used to hard the guns as horses could not stand the forced march.

Mr. Gillespie, formerly of Plainfield, enlisted in the South African War from that municipality and is a brother of Mrs. E. J. Murray of Mr. Orvin Gillespie, both of Plainfield.

Ethiopian Priests Rally to Colors

Addis Ababa, Aug. 31 (AP)—Two hundred thousand Ethiopian priests assisted Emperor Haile Selassie this day of their willingness to march to battle with regular warriors to resist Italian invasion, Ethiopian legation here declared today.

Throughout the country the clergy was reported donning the garb of the person's support and exhorting his subjects to join in "Crusade" to repulse an attack not only against Ethiopia but also against the church.

The first reference of the battle cry was seen in the streets of the capital today with scores of priests wearing conical hats, drilling with rifles outside the cathedral.

The governor announced plans to use six powerful planes as Red Cross

Ad Drive Planned

KELVINATOR Corporation's 35 sales program, which will be the most aggressive in the company's history, will include the most extensive use of newspaper advertising ever planned, according to Stan C. Mitchell, director of advertising and sales promotion. "We believe that increased sales during next year will come most surely to those companies which do the best job of using the assistance of daily newspapers in presenting their stories to the buying public," Mr. Mitchell said.
